A NAUGHTY POLLY.

INOCULATED WITH BAD BOY TRAITS IT BREAKS UP A PRAYER MEETING.

"You don't want to buy a good parrot, do you?" said the bad boy to the grocery man, as he put his wet mittens on the top of the stove to dry, and kept his back to the stove so he could watch the grocery man and be prepared for a kick, if the man should remember the rotten egg sign that the boy put up in front of the grocery last week.

"Naw, I don't want no parrot. I had rather have a fool boy around than a parrot. But what's the matter with your ma's parrot? I thought she would not part with it for anything."

"Well, she wouldn't until Wednesday night, but now she says she will not have him around, and I may have half I can get for it. Ma has been away from home for a week, having a high old time in Chicago, going to theatres and things, and while she was gone I guess the hired girl or somebody learned the parrot some new things to say. A parrot that can only say 'Polly wants a cracker' don't amount to anything. What we need is new style parrots that can converse on the topics of the day, and say things original. Well, when ma came home I guess her conscience hurt her for the way she had been carrying on in Chicago, and so when she heard the basement of the church was being frescoed, she invited the committee to hold the Wednesday evening prayer meeting at our house. First, there were four people came, and ma asked pa to make a quorum, and pa said seeing he had two pair, he guessed he would stay in, and if ma would deal him a queen he would have a full hand. I don't know what pa meant, but he plays draw poker sometimes. Anyway, there was eleven people came including the minister, and after they had talked about the neighbors a spell, and ma had shown the women a new tidy she had worked for the heathen, with a motto on it which pa had taught her, 'a contrite heart beats a bob-tailed flush,' and pa had talked to the men about a religious silver mine he was selling stock in, which he advised them as a friend to buy for the glory of the church, they all went in the back parlor and the minister led in prayer. He got down on his knees right under the parrot's cage, and you'd a dide to see Polly hang on to the wires of the cage with one foot and drop an apple core on the minister's head. Ma shook her handkerchief at Polly, and looked sassy, and Polly got up on the perch and as the minister got warmed up and began to raise the roof, Polly said, 'O, dry up.' The minister had his eyes shut, but he opened one of them a little and looked at pa. Pa was tickled at the parrot, but when the minister looked at pa, as though it was him that was making irreverent remarks, pa was mad. The minister got to the 'Amen' and Polly shook himself and said, 'What you giving us?' and the minister got up and brushed the bird seed off his knees, and he looked mad. I thought ma would sink with mortification, and I was sitting on a piano stool, looking as pious as a Sunday-school superintendent the Sunday before he skips out with the bank funds, and ma looked at me as though she thought it was me that had been tampering with the parrot. Gosh, I never said a word to that parrot, and I can prove it by my chum. Well, the minister asked one of the sisters if she wouldn't pray, and she wasn't engaged, so she said with pleasure, and she kneeled down, but she corked herself, cause she got one knee on a cast iron dumb bell that I had been practicing with. She said 'O my,' in a disgusted sort of a way, and then she began to pray for the reformation of the youth of the land, and asked for the spirit to descend on the household, and particularly on the boy that was such a care and anxiety to his parents, and just then Polly said, 'O, pull down your vest.' Well, you'd a dide to see that woman look at me. The parrot cage was partly behind the window curtain, and they couldn't see it, and she thought it was me. She looked at me as though she was wondering why she didn't hit me with a poker, but she went on, and Polly said, 'Wipe off your chin,' and then the lady got through and got up, and told ma it must be a great trial to have an idiotic child, and then ma she was mad and said it wasn't half so bad as it was to be a kleptomaniac, and then the woman got up and said she wouldn't stay any longer, and pa said to me to take that parrot out doors, and that seemed to make them good natured again. Ma said to take the parrot and give it to the poor. I took the cage and pointed my finger at the parrot and it looked at the woman and said, 'Old catamaran,' and the woman tried to look pious and resigned, but she couldn't. As I was going out the door the parrot ruffled up his feathers and said, 'Demmit, set 'em up,' and I hurried out with the cage for fear he would say something bad, and the folks all held up their hands and said it was scandalous. Say, I wonder if a parrot can go to hell with the rest of the community. Well, I put the parrot in the woodshed, and after they all had their innings, except pa, who acted as umpire, the meeting broke up, and ma says it's the last time she will have that gang at her house.—Peck's Sun.

James Treglown, the murderer of Minnie Chegwin, who has been sentenced to be hanged at Dover, N. J., March 21 (Spy Wednesday), has asked the Rev. J. B. Faulks, of Morristown, and the Rev. J. R. McCauley, of Port Oram, to be his spiritual advisers. Treglown has begun to realize his situation and has become sullen and morose. He eats but little, and refuses to speak about his crime.

Garret S. Boice, the condemned bank official of Jersey City, was at the time of his arrest Assistant Superintendent of the Greenville Reformed Sunday School. He tendered his resignation when lodged in jail, but the trustees of the church would not allow their faith in his integrity to be shaken by the stories of his dishonesty, and did not act on the resignation until Monday night of last week after the sentence. The trustees then promptly accepted the resignation without comment.

A force of Erie laborers, who are engaged in removing an embankment near Paterson, came, the other day, upon a nest of thirty-four snakes, which were shoveled out in a torpid state. Most of them were garter snakes, but there were several good sized black snakes among them. The locality where the snakes were found has long been a famous place for them, and in former years, when spring opened, and they came out of their winter quarters, as many as fifty have been killed there.

STEAMPIPE PARALYSIS.

THE REMARKABLE SYMPTOMS OF A BRIDE ON HER WEDDING TOUR.

"Well, you ought to go down to Chicago some day on my train, if you want to see some fun," said a Western conductor. "I think it was last Tuesday, a couple got in the parlor car and took two seats, and I knew they were just married by the way they asked if there wasn't any way to get the chairs any nearer together. It seemed to pain them to think they had got to sit so far apart all the way to Chicago. They might have been married the day before, for all I know, but they were recent, I could tell that. It was pretty cold that morning, and when we pulled out, the car was about half full. To tell the truth I watched the wedding party with a good deal of interest. I think it is natural, don't you, for a fellow that hasn't been married any for fifteen or twenty years to sort of have a feeling that it is good to be near a new married couple, and watch their modest, pretty ways, and see them look taffy at each other?"

The reporter said he had never noticed any particular feeling of interest in wedding couples, and told the conductor to go on.

"Well, we had got about half way to Racine, and he was putting a arm around her, and she was looking love into his eyes that spoke more plainly than words, and her lips were sort of puckering up and pouting, and looking as though she would like to kiss him right in the mouth. Her eyes were these blue ones, not exactly violet, but a cross between violet and pansy, that twinkle and laugh and go through a fellow and clinch on the other side. These eyes that—"

"O, go on and never mind her cross eyes between a pansy," said the reporter, who was getting nervous, he couldn't tell why.

"Well, bless her eyes," said the conductor, who seemed to be thinking away back of a pair of eyes that at some time had made him feel so kitteny that he could punch all the figures out of a thousand mile ticket before he could tell what he was about, "all of a sudden she turned pale, and her eyes had a far-away look, and her breath came short, and she motioned him to her side and whispered to him. He was scared in a minute, and he bent down his head and said, 'O, darling, I hope not,' and then he called me, and when I went up to punch his ticket he asked me if there was a doctor on the train. I told him there wasn't any, though one of the brakemen used to work for a veterinary surgeon. Then he said I must telegraph to Racine to have the best doctor in town at the depot. I was scared and looked at her, and I thought she was dying. Her eyes rolled, and it seemed to me she was on her last trip. He kept whispering to her, and finally I asked him what her symptoms were, and he said she was paralyzed on one side. She said it seemed as though one side was burning up, while the other side was cold as ice. Well, I ain't no slouch around sick folks myself, because I have had a good deal of sickness around in the last hundred years, and I told him we must rub her and get up a circulation. He said he was not much acquainted with her, and did not like to suggest any such familiarity, but I told him that it was no time to wait for an introduction, and he took hold of her foot, the one next the window, and I—"

At this point the conductor burst out laughing, and the newspaper man thought he would never quit, so as to go on with the story.

"Well," says he, as he got over his fit, "I just haw-hawed, and they both looked at me as if I was crazy. The man looked mad and the poor little bride looked as though she would like to see me killed before she died. I pointed to her foot, and says I, 'Madame, if you will take your stocking away from that coil of steam pipe you will get over your paralysis and live to a green old age.' The she saw what ailed her and she moved away from the steam pipe, and in about two minutes she was as chipper as any bride you ever saw and I went into the baggage car and just kicked myself. I didn't bother them much all the way to Chicago, but I'll bet if I should meet that bride a hundred years from now, as an angel in the choir of the New Jerusalem, and we were flying around there, and I should think of that case of steampipe paralysis I should bust right out laughing, if I broke up the concert. But don't put this in the paper, because they are due back here next week, and he may be a fighter for all I know."—Milwaukee Sun.

WORKING A BAR-TENDER.

THE DIPLOMACY OF IMPECUNIOUS CUSTOMERS TO RAISE A DRINK.

There is probably no class of people that have more tricks played on them than saloon keepers. People who want a drink and want it bad, will study up more ways to get it without paying than they would study to get a meal. A stranger went into a saloon recently, and after looking at the bar-tender for a moment, asked him if his name wasn't Murphy. The bar-tender, taken off his guard, said it was, when the man asked where his sister Kate was, and on being told that she was married and where she lived, he said he must go and call on Kate, as he used to attend school with her, and he had a message for her from a young lady schoolmate, who was now married to a railroad superintendent at St. Paul. The fellow talked about old times, and was so complimentary to Kate that her brother asked the friend of his sister to take a drink, and he took three or four, and then went off to call on Kate. That was the last seen of him and when the bar-tender saw his sister, and asked about her friend, she had never heard of such a person. He had become familiar with the family history of Murphy through a drunken companion, and had loaded himself with the information to get a drink and got it. Perhaps some day Murphy will meet the friend of his sister and choke him till his tongue hangs out.

It is amusing to see a man who wants a drink pretty bad, work a bar-tender. When any calamity occurs, the bum who is after a drink is the first to tell the story in a saloon, and he gets a drink. A tramp was at the police station when the news came in, a few weeks ago, that a woman had killed her three children. He went right to a saloon, after getting the particulars, and actually looked pale, as he stood up at the bar and said he had just witnessed a sight that froze his blood, and then he went on and recited the horrible details of the chopping to pieces of the children, and how he happened along and gave the alarm, and he became faint at the recital of the bloody scene, and the horrified bar-tender handed him a drink. All he had seen of the tragedy was a policeman who said a woman had killed her three children, but the news, and his method of utilizing it, got him what he thought did him more good than a suit of clothes.

Opposite the criminal court in Chicago is a row of saloons, and when one bar-tender gets beat he steers the beat into the rest. The other day a fairly dressed man came in and asked for a drink, and after disposing of it, he leaned over the bar and confidentially told the bar-keeper that he had no money, but he expected a friend in from Peoria at three o'clock and would drop in and pay. He was too respectable looking to thump, and so the bar-tender just looked at him in disgust and he went out. A little after three o'clock the man came in with a friend, and with his thumb and finger in his vest pocket he said, smiling, "I suppose that you thought I would not come around again." The bar-tender smiled and said, "Sir, I knew you would come back. I can tell a gentleman when I see one, and I said to myself, that gentleman is good for all he calls for." The man thanked the bar-tender for his confidence and called for the drinks, and he and his friend took good, square, every-day sort of full glasses, and after he had wiped his mouth and asked what brand of whiskey that was, and said they would take one more, he said to the bar-tender, "I came in to tell you my friend from Peoria did not arrive. I expect he will be here at six o'clock, when I will come in and demonstrate to you that your confidence is well placed." He got outside the door just as an empty bottle struck the door casing and the maddest bar-tender in Chicago washed the glasses and swore.—Milwaukee Sun.

A WONDERFUL TIMBER REGION.

Quoting from the Colonies and India, says Chambers' Journal: We learn that in the far West, in a lovely country which once belonged to England, but was afterward ceded to the United States, there grows the finest body of timber in the world. Fir and pine and oak and cedar of unsurpassed quality and practically unlimited in quantity, clothe the mountains, overhang the rivers and shadow the plains of the Puget Sound district in Washington Territory. On a moderate estimate it is calculated that this region will yield the enormous and unimaginable quantity of 160,000,000,000 feet of valuable timber. The trees attain a remarkable development of both height and beauty. The yellow fir is frequently found growing to a height of 250 feet; the white cedar to 100 feet, with a girth of over 60 feet; the white oak to 70 feet in height, while ordinary sized specimens of the sugar pine yield from 6,000 to 8,000 feet of lumber each. For long after its discovery this marvelous store of timber remained undisturbed, its primeval quietness unbroken by the sound of the woodman's axe. But in 1851 a sawmill was built on Puget Sound, and thenceforward continually increasing inroads were made upon the forest, until to-day no fewer than fifteen such mills are at work upon it. The largest of these has a cutting capacity of 200,000 feet per diem. During the year 1881 the export of lumber from Puget Sound amounted to nearly 174,176,700 feet, valued at nearly $2,200,000; and it is calculated that since the establishment of the first saw mill about 2,500,000,000 feet have been cut. Yet, in spite of this great tax upon it, we are told that the forest remains for the most part in virgin condition, except for a short distance from the banks of the streams and estuaries.

"The Begum of Bhopal is pronounced one of the cleverest women in India." The chewgum of Vassar is the smartest girl of Dutchess county.

A man without legs was recently arrested for stealing a pair of overshoes at Little Rock, Ark. We wish to mention that he had no feet either; which makes his kleptomania all the more remarkable.

There are 189 newspapers published in New Jersey, of which 26 are daily, 152 weekly and 10 semi-weekly, tri-weekly, bi-weekly, &c. Essex and Monmouth counties head the list, with 18 each; Mercer comes next with 13; Hudson 12; Burlington and Camden 11 each; Cumberland, Middlesex and Passaic 10 each. Cape May and Ocean have the smallest number, 5 each. These figures are from the report of the Secretary of the New Jersey Editorial Association, made in January last. Since then several papers have been discontinued and several new ones established.

New Jersey Finances.

The annual report of the State Controller Anderson contains some very valuable statistics, showing the growth in material wealth of the State and the burden of taxation. The only complete table the Controller has deemed it necessary to prepare is that showing the value of taxable property in the State. These "ratables" reached an aggregate of $538,937,536. Every county in the State, with the single exception of Burlington, shows an increase over the returns for last year. Burlington's taxables have depreciated $682,298. The net increase over last year in taxable values throughout the State is $8,014,654. The following table shows the valuations as returned by the Assessors of the several counties and the increase in each:

Counties.	Valuation.	Increase.
Atlantic	$1,742,646	$165,450
Bergen	10,170,432	72,851
Burlington	23,216,815	*119,298
Camden	19,232,152	105,542
Cape May	3,635,000	109,752
Cumberland	12,290,040	89,940
Essex	109,434,080	340,000
Gloucester	14,621,550	248,200
Hudson	93,412,993	1,500,000
Hunterdon	21,256,611	227,440
Mercer	30,565,212	674,202
Middlesex	18,486,700	160,700
Monmouth	23,700,000	1,797,000
Morris	31,070,317	29,770
Ocean	3,324,447	205,449
Passaic	29,168,270	1,214,923
Salem	14,649,770	152,791
Somerset	16,600,000	30,000
Sussex	10,025,815	125,256
Union	24,120,000	214,000
Warren	18,714,074	12,319

* Decrease.

The State has no record of the ratables earlier than 1866. The total valuation that year was $448,474,072. The increase of valuations since that time has been, in round numbers, $87,000,000. The taxable values reached their maximum, however, in 1874, when the ratables aggregated over $619,000,000. In 1875 they began to decline and kept on declining until 1878, when they showed an appreciation. A comparison of the table of ratables shows that, as compared with 1876, valuations have fallen off in Bergen County $2,000,000; Hunterdon, $4,000,000; Middlesex, $2,000,000; Ocean, $1,000,000; Salem, $2,000,000; Warren, $4,000,000, and Sussex shows the surprising decline of $6,000,000 from its $16,000,000 valuation in 1866. Morris has not advanced a step, and Atlantic is $500,000 behind. Passaic, which has this year nearly doubled her valuation of $16,000,000 in 1866, shows the largest proportionate increase.

The detail statements of their financial condition, as supplied by the various town and county officers, show the burden of debt beneath which the communities of the Commonwealth are staggering. From 13 counties a total county indebtedness of $5,553,874 is reported. Camden, Morris, Passaic, and Sussex Counties have as yet made no returns. The officers of Atlantic, Burlington, Cumberland and Ocean Counties make no mention of indebtedness in their returns, and those counties are probably free from debt. The bonded and floating indebtedness of the cities and towns makes a total of $64,877,574. This, added to the county indebtedness, makes a total debt of $70,431,441 on the part of the several communities, which is a large amount to owe on ratables of $536,000,000. Most of the local debts have been accumulated by the cities. The debt of the principal cities, with the value of the taxable property in each, is as follows:

Name.	Debt.	Valuation.
Camden	$1,191,800	$11,531,950
Newark	11,313,000	91,295,000
Orange	302,000	4,600,000
Bayonne	922,000	8,108,000
Hoboken	1,310,032	14,982,000
Jersey City	17,097,450	60,000,000
Trenton	982,960	15,023,569
New Brunswick	1,350,800	3,500,000
Passaic	167,500	3,890,010
Paterson	1,251,500	20,570,000
Elizabeth	5,380,938	12,546,307
Plainfield	55,000	4,500,000
Rahway	1,593,199	2,435,200

Of these cities Elizabeth, where the indebtedness is 40 per cent. of the taxable values, and Rahway, where the percentage is larger, are both bankrupt. New Brunswick, with a debt representing 30 per cent. of her ratables, and Jersey City with a debt representing 25 per cent of her ratables, making the next poorer showing.

New Made Laws.

SPEER'S PORT GRAPE WINE

Used in the principal Churches for Communion purposes.

Excellent for Ladies and Weakly Persons and the Aged.

Excellent for Females and Weakly Persons.

Speer's Port Grape Wine FOUR YEARS OLD.

THIS CELEBRATED NATIVE WINE is made from the juice of the Oporto Grape, raised in this country. Its invaluable

Tonic and Strengthening Properties

are unsurpassed by any other Native Wine. Being the pure juice of the Grape, produced under Mr. Speer's own personal supervision, its purity and genuineness are guaranteed. The youngest child may partake of its generous qualities, and the weakest invalid use it to advantage. It is particularly beneficial to the aged and debilitated, and suited to the various ailments that affect the weaker sex. It is in every respect A WINE TO BE RELIED ON.

SPEER'S P. J. Sherry.

The P. J. SHERRY is a wine of Superior Character, and partakes of the rich qualities of the grape from which it is made. For Purity, Richness, Flavor and Medicinal Properties, it will be found unexcelled.

SPEER'S P. J. Brandy.

This BRANDY stands unrivalled in this country being far superior for medicinal purposes.

IT IS A PURE distillation from the grape, and contains valuable medicinal properties.

It has a delicate flavor, similar to that of the grapes, from which it is distilled, and is in great favor among first-class families.

See that the signature of ALFRED SPEER, Passaic, N. J., is over the cork of each bottle.

POETRY.

LITTLE AH SID.

Little Ah Sid
Was a Chinese kid—
A cute little cuss, you'd declare,
With eyes full of fun,
And a nose that begun
Right up 'n the roots of his hair.

Jolly and fat
Was this frolicsome brat,
As he played through the long summer day,
And he braided his queue
As his father used to
In Chinaland, far, far away.

Once o'er a lawn
That Ah Sid played upon
A bumble bee flew in the spring;
"Melican butterfly!"
Said he with a winking eye,
"Me catchee and pull off um wing!"

Then with his cap
He struck it a rap—
This unsuspecting bee—
And put its remains
In the seat of his jeans
For a pocket there had the Chinee.

Down on the green
Sat the little marine
In a style that was strangely demure,
And said with a grin
That was brimful of sin
"Me muchee like butterfly sure."

Little Ah Sid
Was only a kid,
Nor could you expect him to guess
What kind of a bug
He was holding so snug
In the folds of his loose flowing dress.

"Ki-yi! Ki-yip-yi!"
Ah Sid cried, as he
Rose hurriedly from the spot.
"Ka-yi! Yuk-a-hoo!
Dam um Melican flea—
Um [illegible] belly much hot!"

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A LESSON IN ECONOMY.

Milly Barrington was only eighteen when she came to live at Holly Lodge. Very young to be married, said the gossips of the neighborhood; still younger to assume all the cares and responsibilities of the household. And there were not lacking divers doleful prophets, who declared, with eyes rolled up and mouths drawn down, that Mrs. Barrington never would "get on" with the old colonel.

'He is so fastidious,' said one.

'So difficult to suit,' said another.

'His ideal is so impossibly high!' declared a third.

But to their surprise—perhaps a little to their disappointment—Milly and her father-in-law were the best of friends from the very first moment in which they looked upon each other's faces.

Milly was so anxious to learn, so eager to comprehend the ins and outs of the great, roomy old farm house, so ambitious to excel every house-keeper in the neighborhood, that the old gentleman said, with a smile, to his son:

'Don't let that little girl undertake to much, Dudley.'

And Dudley Barrington answered, with a yawn:

'There's no danger of that, sir. The ladies of Holly Lodge have always been first-rate housekeepers, you know. And if a woman is at work, she isn't spending money foolishly, or gossiping.'

Colonel Barrington's keen, blue eyes regarded his son, sharply, for a moment.

'Do you think Milly is addicted to either of those pernicious practices?' said he.

'They come natural to all women, don't they?' said Dudley, shrugging his shoulders.

'Not to all!' said the colonel.

And in his secret soul he wondered if Dudley was really worthy of such a jewel as Millicent, his wife.

So the weeks went on, and Milly stood bravely to her helm, until, one bright October day, the colonel, chancing to pass the low kitchen window, where the the hoop-vines made a screen of moving shadow, looking smilingly into where his daughter-in-law was at work.

'Have you got a glass of cool milk for me, little girl?' said he.

Milly brought the milk promptly.

'See, papa,' she said, triumphantly pointing to the table, 'what a baking I have done to-day! Three apple pies, three loaves of bread, a pan of biscuit, a loaf of cup-cake, and a dozen plum-tarts!'

'Bravo!' said the colonel. 'But, Milly, why are you baking? Where is Hanna?'

'Hanna wanted her wages raised,' said Milly, rather soberly. 'And Dudley said it was nonsense keeping a girl, when I was so fond of housework. So she has gone.'

'But are you fond of housework?' asked the colonel. 'In itself, as an abstract thing, I mean.'

'Yes papa,' Milly answered, with some hesitation. 'But I'm a little tired this morning. I rose early and swept the house through before breakfast, so as to have time for the baking.'

'You are a good little girl,' said the father-in-law. 'But we mustn't let you work too hard.'

'Papa,' said Milly, with downcast lashes, and a deep shadow creeping over her cheek, 'I've been thinking for some time that—that—'

'Well,' said the colonel, encouragingly.

'That I should like to ask you for a little money,' faltered Milly.

'Money?' echoed Colonel Barrington, in surprise. 'Doesn't Dudley give you all you want?'

Once more Milly hesitated.

'He wants to know what everything is for,' said she. 'He thinks fifty cents is too much for ribbon, and he says bonnet frames out to be bad cheaper than a quarter of a dollar, and he declares it all nonsense to buy silk gloves when cotton will do as well. And I do need another plume for my hat since the rain spoiled the canary-colored one, but I don't like to ask him for it.'

'Do you mean to say,' said Colonel Barrington, leaning his elbows on the sill, 'that you don't have a regular allowance every week?'

'No, papa!' said Milly, lifting her pretty arched brows. 'Dudley says women don't know how to use money, and that a wife should always receive every cent she spends from her husband. And—I tell you, papa, because you are so kind to me—I am so ashamed to have him think me extravagant, and I do really need so many little things that men haven't any idea of.' It's a little hard sometimes.'

Colonel Barrington took a goodly roll of bills out of his pocket, and laid them on the window-sill.

'Here, little girl,' he said; 'you have earned them a dozen times over?'

Milly reached up to kiss him through the vine-leaves.

'Oh, papa, you are such a darling!' she said.

He only patted her cheek in reply.

'Dudley don't know what a treasure he has got,' he pondered, as he kept on his walk up to the front verandah, where a [illegible] was showing its [illegible] yellow [illegible] over the steps, and the balcony sunshine slept on the polished floor. 'He is making a Circassian slave out of that dear little woman.'

And the colonel took his book, and stretched himself comfortably out in the hammock for his evening's reveries.

It was the next day that his son came to him, in the library, where a little fire of logs had been kindled, for a chill northeast rain had blown all the yellow maple-leaves away, and the sun was obscured in driving clouds.

'Well, my boy,' said the colonel kindly, 'you are off for the city, I suppose?'

'Yes, sir,' said Mr. Barrington, junior, a tall, straight, handsome young man, with a brown complexion, and dark, sparkling eyes. 'And before I go, perhaps you had better give me a cheque on the bank, if it's quite convenient.'

'A cheque!' said the colonel. 'For what?'

'I'm about out of my ready cash,' said Dudley, carelessly; 'and a little spending money would come very handy for current expenses.'

'And' observed the colonel. 'And what are you going to buy?'

Dudley looked at his father in amazement.

'I need a fall suit, sir,' said he, 'and—'

'Yes, yes!' nodded the old gentleman. 'And how much do you pay for a fall suit now?'

'Oh, thirty-five or forty dollars!' answered Dudley.

'Thirty-five or forty dollars!' echoed Colonel Barrington. 'Isn't that rather vague?'

'A fellow never knows exactly—' explained Dudley.

'Ah, but you ought to know!' interrupted the old gentleman. 'And now I am on the subject, you buy your clothes of Lasier, don't you? And aren't there cheaper places?'

'And,' added Dudley, 'I've a little bill at the cigar store to settle, and there are new books I should like to read; and—'

'Just send send in the bills to me,' said Colonel Barrington, gravely. 'Young me have so many fictitious wants, nowadays! But, as I said before, let all the bills be sent to. And as for spending money, here is enough for the present.'

He drew out a bank note and handed it to his son. Dudley stared at it in amazement. It was a one dollar bill.

'I expected a check, sir,' said he, somewhat discomfited.

'Did you?' said Colonel Barrington.

'It isn't agreeable to be put on such an allowance,' went on Dudley, sharply. 'I am not accustomed to it, and—'

'Not agreeable, eh?' said the Colonel, comfortably adjusting his feet on an embroidered rest. 'Then why do you practice the system with your wife?'

'I give her all that she needs to spend,' said Dudley, coloring up.

'And I gave you all that you need,' asserted Colonel Barrington.

'I am a man,' said Dudley.

'And she is a woman!' retorted the Colonel.

'I am the manager of your down-town warehouse, and I claim my honest remuneration as such,' cried Dudley. 'I am no beggar. There is no cent which I ask that I do not earn.'

'That is Millicent's case exactly,' said the wise old advocate. 'She does the work of the house and does it well. She is an economist in every sense of the word. Is it right that she should receive merely her board and clothes? Is she not entitled to a regular allowance to spend as she pleases? Do not think me a meddlesome old fogy, my son,' Colonel Barrington added, rising and placing his hand kindly on his son's shoulder. 'But I have been observing all these things, and I merely wanted to give you a personal application of this lesson in political economy. You see how it humiliates one to have to beg humbly for the money that one has earnestly earned—to be called upon for an account of every penny one wishes to spend. Don't put your wife into such a false position as this. Treat her as one of the firm of Barrington & Co.'

Dudley Barrington stood still a moment, pondering; and then he said earnestly:

'I will, sir! You are right!'

And Milly was delighted, that very day, to receive a check for an ample sum of money from her husband.

'Is it all for me?' she cried with glittering eyes.

'Yes, all,' Dudley answered, laughingly.

'But what am I to do with so much money?'

'Lock it up in your desk, dear,' he answered, 'and spend it for your needs as they occur.'

'But I never had so much before all at one time!' exclaimed the amazed Milly.

'No, you never had, more shame to me,' aknowledged Dudley Barrington. 'But I have come to the conclusion, Milly, that you are no child to be given a few cents at a time. You are my little housekeeper, and deserve your regular salary. I shall give you this check of fifty dollars, for your own personal expenses, at the beginning of every month, and you shall use and economise it, as you choose. The household expenses, of course, will be paid out of the common stock.'

Milly clapped her hands joyously.

'Oh, Dudley, I never felt so rich in my life!' said she. 'Now I can dress like other women, and give a little money to the church, and help the poor, and feel independent! And I can lay up a little, too, every month! Oh, you will see what an excellent manager I can be!'

Dudley Barrington looked at his young wife with a sharp prick of conscience at his heart. Why had he never made her so innocently happy before? Simply because it had never occured to him.

And Milly ran eagerly to her father-in-law.

'Papa!' she cried 'I am to have fifty dollars a month, all for my own, and never to give account for a cent of it, unless I please! It is Dudley's own offer. Isn't he kind?'

And Colonel Barrington smiled and patted her head, and answered gravely:

'Very kind indeed!'

MUST BE TRAINED, NOT BROKEN.

Men often speak of breaking the will of a child, but it seems to me they had better break the neck. The will needs regulation, not destroying. I should as soon think of breaking the legs of a horse in training him as a child's will. I would discipline and develop it into harmonious proportions. I never yet heard of a will in itself too strong, more than of an arm too mighty, or a mind too comprehensive in its grasp, too powerful in its hold. The instruction of children should be such as to animate, inspire, train, but not to hew, cut and carve; for I would always treat a child as a live tree, which was to be helped to grow, never as dry, dead timber, to be carved into this or that shape, and to have certain mouldings grooved upon it. A live tree, and not dead timber, is every little child.

FIVE TRUE LITTLE STORIES.

Not long ago, a three pound trout was caught in the Truckee River, on the Pacific coast, which had been branded. On one side, near its head, was the word "God," in capital letters, very nearly a half-inch long. Where the fish got its humorous mark, is likely to remain a mystery.

While the schooner Pet was cruising in the Pacific in search of whales, last Spring, a large sperm whale was seen in the distance. The captain and crew at once became anxious lest the prize should get away, but their anxiety was altogether unnecessary, as subsequent events proved. No sooner had the whale caught sight of the approaching vessel than he charged with all his might. The attack was so impetuous that nothing could be done to repel it. The whale struck the schooner on the star-board-bow, and stove a large hole in the hull. The crew hastily lowered a boat, obtained a supply of provisions and water, and escaped, but the captain, who had gone into the cabin for his log-book and ship's papers, went down with the Pet to the bottom of the sea.

During those days of trouble in the last war, a physician, who lived near Franklin Tenn., buried his silverware and his money in an orchard back of his dwelling. Soon afterward, the fighting in the vicinity caused him to take his family into another state, where they remained until the end of the war. Time and change brought forgetfulness, and he searched in vain for his buried treasures. One day last month the aged physician died, and, strange to write, in digging his grave, some men found the vessel in which the silverware had been placed. But, as the silver was gone, it was supposed that the physician had been watched by some persons, who afterward stole the silver and replaced the vessel. Some days later, another vessel was unearthed near by. When opened it was found to contain $800 in gold, and a mass of decayed papers, just sufficiently preserved to show that they had once been bills on a Tennessee bank.

There are many squibs in the papers about the "deacons" of New England, but in spite of the fun at their expense, the deacons are a class of old-fashioned worthies. Here is an anecdote concerning one of them that is well worth preserving: At Ridgefield, Conn., by some unfortunate circumstances, a widow was reduced from competency to poverty. Nevertheless, she would not accept gifts from her friends, who knew that she had rather die than be an object of charity. There lived in Ridgefield a good old deacon who made the golden rule the rule of his life. When he learned of the widow's condition he visited her and said: "Madam I think I owed your late husband fifty dollars, and I've come to pay it to you, as his legal representative." "How was that?" asked the widow, somewhat startled. "I will tell you," continued the deacon. "About twenty-five years ago, soon after you were married, I made furniture for your husband to the amount of two hundred dollars. I have been looking over the account, and I found I overcharged him in the price of the chairs—that is, I could have afforded them at somewhat less. I have added up the interest, and here, madam, is the money." The tears came into the widow's eyes. She half-suspected that the deacon had constructed the debt by saying that he had made an overcharge. But what could she do? The money was on the table and the deacon had gone.

Young men in France are liable to be "drafted," as we say in America, for service in the French army. Those who draw certain numbers are obliged to serve, but those who get the lucky numbers escape the conscription. The sons of widows however, are exempted. A few weeks ago a certain Parisian youth drew a "bad number." The thought that her son, who was not strong, had to go into the army caused the mother extreme anguish. Her grief affected the father, too, and the three wept in each other's arms. Suddenly the father broke away, shouted "Adieu! adieu!" and running to the nearest bridge over the Seine, sprang, head-foremost, into the river. Fortunately, some boatmen were near, and they made every effort to save the drowning man. When rescued, the self-sacrificing father was insensible. The unconscious form was borne to the morgue. According to the custom at that house of the dead, his clothing was searched, so that his name might be ascertained. In his pocket-book was found a sheet of note-paper, upon which he had written his name, address, and the following touching sentence: "The child shall not be parted from his mother. He is a widow's only son." After hard work, the men at the morgue restored the father to consciousness. His purpose was so clear and his self-sacrifice so noble, that the authorities granted a special writ of exemption; and while the mother keeps her son, she also retains husband.

THE SAILOR AND HIS FLOWER.

Mr. Shepherd, the conservator of the Botanical Gardens, at Liverpool, gives the following account of the introduction of that elegant flowering shrub, the fuchsia, into English green-houses and parlor windows:

Old Mr. Lee, nurseryman and gardner, near London, well known fifty or sixty years ago, was one day showing his variegated treasures to a friend, who suddenly turned to him and declared:

'Well, you have not in your collection a prettier flower than I saw this morning at Wapping.'

'No! And, pray, what was this Phœnix like?'

'Why, the plant was elegant, and the flower hung in rows, like tassels, from the pendent branches, their color the richest crimson, and in the center a fold of deep purple.'

Particular direction being demanded and given, Mr. Lee posted off to Wapping, when he at once perceived that the plant was new in that part of the world. He saw and admired. Entering the house, he said:

'My good woman, this is a nice plant. I should like to buy it.'

'I could not sell it for no money; for it was brought me from the West Indies by my husband, who has now left again, and I must keep it for his sake.'

'But I must have it.'

'No, sir!'

'Here,'—emptying his pocket—'here are gold, silver and copper!'

(This was something more than eight guineas).

'Well-a-day! but this is a power of money, sure and sure!'

'Tis yours, and the plant is mine. And, my good dame, you shall have one of the first young ones I rear, to keep for your husband's sake.'

'Alack—alack!'

'You shall, I say.'

A coach was called, in which was safely deposited our florist and his seemingly dear purchase. His first work was to pull off, and utterly destroy, every vestige of blossom and bud. The plant was divided into cuttings, which were forced into bark-beds and hot-beds, and were afterward redivided and subdivided. Every effort was used to multiply the plant.

By the commencement of the next flowering season, Mr. Lee was the delighted possessor of three hundred fuchsia plants, all giving promise of blossom. The two which opened first were removed to his show-house. A lady came.

'Why, Mr. Lee—my dear Mr. Lee—where did you get this charming flower?'

'Hem! 'Tis a new thing, my lady—pretty, is it not?'

'Pretty? 'Tis beautiful! Its price?'

'A guinea. Thank your ladyship!'

And one of the two plants stood proudly in her ladyship's boudoir.

'My dear Charlotte, where did you get?' —etc., etc.

'Oh, 'tis a new thing! I saw it at old Lee's. Pretty, is it not?'

'Pretty? 'Tis beautiful! It's price?'

'A guinea. There was another left.'

The visitor's horse smoked off to the suburb. A third flowering plant stood on the spot where the first had been taken.

The second guinea was paid, and the second chosen fuchsia adorned the drawing-room of her second ladyship. The scene was repeated, as new-comers saw and were attracted by the beauty of the plant.

New chariots flew to the gates of old Lee's nursery-ground. Two fuchsias—young, graceful, and bursting into healthy flower—were constantly seen on the same spot in his repository.

He neglected not to gladden the faithful sailor's wife by the promised gift. But ere the flowering season closed, three hundred golden guineas chinked in his purse—the produce of the single shrub of the widow of Wapping; the reward of the taste, decision, skill and perseverance of old Mr. Lee.

A journal has been started in New York called "The Undertaker's Assistant." Why not call it the "Physician" at once.

The only surviving horse of the late war has commenced to die. He is as numerous as George Washington's body servant.

"Burglar proof" safes are a misnomer. If you want your valuables to be absolutely secure, have your wife deposit them in in her dress pocket.

There is a great complaint, just now, that hotels are built too high. Some years ago, it was objected that their charges were too high. They can't please everybody.

A Newark girl hangs up the following illuminated motto in the back parlor, close to the sofa: "E plus I has yum, yum." And the young man sighs "Sum Moribus."

"Dogs, under favorable circumstances, live to be thirty years old," says an exchange. "Favorable circumstance" probably means a family without boys or neighbors.

If it be true that "there's nothing half so sweet in life as love's young dream," it is equally true that there is nothing half so awful as an old and wornout love's nightmare.

The champion absent-minded man went to the theatre and omitted to remove his ear-muffs. He left, after the second act, muttering something about pantomimes being only fit for children to look at.

The Kansas City Journal is printing a serial story entitled: "Four Hearts." It is perhaps unnecessary to inform our sagacious constituency that this is the mild, epicene alias for a royal bobtail flush.

The Treasury department has decided that bologna sausages, when not inclosed in skins made of intestines, are to be admitted to this country free of duty. Our native American dogs can breathe easier nowadays.

"There is nothing like settling down," said the retired merchant, confidently, to a neighbor. "When I gave up business, I settled down and found I had quite a fortune. If I had settled up, I should not have had a farthing."

The latest addition to the British Museum is Nebuchadnezzar's door-step, a careful examination of which shows certain marks of wear which indicate that Neb's daughter had a young man. If human nature doesn't change much, though years roll on.

The Constitutionalist.

W. L. FORCE & A. L. FORCE,
EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

A NEEDED VIRTUE.

An ex-Senator of the United States from New Hampshire, in expressing his views relative to the Tariff bill recently passed by Congress, made these remarks—"The great difficulty that stood in the way of a good bill was the selfishness of local industries, which sought protection for themselves, without regard to others."

That truthfully states the case.

Selfishness, that progenitor of monopoly and oppression, that ignoble disposition which makes power the superior of justice, and leads men to trample honor and honesty under foot in their desperate efforts to advance self interest alone, stood in the way of equitable legislation.

It has long stood there, and the public welfare demands its speedy decapitation.

The country cannot prosper with selfishness as its ruling spirit. It fattens on the rights of others and cares naught from whom or how its food is filched.

Selfishness is base.

Patriotism is pure.

Patriotism is the needed virtue. It lives to benefit, not to plunder. It throws protection around all, not a favored few. It regards labor on a par with capital, and treats with impartial consideration and exact justice every business pursuit. Its sole ambition is to promote the general public good.

The people long for the blessed fruits of Patriotism, and the hope is entertained that the in-coming Congress will unmistakably decree its sovereignty.

A corrupt lobby is the curse of modern legislation.

No man should be permitted to sit in an American Congress who has bribed his way there.

When Common Sense enters and rules Congress the people will have cause to rejoice.

The nearer the business of government is brought to the people the better and purer will that government be.

Freedom of person, of speech, of the press, of conscience and of industry, are cardinal principles of Democracy.

Money Kings, Iron Dukes and Railroad Barons are aliens to the soil of freedom and ought to be treated as such.

The Constitution of the United States and the Democratic party were born the same day and their missions are identical.

Democracy favors ample protection to labor and business investments, but not a dollar of bounty to selfish monopolists.

The greatest good of the greatest number, attained through laws enacted and administered for that sole purpose, is genuine Democracy.

The functions of government should be simple and limited, in order that the people may possess rightful sovereignty and enjoy its benefits.

It is a hopeful sign of the present that public men are growing much more regardful of popular sentiment. The people can make or unmake political fortunes.

The Democratic party now, as in the days of Jefferson, strives to secure for the people the largest measure of freedom compatible with public order and good government.

The postal notes authorized by Congress promise to be of practical convenience to persons wishing to safely remit money in small amounts. Their advent is expected during the Summer.

Pile duties mountain high on iron and coal, shout the Pennsylvanians. Lessen taxation on those productions, or we perish, rejoin New Englanders. So the selfish contest wages.

The only protection labor wants, and the only reliable kind it can receive, is steady employment at just wages and the certain opportunity of purchasing the necessaries of life at honest prices.

The old Federal party sought to diminish the authority of the people by consolidating the power of government. That the Democracy fought bravely against and on that line Democracy still stands in battle array.

The editor of the Braddock (Pa.) Times fought a prize fight with a blacksmith and knocked the blacksmith out in fifteen rounds. "Beneath the rule of men entirely great the pen is mightier than the sledge-hammer."

Were all the stocks and bonds of incorporated companies in the United States subjected to pressure, and the watering process squeezed out of them, the skeletons of many gigantic fortunes would be visible throughout the land.

A New York journalist says:—"Near the banks of the noble Delaware stands a castellated structure built of stone. Its large and massive proportions impress the traveller as he gazes upon its mural immensity." The poor fellow saw the New Jersey State Prison.

Ex-Senator and ex-Judge David Davis, of Illinois, unless all reports speak false, has at last got married. Now that much discussed event has really happened, and Wiggins' storm been securely passed, we hope the country will assume its wonted serenity.

De Lesseps, the builder of the Suez Canal and projector of the Panama, has gone to Tunis with the view of converting the Desert of Sahara into an inland sea. The energy displayed by the old Frenchman, now verging on four score years of life, is certainly wonderful.

Statesmanship looks with an impartial eye over the whole country and feels no impulse other than the preservation of national honor and the practical welfare of all the people. Our land has an abundant supply of spoils-seeking politicians, but, unhappily, a scarcity of patriotic statesmen.

The nondescript called Tariff, hastily fished up by a Conference Committee of Congress at the close of the session, has been aptly termed the "Great What Is It." The schedules are so complicated and past finding out by ordinary intelligence, fear is entertained that Custom House officials will become bald-headed trying to ascertain what the thing means.

WILLIAM SPRAGUE FOR GOVERNOR.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 20.—The Democratic State Convention to-day indorsed the Independent nomination of ex-Governor Sprague. He received 78 votes out of a total of 98.

The township elections throughout New Jersey indicate that the Democratic dog is uppermost in the fight.

According to the provisions of a registry law passed by the Legislature this Winter, Plainfield voters will be compelled to register before voting hereafter.

Henry Ward Beecher is opposed to capital punishment. He cannot therefore pull with the Ohio legislator who desires to hang all liquor sellers and drunkards.

Two members of the Pennsylvania Senate enlivened proceedings the other day with a fisticuff argument. They doubtless imagined themselves on their native heath.

At last accounts Missouri legislators were working for a dollar a day, the time for full pay having expired. The question comes up whether they are not dear to the tax-payer even at that reduced compensation.

The effort to blow up the English government offices will do the Irish cause no good. Dynamite and assassination will not achieve Irish independence.

The Trenton Times, one of whose leading stockholders is Receiver Little, of the New Jersey Central Railroad, contained the following editorial paragraph in Tuesday afternoon's issue: "The Times can state, on the most reliable authority, that the rumors respecting the lease of the New Jersey Central Railroad by the Reading Railroad have no foundation in fact. No proposition respecting a lease has been made the New Jersey Central by any road. The Central does not need assistance, being in a position where it can take care of itself."

It concerns every Irishman, and for that matter every woman, on both sides of the Atlantic to contribute in every possible way to the discovery and punishment of the cowardly scoundrels who, having disguised themselves as women, recently roughly attacked Lady Florence Dixie at Windsor, and but for the fidelity of a more respectable beast on four legs would probably have murdered her. Lady Florence has thrust herself perhaps somewhat inconsiderately into the thick of the political battle now raging in Ireland, but neither she nor five hundred women as clever as she could do the cause of Irish autonomy so much harm all over the world in ten years as one such act of murderous poltroonery as that which the fable reports has done in a day.—World.

The celebration of St. Patrick's Day was observed in New York Saturday with less than the usual enthusiasm. The weather was perfect, yet there were less than 3,000 persons in the parade. The national colors of Ireland floated from the staff on the City Hall, besides the flags of the City, State and Nation. Enterprising Italians purchased green flags, with which they adorned their peanut stands. Beggars, sitting on patches of green cloth spread on the sidewalk, were rewarded for their forethought. Green ties, ribbons, aprons, shawls, waistcoats and faces were seen in all the streets in the vicinity of Union Square and Cooper Institute. The 69th Regiment was advertised to attend the High Mass in St. Patrick's Cathedral at ten o'clock, but not a soldier was there, much to the mortification of many devout worshippers, who went to see the "boys."

County Expenses.

The Newark Register has figured out from the State Comptroller's report the following statement of the ratio of population and county expenses in New Jersey:

Warren county, with a population of 36,588, expends for county purposes $60,078, or about $1 60 per head; Union, population, 55,776, expends $15,600, or $2 07; Sussex, population, 23,554, expenditured, $40,000, per head. $1 96; Somerset, population, 27,161, expenditures $35,000, or $1 29; Salem, population 24,580, expenditures $32,000, or $1 33; Passaic, population 68,718, expenditures, $100,000, or 1 50; Ocean, population 14,455, expenditures, $25,000, or $1 60; Morris, 50,867 population, $82,000 or $1 66; Monmouth, 55,535 population, $105,371, expenditures; $1.87; Middlesex, 52,286 population, $110,000 expenditures, or $2 30; Mercer, population 58,058, expenditures $83,000, or $1 43; Hunterdon, population 38,000, expenditures, $65,000, $1 43 per capita; Hudson, population 187,950, expenditures $400,000, or $2 15; Gloucester, population 25,886, expenditures, $26,000, or $1 56, rate 20 cents on the $100; Essex, population 189,819, expenditures, $826,615, $4 43 per head; Cumberland, population 37,694, expenditures, $40,000, $1,06; Cape May, 9,765, expenditures $16,675, or $1 75; Camden, population 62,941, expenditures $150,000, or $2,37; Burlington, population, 55,403, expenditures $83,972, or $1 50; Bergen, population, 36,790, expenditures, $48,000, or $1 33; Atlantic, population 18,706, expenditures, $20,250, or $1 06.

The New Brunswick Fredonian complains of violation of the fish laws by the drawing of nets in waters in that vicinity, and threatens to publish the names of the guilty parties. That's right, but where is the Fish Warden all this time?

A seal, about 5 feet in length, which has been seen disporting itself for some time in the waters of Raritan Bay, was captured on Monday last by the crew from a Staten Island dam dredger. It was a splendid specimen of the cow seal, and was captured without receiving much injury.

Members of the "New Jersey Game & Fish Protective Society" again liberated a number of pairs of quail in the Counties of Somerset and Middlesex last week, for stocking purposes. The birds, which came from Indian Territory, were in fine condition and will be protected on the grounds where they were liberated.

Council Bluffs, March 19.—An immense crowd was present at the Driving Park this afternoon to witness the ninth match of 100 birds each between Capt. Bogardus and Dr. Carver. The weather was bright, clear and cool, and there was not a breath of wind stirring. Each contestant broke 96 birds, making a tie.

A quail accidently flew into Mr. Theo. Ayers' office about eighteen months ago and hid himself in a pigeon hole where he was captured and taken down on the farm and has for a long time been perfectly tame, and even sits on dog's backs when they are in the house. His whistles [illegible] like a wild bird and when in his coop out of doors calls up lots of mates and fights them as well as he can through the wires.—Areopagus.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

F. H. Clark and family, of Chicago, has been a guest of Frank N. Ennis the past week. He left on Monday evening for Boston.

The Board of Health organized by the election of David Sayres as chairman and John M. C. Marsh, Secretary, and adjourned, subject to call of chairman.

John J. Totten of Plainfield has rented the store of Charles B. Clark, corner of Broad and Clark streets, and expects to occupy it April 1st, as a first-class grocery.

J. M. Salve who has resided in our town for a number of years, intends returning to New York about April 1st, next. The residence occupied by him on Mountain avenue, has been rented to a Mr. Rice of New York city.

Ephraim Scudder, who left our town for the far West last Fall, was married at Sioux Falls on Monday last to Miss Katie Miller, who formerly resided in the State of Pennsylvania, but now a resident of Sioux Falls City.

The funeral of Mrs. Cornelia R. Ripley occurred on Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Services were held in the Presbyterian church, the Rev. H. W. Cadwell officiating. The body was interred in the family plot in Fairview Cemetery.

At the annual meeting of Westfield H. & L. Co. No. 1, held on Tuesday evening, March 20th inst., the following officers were elected:

Foreman—Matthias Clark.
1st Ass't—G. H. Kooster.
2d Ass't—A. Z. Chambers.
Financial Sec.—E. R. Pearsall.
Recording " —W. H. Elston.
Treasurer—Wm. Gale.

Considerable interest was manifested in the welfare of the company.

On Wednesday evening, the 28th inst., the Westfield Dramatic Club, (amateur) a recent organization, will make its first appearance at the Lyceum Hall in the "Boston Dip" and "Woodcock's Little Game." The proceeds are to be devoted to Village Improvement. The club proposes to give a series of entertainments in the future, if their preliminary effort meets with the success it deserves, as the sale of tickets has been unprecedented. The prospects are good for amusement in Westfield in the future and for material assistance to a worthy public object by the W. D. C.

The newly elected Township Committee met at Town Rooms on Saturday evening, March 17th inst., at 7 o'clock. All the members present. It organized by the election of David Sayres as chairman and Oliver M. Pierson as Treasurer. Luther M. Whitaker presented his oath of office as Town Clerk, which was ordered on file. John M. C. Marsh was sworn in as Assessor for the ensuing year. The amount of Collector's Bond was fixed at $15,000; that of the Treasurer $15,000; Overseer of Poor $500, and Constable $500. On motion adjourned, subject to call of Chairman.

Albert Mapes, father of Freeholder Mapes, died at the residence of his son on Prospect street, Westfield, on Tuesday last. Mr. Mapes was aged 82 years. He formerly resided in New York State. About two months ago he lost his partner in life and never fully recovered from the shock. The cause of death was from exhaustion from nervous prostration. His son S. S. Mapes, Esq., has the sympathy of our whole community in his sad affliction, having lost an aged father and mother within two months of each other. The funeral of the deceased occurred on Tuesday afternoon. The body was taken to Newburg, N. Y., for burial in the family plot.

At the annual school meeting of District No. 10, Westfield, held on Tuesday evening last, James O. Clark was chosen Chairman and Robert R. Sinclair, Secretary. Mr. William T. Peck was unanimously elected his own successor, school trustee, for the full term of three years. The sum of $1,900 extra school tax, to maintain a free school, was adopted; and also the further sum of $300 for the purpose of furnishing the school with free books. Mr. Henry Hosford, Asson F. Grant, and Wellington Morehouse were appointed a committee to draft suitable resolutions expressive of the sympathy of the meeting with the President of the Board of Trustees, Mr. S. S. Mapes, upon the death of his father, which had occurred that day.

At the annual road meetings held in our township on Thursday, March 15th inst., the following road overseers were elected:

R. D. 2, Isaac F. Scudder, extra tax, $50.
" 3, N. Kaylor, extra tax, $50.
" 4, A. L. Ralph, extra tax, $200.
" 5, Joseph Cory.
" 6, William Long.
" 7, John Pierson, extra tax, $25.
" 8, Joseph Moffett, extra tax, $200.
" 9, Theodore Hetfield.
" 11, John B Scudder.
" 12, David T. Pierson.
" 14, Wm. B. Chamberlain, $100.

Road Districts No's 1, 10, 13 and 15 failed to hold an election, as the former overseers had failed to advertise the same. In consequence the Town Committee have the power to appoint.

North Plainfield's Board Sidewalks.

MESSRS EDITORS—As a resident of North Plainfield, I wish, through your largely circulated paper, to call the attention of our property owners to the miserable condition of the board sidewalks on almost every street in our village. Strangers passing through our streets, must have an impression that many of our property owners, who dwell in fine residences, as well as those who dwell in smaller ones, are in a very impecunious condition, and only able to maintain, cheap, splintered, rotten board walks for the public to walk on. Hardly a street in our village that does not contain more or less of those miserable leg-breaking traps. This is no new thing. Unfortunately, we have become notorious for maintaining rotten board walks, and our people have become so used to them, that very little is said, and as little done towards ameliorating their condition. A place is always judged by the condition of its streets and sidewalks. Our streets are in excellent condition, but our old board walks are pronounced by every person who walks over them, a commonable nuisance. Now, I desire to call the attention of our property owners, and those who rent, to a very important legal fact, in connection with broken and rotten board walks. Recently, a lady resident of our village was walking home, through Craig place, after dark, near the corner of Duer street, and caught her foot in one of these miserable shattered walks allowed to exist, and was so injured that she had to be assisted to her home. That was more than two weeks ago. She is still confined to her house, unable to walk, and will be for a long time. The owner of the property, in front of which she was injured, knew of the condition of the sidewalk, and knowingly maintained it the same, in that condition. Such being the case, as can be shown, he is clearly liable to this lady for all damages which he has caused her, and if I am not mistaken in the husband of the lady, the person who allowed that miserable sidewalk to exist will have the privilege of telling a jury what excuse there was for such a nuisance to exist. The fact that we are not an incorporated village, gives no property owner or occupant the right to allow rotten dilapidated old board walks to exist as impediments and dangerous to pedestrians. Two or three $3,000 verdicts against those who are liable, because of maintaining such leg-breaking traps, would have a very salutary effect.

Notice of Dissolution.

Owing to ill-health, Mr. Suydam, by the advice of his physicians having been obliged to retire from business for a time, the partnership heretofore existing between him and Mr. Jackson is this day dissolved by mutual consent.

Until further notice the business will be carried on by Mr. Jackson & J. Oakley Nodyne, Esq., at the same place, corner of Park avenue and Second street.

Dated, Plainfield, N. J., March 1, 1883.
GEORGE P. SUYDAM,
JOHN H. JACKSON.

ALMOST AS BAD.
What the Perplexed Physicians do in Cases of Emergency.

"I'll tell you the honest truth," answered the doctor, "Bright's Disease bothers the medical men almost as bad as cancer does. Having passed a certain stage, both point straight to eternity. It may be unprofessional to let out the secret, but whenever a patient comes to me with Bright's Disease, or any kidney trouble acting like it, I tell him to put on Benson's Capcine Porous Plaster without delay."

The doctor spoke by the card. The Capcine goes right to the spot. If you can be helped, the Capcine will do it. Look out for frauds. Is the word Capcine cut in the middle of the plaster? If so, you are all right. Price 25 cents. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York. Highest awards.

OVERCOATS
And Overcoatings,
NOW READY AT
French's, The Clothier,
FRONT STREET, OPPOSITE POST OFFICE.

NOTICE will be given in next week's issue about our Spring Millinery Opening!

We would call the attention of all wishing to purchase Carpets and Mattings to look at our stock before purchasing any of above articles. We are satisfied that we will suit.

Our prices will compare with any in New York for same grade.

Our large quantity of Matting has been purchased at such advantage that we feel at liberty to say we sell as cheap by the yard as a good many retail merchants can buy them by the quantity.

Our No. 1 fancy, which we offer at 33 cents beats anything in this market for 45 cents.

Very Respectfully,
D. BOEHM & BRO.

On for an Opera House!

SPRING began Tuesday evening at 5:42 o'clock.

HOUSES are in great demand, but rents remain about the same.

FIRE Commissioner Gillies celebrated his 69th birthday on Thursday.

A CAUCUS is described as "where thirty or forty men get together, and vote as one man tells them to."

LAST Sunday, the eleventh in 1883, was the first that favored us with clear weather during the entire day.

YOU can get just the horse you want for riding, driving or working, at the New Brunswick stables of John W. Morris.

THE plans and specifications for the construction of the new Spring bonnet will now engross the attention of the ladies.

THE prediction is made that the year 1883 will be a prolific fruit year. It is to be hoped that the prediction will "come true."

BLUE-BIRDS and other "harbingers," including pussy-willows, notify young men that their fancy is expected to "lightly turn."

"WIGGINS came in like a lion and went out like a dog with a tin can appendix" is the way a Philadelphia paper dismisses the prophet of wind.

As the marriageable month of May approaches a great many girls are beginning to wonder whether they are able or not to support husbands.

THE vendue season is about over, and then comes the "break up" on the part of others, moving to new homes, and settling down to the Spring work.

THE "dude" is the latest designation for those dignified swells, who sport very sharp-pointed shoes, English stove pipes, big-headed canes and very tight trousers.

"JUST too lovely for anything"—the opening of spring; but "trust her not, she's fooling thee"; March brings all sorts of weather, as we are already experiencing.

THE New York Commercial Advertiser man calls freckles on a young woman "Brown eyed daisies slumbering in a gold of cream." Blue mass is good for this sort of thing.

IF we cherished the hope that the peach crop croaker had perished, we cherished an illusion. He is already at the front with announcement that all the fruit is dead as a salt mackerel.

HERE it is: "It is reported that the buds in the Delaware peach orchards are all killed." We had been waiting for this familiar old item. It is worthy of Wiggins. It insures a good peach crop.

SOME fellow has taken the trouble to count up fifty-three Mondays in the present year. This is piling it on rather heavy. Fifty-two "blue" Mondays have been found too ample for the average man.

A MAN who quarrels with his local paper because it does not always coincide with his views, is as foolish as a man who flings away his umbrella after the first shower of Spring—forgetting that he may need it again.

THE liquor question and the poor printers having been settled, it is believed that at the next meeting of the Council enough votes will be secured to pass an appropriation to place the names of the streets on the corner lamps.

A COUNTERFEIT of the new nickel five cent pieces is in circulation. The coin is well engraved, but is made of very base metal. A new counterfeit fifty cent piece is also reported. It is of copper, silver plated and is nearly full weight.

DURING the very cold and windy weather of last Friday and Saturday, pedestrians kept well wrapped in spite of the fact that a most pretentious thermometer at the corner of Park avenue and Front street registered 65 degrees above zero.

WOMEN are called the "weaker sex," and yet, up to the hour of going to press, not one of her sex in this country has shown enough intellectual weakness to embark in the weather prophet business or attempt to eat 60 quail in 30 minutes.

DR. R. Reed, whose treatment of special diseases is so highly successful, has changed his Plainfield dates to Wednesdays. He will be at Laing's Hotel April 4th from 9 to 12 a. m., and thereafter, same place and hours, during every alternate Wednesday.

MARCH is giving us a cold blast which we will be likely to remember. People should be particularly careful about dressing comfortable, warm, and protecting their lungs from the cold cutting winds of this month, for disease and death lurks beneath a severe cold.

IT is stated on the authority of Vice President Kean, of the New Jersey Central Road, that the gross earnings of the company in 1882 were a little over $11,000,000, against $10,617,354 in 1881. The operating expenses in 1881 were 56 1-10 per cent., and on the same basis the net earnings in 1882 would be $4,827,000 against $4,740,347 in 1881.

A PENNSYLVANIA paper announces a "Reformed Church Oyster Supper."—"This has been a crying demand of a wronged public for many years," says an exchange. "The oyster should not only be present in every gallon of church soup, but should be of as good reputation as those served in places of a worldly character."—Rahway Democrat.

WHEN next Summer's sun gets well at work in the vicinity of Park avenue and Front street, the thermometer just placed at that corner will certainly explode and wreck things generally. If it can register 120 degrees above zero, when the atmosphere is actually "below freezing," we would prefer for the sake of our personal safety to be out of its way during "dog days."

THE Plainfield Amateur Opera Co. rehearses frequently with much benefit to its members and with remarkable success in the interpretation of Planquette's "Les Cloches de Corneville." It is its intention after mastering the technical difficulties of the composition, to render the opera publicly, selling only enough tickets (to friends of the members) to pay the actual expenses.

SENATOR Nichols' anti-cigarette bill has now passed both Houses. The Governor will undoubtedly affix his signature to the measure, and then minors must go without the vile concoction of opium and bad tobacco that they now smoke. It will be a blessed thing for the boys, even if they don't think so themselves. It will also be a blessed thing for those who have been compelled to endure the odor.—Trenton Times.

THE Legislature will adjourn sine die at noon, to-day.

SWEET times are like angels visits—few and far between.

LADIES regard the March wind as injurious to their complexions.

SOMETHING unusual—a clear St. Patrick's Day like last Saturday.

SMALL dwelling houses and apartments are greatly in demand in this city.

SUBSCRIBERS will please notify us of any change in their post office address.

MR. E. P. Thorn advertises in this issue a Summer temperance drink. Try it.

THE Wiggins' scare is over. The superstitious ones are now ready for the next crank.

BEFORE the sap begins to percolate, apply the pruning knife—ah, trim your grape vines.

MARBLES, hoops, toys and kites are now attracting the youngsters' attention and are some indications of Spring.

THE new comet may now be seen with a glass in the early evening. It is very close to the mouth of Pisces Borealis, or the Northern Fish.

THE Baltimore Sun says that "red-top" grass is the sort to sow where gullies are apt to form across fields. It forms a dense sod. A fact worth knowing.

THE last chance to secure a bargain in bed-room suites and other good furniture is offered at the auction sale at the Mansion House, Monday evening, March 26.

AFTER April 1st, if you want to know where your grocer, butcher, baker and other merchants have moved to, look in the columns of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

AT an election held in North Plainfield this week for a member of the Board of School Trustees, Mr. Henry K. Carroll defeated Mr. Wm E. Jones by two votes.

THE minutes of the meetings of the Board of Freeholders of the 1st and 15th insts, have not as yet reached us for publication, but in our next issue we will copy the same from some more fortunate paper.

LAST Sunday evening was the beginning of the customary mountain fires that come with the opening of Spring. Although the brightness of the moon rather dimmed the effect, the sight was a beautiful one.

IF you are going to keep house this Spring, consult our advertising columns and you will find good places to get your outfit. You will find there the places to buy and you will be sure to get your money's worth.

SPRING is approaching, and the Winter's accumulation of garbage and impurities should be removed in season. Disinfect cellars and other places. The neglect of such cleansing and disinfecting may breed sickness.

UNITY Lodge of Plainfield, a new branch of the Knights of Pythias, was instituted last evening, and the following officers installed: Horace Martin, C. C.; Jas. P. Gifford, V. C.; Edward Mosher, Sr., Prelate; J. F. Buckle, M of E.; J. Hawkins, M of F.

AT a recent meeting of the citizens of North Plainfield, it was decided by vote to sell the old school building and devote the proceeds to finishing the new one. This resolution took the place of an intention to raise $1,000 for the same purpose, by an assessment.

MR. George Steiner who has taken charge of his father's cigar and tobacco business at No. 15 Somerset street, shows enterprise and a desire to please at the very start. He has fitted up a comfortable reading room connecting with the store, for the use of his patrons.

CRABBED old bachelor editors are growling savagely at the young ladies who wear the nobby costume of the period as "mannish" in appearance. The truth is, that young ladies always improve in attractiveness about in proportion as they approach the dress of their brothers.

JOHN H. FRENCH the clothier, No. 6 Front street opposite the Post Office, has just received a large assortment of Youths, Boys & Children's Clothing of the latest styles and lowest prices. This is a want long felt in Plainfield, and deserves a liberal patronage. Give him a call before making your spring purchases.

A PARK avenue man came home the other night and said to his wife: "That man Wiggins is a fraud." His wife, sitting at the waiting supper table, calmly replied: "That may be, but if you come home again in this style there'll be a bigger blizzard strike you than ever went into Wiggins' philosophy, and don't you forget it."

THE bill prohibiting the sale of cigarettes to minors under sixteen year of age under a penalty of twenty dollars for each offence, passed the House on Tuesday and now with the Governor's signature becomes a law. It is a pity that the provisions of the bill could not have been extended to include children of a more advanced year.

THE committee having arrangements for Mr. Marshall's lecture, wish it distinctly understood that the seats reserved are not set apart by number as is usual, but consists of the section that opens in the body of the chapel; and only as many tickets will be sold as will comfortably seat those holding them. This plan is adopted to save detail.

MR. JAMES H. FORCE announces in this issue, the celebrated brands of some of the wines, liquors and ales he is now disposing of and desires to call particular attention to them. He proposes to make the sale of bottled liquors and ales a specialty the coming summer. There is no finer or well-managed billiard parlors in the county than that of this advertiser.

APRIL 1st will not be moving day this year. It falls on Sunday and hence the annual emigration will have to take place either on Saturday or Monday. Tenants hold possession on Saturday, March 31st, under the law, and carmen are prohibited by the same law from removing them on Sunday, hence the general acceptance of the following day for the annual hegira.

WE publish this week the announcement of the National Horse-Shoe Association which has opened an establishment in the rear of No. 3 Somerset street and engaged a competent farrier for the purpose of horse-shoeing on correct scientific principles. Although making and applying all kinds of shoes, the Association recommends the "National Bevel-Edge" as preeminently the best.

WITHOUT regard of expense, the saloon of Charles Smith at Front and Somerset streets has been handsomely re-decorated and furnished in a manner that transforms it into one of the most attractive rooms in the State. The tables are of San Domingo mahogany highly polished, the chairs of bent wood, the walls papered in gold and colors and the painting in keeping with the whole. The furniture was procured through Messrs D. C. Green & Co., of this city and the interior work was done by the Messrs Weaver Bros.

THE stylographic pen is one of the necessaries of our modern civilization. If Hood's song had been "Dip, dip, dip," instead of "Stitch, stitch, stitch," it would have lost its logic at the hands of Mr. Livermore, who has given his age this perfection of pen, penholder, and case, and ink, all in one, handsome, and always at hand and ready for use. The inventor has put some new improvements into it, and now what remains but for every scribe and letter writer to find it on his desk. Ink, filler and cleaner, all go with it. And to crown all, the price has been reduced to $2. Send that amount to the sole agent, Mr. Louis E. Dunlap, 290 Washington street, Boston, Mass., and the return mail will bring you this most perfect pen.—[illegible], Boston, Mass.

THE recently elected officers of North Plainfield Township are to be sworn in at Warren Eng. House this (Thursday) evening, at eight o'clock.

ON our second page will be noticed the advertisement of E. Hudson, who offers a large variety of lawn and garden fertilizers, phosphates, etc.

CITY Judge P. P. Good will deliver a lecture on the "The British Isles and their Institutions" at Green Village, near Madison, Friday evening, March 23d.

LAST Saturday was St. Patrick's usual day, and every Irishman thought more tenderly than ever of the land of the fairy, now that she is overwhelmed with sorrow and trouble.

NOW is about the time for the proper authorities to see that the cesspool on the corner of Second and Pearl streets, is cleaned out. Don't wait until disease appears in consequence of its foul odors.

MR. D. C. Smalley, the Somerset street butcher, has just purchased the biggest ice box in the county, which will be kept full of the choicest meats for the consumption of his many customers.

EVERY member of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Young Men's Christian Association is invited to be present during Tuesday evening next in the Y. M. C. A. parlors at a Shakespearean Reception.

THE choir music at the Crescent avenue church next Sunday morning, is to surpass even the excellent efforts of former special occasions. The offertory will be a portion of "Redemption."

WHEN a man "mysteriously disappears" now-a-days his friends don't begin dragging the river or coasting around for a murderer, until it is known how his books are and how much money he has borrowed.

ON Tuesday evening April 10th, at 8 o'clock, in the Congregational Chapel, Waldo Messaros, the Greek Orator, will deliver a lecture under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society, on "Hooks in our Noses."

SERVICES in the German language will be held next Sunday (Easter Sunday) at half-past four o'clock, in the Lecture Room of the Trinity Reformed church. All Germans in the city and vicinity are cordially invited.

WILLIAM THOMPSON, for assault with intent to kill, committed on a young colored girl, was arrested Thursday by Captain Chase and fifteen minutes afterward City Judge Good passed sentence—"30 days or $5 fine."

THE contract for filling the "Jumbo" ice box in Taylor's North avenue market, has been given the firm of Morton & Bodeshime. The box will take about 4,600 pounds and consume almost twice that quantity each week.

IN addition to the Township officers of North Plainfield whose election we reported last week, should have been mentioned Frank Whitely and Abraham King as Inspectors of Election in the First and Second Districts respectively.

THE last entertainment and dance of the Season, given by the members of the Plainfield Saengerbund, will take place at its rooms, corner of North and Park avenues, during Monday evening next. Only those receiving invitations will be admitted.

SOME genius has invented a machine to play pianos. There will be a great demand for it. In the morning the machine can be set playing the piano instead of the daughter, and the latter can help her mother get breakfast ready, and scrub off the front porch steps.

THE Sociable of the Young People's Association of the Crescent avenue church, was, as usual, largely attended during Friday evening of last week. Among the many pleasing features of the affair was the instrumental music of Mr. D. E. Davis and the reading of Mr. Stephen R. Struthers.

DURING Thursday evening of next week at St. Mary's Hall, will be held the Seventh Annual Sociable of the T. A. B. Society of this city. Music by the celebrated Cahill and other attractions are offered. Those who enjoy the pleasures of the dance should not fail in attending this most gratifying affair of the kind.

IN the church of the Holy Cross next Sunday Easter Services will commence at 10:30 a. m. There will be the usual floral decorations and music appropriate for the day. There will be a children's service in the afternoon. The public are cordially invited both morning and afternoon. The latter service will take place at 3:30 p. m.

THE theatre, in the face of the pious ban, is growing more and more into prominence as the peopular recreation, as an educator of the people and as a moral power. On the other hand, the moral influence of those who condemn the theatre is comparatively growing less. This is a social problem which needs a new method of treatment.—Cincinnati Commercial.

PLAINFIELD Engine Co., No. 2, at a special meeting held Wednesday evening, nominated Messrs. Rufus K. Case and E. L. Morris for election as members of the Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department. We are informed by officers of the Company that Mr. Case positively refuses to serve and that another meeting of the Company will be held to-morrow evening to select a new candidate.

MR. Eugene Grose, Treasurer of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, by the mutual consent of the officers, has divided the money in his hands to the benefit of the poor of both St. Mary's and St. Joseph's parishes. Fathers Gillan and O'Hanlon have each received from this source, $48.71, which will be devoted to the purpose intended. The success of the working of this Society is mainly due to the generous efforts of Mrs. Grose and Mrs. Echeverria, who have been untiring in their labors for the cause.

THE reading and concert given during Thursday evening of last week in the M. E. church, combined in a very gratifying entertainment. Miss Nettie Taylor proved herself to be an elocutionist of much talent in certain lines, while the vocal abilities of Miss Cooper and Mr. D. Herbert Jeffery evidenced their power to please in such larger auditoriums as they are more accustomed to. The piano was not so satisfactory an instrument as might be desired, and the accompanist failed to sufficiently humor the singers.

THE Original New Orleans Minstrels that so regularly visit us each season, will be at Van Deventer Hall, Saturday evening, the 31st inst. Of their entertainment a contemporary says: 'The clog dancing was excellent, and the character sketches were all brimming over with fun. There was a noticeable absence of vulgarity, but the laughter was not decreased thereby. The troupe is composed of men who understand their business and consequently please the public, and their general appearance, on the street or on the stage is much in their favor.'

WE refer our readers to the advertisement of William L. Marshall's lecture to be given in the Congregational Chapel, on Thursday of next week, and urge their attendance. The lecture is a very interesting one—few people realize the grandeur and resources of the "land we live in"—and this lecture illustrates and describes a small and yet a most remarkable part of it, the Yellowstone Park. These lectures have been delivered in the largest of our cities and always are received with the greatest enthusiasm. When delivering his lecture in Steinway Hall to an audience of 4,000 people, Mr. Marshall had several times to request the audience to restrain its applause that he might proceed with the entertainment. Don't let the opportunity pass by you.

Scotch Plains.

The new Town Committee met on Monday evening and organized by the election of D. P. Hall as Chairman, and Lewis W. Miller as Treasurer. The newly elected Assessor, Collector, etc., qualified.

Relief.

As the funds of the Relief Association are very low, will those who have so generously aided us heretofore, come to our assistance and help us to go on with our work? MRS. GEO. W. PERRY,
Pres. of Relief Assn.

Respite for a Murderer.

Gov. Ludlow granted a reprieve of four weeks last Monday afternoon to Jas. Trogiawn, who was to be hanged at Morristown Tuesday, March 20th, for the murder of his sweetheart. Chancellor Runyon refused to allow a writ of error in the case and the respite was granted to allow the Court of Pardons to consider a petition now before it for a commutation of the death penalty to imprisonment for life. Should the Court of Pardons refuse to interfere Trogiawn will be hanged on April 18.

Notice.

There will be a special meeting of Gazelle Engine Company No. 1, at its parlors on Friday evening, March 23d, 1883, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for the Fire Board, Mr. A. Titsworth having withdrawn. All members are requested to be present.

J. A. MOORE, Foreman.
J. B. GABLE, Secretary.

Fined For Illegal Selling.

On Tuesday last Jacob Bilman, proprietor of the Farmer's Hotel, Somerset street, this city, was arraigned before City Judge Good, on the complaint of Captain of Police Chase, for selling liquor without a license. The accused plead guilty to the two charges preferred, and was fined $25 in each case without costs. The extreme penalty in each violation of the law of this kind is $100 and costs, or imprisonment for 60 days.

An Easter Evening Service.

At the Park avenue Baptist church, during the evening of Easter Sunday commencing at 7:45 o'clock, will be given "The Gates of Day," a Service of Scripture and Song for Easter-Tide by the Rev. Robert Lowry, pastor of the church. The music includes two anthems, a solo and chorus and four choruses by the Rev. Mr. Lowry, all gems of harmony worthy of high rank among even the many beautiful compositions of which he is the author.

A Chance for the Ladies.

The Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., of this city and North Plainfield, has grown rapidly in membership since its organization and already gives promises of being one of the most successful in the State. Being so established on a substantial road to prosperity, it now awaits the pleasure of its lady friends, who—the members feel assured—would be much gratified in donating the Post a stand of colors or pair of guidons, emblematic of the givers' kindness, as well as an evidence of their beautiful handiwork. We are satisfied such a desired gift would be thoroughly appreciated.

A New Episcopal Church.

Seabright, N. J., March 20.—Subscriptions sufficient to erect an Episcopal church have been raised by the residents of Fair Haven and the Summer cottage attendants at St. George's Church, at Rumson, and a church, to be known as the "Chapel of the Holy Communion," will be built at Fair Haven before the Summer season opens. The plans of the edifice have been drawn by a New York architect. It will be a Gothic structure of brick, with a slate roof, the first cost to be $8,000. In time the chapel will be enlarged. The Rev. W. O. Embury, the Pastor of St. George's Church, has undertaken the work.

Dramatic and Musical.

By special arrangement brought about through the efforts of gentlemen interested in the success of St. Joseph's R. C. church of North Plainfield, a series of dramatic and musical performances will be given by Miss Mamie Kunkel, the young American prima donna, assisted by a first-class company of well-known New York artists, for the benefit of the church. The first will take place at the Grand Opera House, Newark, April 30th; followed by repetitions at Library Hall, Elizabeth, May 1st; Taylor's Opera House, Trenton, May 2d; at Van Deventer Hall, Plainfield, Friday evening, May 4th. Further particulars we will give in a future issue.

Minstrels.

The entertainment to be given at Van Deventer Hall, during Tuesday evening next, by the Scotch Plains Minstrel Company (limited), will undoubtedly be one of the most pleasing affairs ever offered our public. The members of the organization are amateurs possessed of much talent that might be envied by professionals, and their reputation as thorough gentlemen guarantees the high quality of the programme. The entire lower floor of the hall will be reserved at 50 cents—tickets for the gallery, 25 cents. Seats may now be secured at Miller's drug-store. The proceeds will be devoted to the Scotch Plain's Town Hall and Village Improvement Funds.

Sudden Death of a former Plainfielder.

The many friends of Mr. John A. Gray, a former resident of this city, were pained and shocked to hear of his sudden death at his home in Paterson, N. J., Wednesday evening of last week, after a very short illness of typhoid pneumonia. He was taken sick on the Sunday previous and became unconscious on Tuesday, remaining thus until his death. A few years ago Mr. Gray was in the employ of Mr. R. J. Shaw, the druggist, this city. Later he was an attendant in Brant's drug store, Elizabeth. Two years ago he entered into the drug business at Paterson, under the firm name of Kent & Co. Mr. Gray was but 38 years of age, and the announcement of his early demise will be learned with sorrow by the many who knew and respected him for his many good qualities and gentlemanly manners. The funeral services were held at his home in Paterson last Friday evening, the remains being taken to Saratoga Springs for interment. Friends from this city attended the funeral.

Attempted Murder In Rahway.

Last Friday night, at 11:30, Milton avenue, Rahway, was the scene of a brutal attempt by Jacob Moore, colored, to kill his wife Emma, by cutting her throat and hacking her face with a knife. The couple live in Milton, and were on their way home when a dispute arose between them, which resulted as above. After the wretch had exhausted his fiendishness, he fled. The woman staggered to widow Lemmer's saloon close by, and Dr. Selover was summoned, and the ugly wounds dressed. The doctor says they are not necessarily fatal. Last June Moore made an attempt to kill his wife by striking her with a sling-shot and clubbing her, after which he escaped and had only been home two weeks when he made this last attempt to end her existence. He is a tall, slim fellow, swarthy face, and wore light pants, black coat and a light telescope hat. Moore was in Plainfield the day after the assault, but officer Chase not knowing of his offence, of course made no effort to arrest him. The next day he was informed of the crime but his bird had flown.

Petit Jurors.

The following list of Petit Jurors to serve at the April term of courts of Somerset County was drawn on Tuesday by Sheriff [illegible], in the presence of Judges Thompson and Garretson:

Bedminster—George Logan, Wm. W. Norton, Peter W. Bickell, Adam Young.

Bernards—David R. Moffett, Lewis F. Osborne, John Crampton.

Branchburg—Gilbert Lane, Wm. H. Hoagland, Samuel R. Little, John Stephens, Wm. B. Wood.

Franklin—Isaac I. Voorhees, Geo. Voorhees, Charles G. Van Doren, Theo. Beekman, Samuel L. Wyckoff, Wm. A. Cortelyou, Charles Dunn.

Montgomery—Joseph Applegate, Charles Phelps, John R. Voorhees, Jr.

North Plainfield—Jacob Long, Adam S. Fritts.

Hillsborough—Francis M. Lebaw, David F. Hill.

Warren—James Ralph, Daniel Moore, Adrian Martin, Israel J. Coon, Peter D. Mundy.

Personals.

Mrs. Alexander Warnock of W. Front street is seriously ill, but strong hopes are held of her ultimate recovery.

Such kindly remembrance from one friend to another, as our former fellow citizen, Mr. Marvin Hughson, extended to us upon the occasion of a visit here from his old Morris County home recently, is not soon forgotten.

Dr. Chauncey M. Field has been suffering so severely lately from an attack of rheumatism, that he was compelled to temporarily transfer the care of his patients to other physicians and seek at Atlantic City rest and renewed health.

The father of the Rev. J. P. Morris, for many years pastor of St. Mary's church of this city, recently died at his residence in Paterson leaving about $250,000 to be divided among his heirs after paying a number of small bequests to religious institutions.

Mr. Robert W. Anderson who recently graduated from the Philadelphia Dental College with the degree of D. D. S., and a high standing in the class, has located an office in this city at No. 104 East Second street, where he will follow the profession of dentistry.

Wesley Taylor, well known among the provision dealers of this city as the representative of John Taylor, Esq., of Trenton, died at Chicago, Saturday the 10th inst., of pneumonia, in the 34th year of his age. His funeral was largely attended, and the numerous and costly floral offerings evidenced the esteem in which he is held.

Julian Scott has just finished for Col. Jas. R. Fleming, of Newark, a new war picture representing Gen. W. F. Smith and staff near Cobb's Hill, Va. Aside from its being a portrait picture, the busy preparations for battle are everywhere to be seen. We are informed that the artist served at the time on Gen. Smith's staff and was the tent-mate of Col. Fleming.

Thomas Rowan, a former resident of Plainfield, and remembered with kindness by his many friends in this city, died at his parents' home in Newark, in the 29th year of his age, during Sunday last. He had been employed in Woodbridge for some time past, but being taken sick with pneumonia while there, was removed to the care of his parents. Funeral services over the remains were largely attended at St. Mary's church, Tuesday morning. The pall-bearers were J. Kenny, J. Connolly, M. DeCourcy, P. Flynn, J. Motley and J. Flynn.

Worth of a Young Men's Christian Ass'n.

In this day and age, every influence is brought to bear by Satan's agents to destroy young men. The gilded allurements are on every side, and a young man without the grace of God in his heart is liable to be lead to destruction through a thousand channels. Every attraction that leads to vice and crime confronts him wherever he goes; and what wonder is it that our boy, away from the restraining influences of father and mother, is lead into bad company, the low theatre, the dram shops and the snares of the devil? The young man leaves home and parents, and starts for the city to make his fortune, he reaches the metropolis or place he has desired, and enters his employer's establishment. In the good old times of our forefathers the boy after going into business was still watched over carefully by his employer, taken into the family, the church and under kind protection; not so now, after his hours of duty are over, he has the right to go where he pleases. He is away from home now; they take no interest in him at the boarding-house; his room is cold and unattractive; he has no mother's kind word of cheer, and father's voice to greet him; he must go where it is pleasant and he can meet friends. So he leaves the boarding house and wanders up or down the streets; is allured by the devices of Satan and ruined. Such were the circumstances that lead to the organization of the Young Men's Christian Association. A place open where young men can pass their evenings in the society of Christian young men. The Association threw open wide its doors and invited the stranger, the resident or any young man to enter. As the saloon uses all social attractions to ruin the young man, so the Association uses the social attractions to lead him to a saving knowledge of God's grace. The young man will go to the most attractive place—where it is pleasant and he can enjoy himself. So it has become a recognized fact by the Y. M. C. A.'s, that to reach and save young men, a place must be made home-like for them. Such a place has been fitted up in this city, with its pleasant reading room, well supplied with the leading periodicals, a library of 1,400 volumes, free to any young man in the rooms; a parlor handsomely fitted up by the magic hand of the mothers and sisters; a place which is home-like and cosy; an amusement room furnished with games which are both interesting and instructive; a hall finely papered and painted and open for young men; and in fact, a warm cheerful place for young men; a home for the boy who is away from parents, and a place of resort for the young man whoever he may be. This is the place which is using its influence to counteract the evil of Satan; and to help the young man to look up. Is there not need of a Young Men's Christian Association, father, to protect your boy? He is away from you and many times you know not where. Can too much be done to save the young man from destruction; with a score of dens of destruction in our midst, ought not something be done to reach young men? Something has been done. But a great work still remains to be accomplished. The every effort of the Christian father, sister and brother, ought to be put forth to reach and save him who is on the road to destruction. In this city there are two thousand or more young men to be looked after and cared for. The Young Men's Christian Association desires to reach these two thousand. It has been blessed in bringing some into the fold. Is it not a worthy work, this work for young men by young men? Ought it not to receive the support of every person interested in the spiritual welfare of his fellow man? Will you not use your influence toward leading young men to visit the rooms where they will be kindly received and cared for?

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

Oh, what a cough—Will you heed the warning. The signal perhaps of the sure approach of that more terrible disease Consumption. Ask yourself if you can afford for the sake of saving 50 cents, to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will Cure your Cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a Million Bottles were sold the past year. It relieves Croup, and Whooping Cough at once. Mothers do not be without it. For Lame Back, Side, or Chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by R. J. Shaw.

Dyspepsia & Liver Complaint—Is it not worth the small price of 75 cents to free yourself of every symptom of these distressing complaints. If you think so call at our store and get a bottle of Shiloh's Vitalizer. Every bottle has a printed guarantee on it, use accordingly and if it does you no good it will cost you nothing. Sold by R. J. Shaw.

We have a speedy and positive Cure, for Catarrh, Diphtheria, Canker mouth and Head Ache, in Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy. A nasal Injector free with each bottle. Use it if you desire health and sweet breath. Price 50 cents. Sold by R. J. Shaw.

Pure Blood.—Many families pride themselves on their noble ancestry; but here, in this democratic country we do not care so much about our pedigree as our health; or, at least, that ought to be the principal object of our solicitude. We cannot have good health without pure, rich blood. When the blood is out of order, disease manifests itself in the skin and flesh, and in fact, in all parts of the body. To be restored to health, take Scovill's Sarsaparilla or Blood & Liver Syrup. Physicians speak in the highest terms of this medicine.

Dr. Brewer, Cooper Plains, Steuben, Co., N. Y., mentioned two cases of Scrofula and Erysipelas in which Scovill's Sarsaparilla or Blood and Liver Syrup effected a cure, and says, "I think it one of the best purifiers of the day. It has met with perfect success in every case where I have used it."

"BUCHU-PAIBA."—Quick, complete cure, all annoying Kidney Diseases. $1. Druggists.

DESERVEDLY POPULAR.—Unless it had great merit Parker's Ginger Tonic could not be so popular. Its sale has spread remarkably everywhere, because invalids finds it gives them new life and vigor when other medicines fail entirely.—Ohio Farmer.

An attractive, youthful appearance secured by using Parker's Hair Balsam to all who are getting gray.

WHEN LADIES ARE ATTRACTIVE.—All ladies know their faces are most attractive when free from pimples, Parker's Ginger Tonic is popular among them because it banishes impurities from blood and skin and makes the face glow with health.

"ROUGH ON RATS."—Clears out rats, mice, roaches, flies, ants, bed-bugs, skunks, chipmunks, gophers. 15c. Druggists.

CONCORD GRAPE VINES.—Fine, vigorous Vines, two, three and four years' old, for sale by the dozen or thousand at the lowest prices. These Vines are raised on the famous Mt. Prospect Vineyards, at Passaic, New Jersey, where the well-known Port Grape Wine is produced that is so highly esteemed at Dresden and Berlin, and other European cities to which it is shipped, and that is so highly commended by physicians everywhere. Address, Alfred Speer, Passaic, N. J.

Best ever made, Emory's Little Cathartic Pills, pleasant to take, sugar-coated; no griping; only 15 cents a box, of Druggists or mail. Standard Cure Co. Sold by E. P. Reynolds, Plainfield, N. J.

MOTHER SWAN'S WORM SYRUP.—Infallible, tasteless, harmless, cathartic; for feverishness, restlessness, worms, constipation. 25c.

USEFUL IN THE FAMILY.—We usually leave it to doctors to recommend medicines, but Parker's Ginger Tonic has been so useful in our family in relieving sickness and suffering that we cannot say too much in its praise.—Salem Argus.

Malaria, Chills and Fever, and Bilious attacks positively cured with Emory's Standard Cure Pills—an infallible remedy; never fail to cure the most obstinate, long-standing cases, where Quinine and all other remedies had failed. They are prepared expressly for malarious sections, in double boxes, two kinds of Pills, containing a strong cathartic and a chill breaker, sugar-coated; contain no Quinine or Mercury, causing no griping or purging; they are mild and efficient, certain in their action and harmless in all cases; they effectually cleanse the system, and give new life and tone to the body. As a household remedy they are unequaled. For Liver Complaint their equal is not known; one box will have a wonderful effect on the worst case. They are used and prescribed by physicians, and sold by Druggists everywhere, or sent by mail. [illegible] Emory's Little Cathartic Pills, best ever made, only 15 cents. Sold by E. P. Reynolds, Plainfield, N. J.

RUMPUS IN A SLEEPING CAR.

INQUISITIVENESS WHICH AROUSES THE ANGER OF A FAT MAN AND LEADS TO A FIGHT.

It was decided that young Mulkittle should accompany his father on his journey to a distant city to preach the funeral sermon of a well-known minister. Immediately the youngster flew into an enthusiastic flutter of excitement. A ride on a railway train had ever been an aim of his young life, and all day before the evening of departure he played locomotive, puffing and running around the house to the infinite delight of his little sister.

The travelers boarded the train late in the evening, and deposited themselves among the luxuriant cushions of a sleeping car. When the reverend gentleman and his son stretched themselves on the berth assigned them, the boy, restless in his anxiety to investigate everything, would lie down, sit up, put his feet where his head had been, 'tumble' at the window, and upon the whole make himself unnecessarily 'useful.'

'Pa,' he said, when he seemed to have finally settled himself, 'did Paul and Peter travel on the railroad?'

'No,' replied the preacher, whose mind was filled with the thoughts that he wished to express during the sacred ceremony awaiting him, 'there were no railroads in those days.'

'If there had been, and the man what makes people pay had come around and Peter and John had been on the train, and the man had asked them for money, they would'er said 'gold and silver we have none,' wouldn't they?'

'I suppose so,' replied the clergic gentleman, attempting to 'plump' his cotton pillow.

'And if Peter and John had said that they didn't have any money, would the man'er let 'em go, anyhow?'

'No, I think not.'

'But if the Lord had said, 'Peter and John, you must go,' and they got on the train and the man had told them to get off, what would they've done if they didn't have any money? Would they've got off?'

'Yes, I think so.'

'But the Lord would'er killed the man what takes the money, wouldn't He?'

'I don't know.'

'But when the Lord says that a man must go and somebody keeps him from going, the Lord will punish the man, wont He?'

'Hush, now, I must go to sleep, and the good man turned over and soon snored. The boy, though, thoroughly alive to the importance of such a vital issue, asked several other questions, when a hoarse fat man, occupying a berth just across the aisle, drew aside the curtains and exclaimed, 'Why don't you go to sleep, you young rooster?'

'I ain't no young rooster,' replied the boy, pulling aside the curtain and leaning over his father. 'If I'm a young rooster you are an old rooster and you can't crow, either.'

'I want to go to sleep and I want you to hush. I'd rather hear the roaring of a cataract than your ceaseless gab.'

'What's a cataract?'

'A rush of water, that's what.'

'Was the water that Moses made run out'en the rock a cataract?'

'Confound Moses. I haven't had any sleep for three nights and I am tired. Do you hear?'

'You want me to render unto Robinson Crusoe the things that are—'

'I want you to hush, that's what I want.'

'You're talking as much as I am. I didn.t say anything to you. I was talking to my pa.'

'Blame your pa; I want to sleep.'

'Well, why don't you sleep?'

'Because you, confounded kid, won't let me.'

'Are you a goat?'

'If you don't hush I'll spank the hide off you.'

'Spank who?' exclaimed Mr. Mulkittle, arising and looking at the fat man.

'I say if that boy don't hush and go to sleep I'll spank him.'

'You don't know who you are talking to, sir. Don't let me hear you say that you will spank my son,' indignantly exclaimed Mr. Mulkittle.

'I'm talking to an impertinent boy,' replied the fat man, 'and if he don't hush I'll tan his hide. Do you hear?'

'You are a cowardly beast,' vociferated Mr. Mulkittle.

'You are a liar,' exclaimed the fat man, hustling from his berth. Mr. Mulkittle sprang out, like a piece of whalebone, and met the fat man, who struck him on the shoulder. The minister seized his adversary and began to choke him, and then grappled with him and began an old time wrestle. 'I am a minister,' panted Mr. Mulkittle, 'and I'll wollop the eternal nation out of you!'

'So am I a minister,' blew the fat man, 'and nobody shall impose on me.'

'Of what denomination?' asked Mr. Mulkittle, disentangling himself and with an action that could not be restrained, striking his fat competitor on the jaw.

'Presbyterian, you fool,' howled the fat man, returning the blow. 'What denomination are you?'

'Methodist, you scoundrel,' and Mulkittle hit him between the eyes.

'I dont care if you were a Baptist; you couldn't run over me,' and the fat man struck from the shoulder.

'It takes two Episcopalians to whip me,' panted Mr. Mulkittle, churning the fat preacher in a violent jolt. Young Mulkittle now sprang from the berth, seized the fat preacher and buried his teeth in the calf of his leg.

'Ow!' howled the fat man. 'Take the young hyena away. Ow! He's killing me!'

Night-capped heads were thrust from behind curtains, and the porter, who rushed in to investigate, was asked by a rumpled old maid what was the matter, and replied, 'Nothing madam. Only a couple of preachers getting ready for sleep.'

After everything became quiet, young Mulkittle remarked to his father: 'And we smote 'em hip an' thigh, didn't we?' Mr. Mulkittle passed his arm around his son and slept again.—Arkansaw Traveler.

A most remarkable incident occurred the other day on the Banks of Newfoundland. A codfish was captured, in the stomach of which were found five cards—four diamonds and a spade. No event of recent years has produced more excitement in scientific circles than has this discovery that the codfish is addicted to poker.

BATHED IN HUMAN GORE.

PLAYING BURGLARS ON THE OLD MAN AND THE WAY IT WORKED.

"I heard ma tell pa to bring up another bottle of liniment last night," the bad boy remarked to the grocery man. "When ma cocks herself, or has a pain anywhere, she just uses liniment for all that is out, and a pint bottle don't last more than a week. Well, I told my chum, and we laid for pa. This liniment ma uses is offul hot, and almost blisters. Pa went to the Langtry show and did not get home till eleven o'clock and me and my chum decided to teach pa a lesson. I don't think it is right for a man to go to the theatres and not take his wife or his little boy. So we concluded to burgle pa. We agreed to lay on the stairs, and when he came up my chum was to hit him on the head with a dried bladder, and I was to stab him on the breast pocket with a stick and break the liniment bottle, and make him think he was killed. It couldn't have worked better if we had rehearsed it. We had talked about burglars at supper time and got pa nervous, so when he came up stairs and was hit on the head with the bladder, the first thing he said was 'burglars, by mighty,' and he started to go back, and then I hit him on the breast pocket, where the bottle was, and then we rushed by him down stairs, and I said in a stage whisper, 'I guess he's a dead man,' and we went down cellar and up the back stairs to my room and undressed. Pa hollered to ma that he was murdered, and ma called me, and I came down in my night-shirt, and the hired girl she came down, and pa was on the lounge, and he said his life-blood was fast ebbing away. He held his hand on the wound and he could feel the warm blood trickling clear down to his boots. I told pa to stuff some tar into the wound, such as he told me to put on my lip to make my moustache grow, and pa said, 'My boy, this is no time for trifling. Your pa is on his last legs. When I come up stairs I met six burglars, and I attacked them and forced four of them down, and was going to hold them and send for the police, when two more that I did not know about, jumped on me, and I was getting the best of them, when one of them struck me over the head with a crow-bar and the other stabbed me to the heart with a butcher-knife. I have received my death wound, my boy, and my hot Southern blood, that I offered up so freely for my country, in her time of need, is passing from my body, and soon your pa will be only a piece of poor clay. Get some ice and put on my stomach, and all the way down, for I am burning up.' I went to the water-pitcher and got a chunk of ice and put inside pa's shirt, and while ma was tearing up an old skirt to stop the flood of blood, I asked pa if he felt better, and if he could describe the villains who had murdered him. Pa gasped and moved his legs to get them cool from the clotted blood, he said, and he went on: 'One of them was about six foot high, and had a sandy moustache. I got him down and hit him in the nose, and if the police find him, his nose will be broke. The second one was thick set, and weighed about two hundred. I had him down and my boot was on his neck, and I was knocking two more down, when I was hit. The thick set one will have the mark of boot heels on his throat. Tell the police when I am gone about the boot-heel marks.' By this time ma had got the skirt tore up, and she stuffed it under pa's shirt, right where he said he was hit, and pa was telling us what to do to settle his estate, when ma began to smell the liniment, and she found the broken bottle in his pocket, and searched pa for the place where he was stabbed, and then she begun to laugh, and pa got mad and said he didn't see as a death-bed scene was such an almighty funny affair, and then she told him he was not hurt, but that he had fallen on the stairs and broke his bottle, and that there was no blood on him, and he said, 'Do you mean to tell me my body and legs are not bathed in human gore?' and then pa got up and found it was only the liniment. He got mad and asked ma why she didn't fly around and get something to take that liniment off his legs, as it was eating them right through to the bone, and then he saw my chum put his head in the the door, with one gallus hanging down, and pa looked at me and then said, 'Look a here, if I find out it was you boys that put up this job on me, I'll make it so hot for you that you will think liniment is ice cream in comparison.' I told pa that it didn't look reasonable that me and my chum could be six burglars, six feet high, with our noses broke and boot-heel marks on our neck, and pa he said for us to go to bed allfired quick, and give him a chance to rinse off that liniment, and we retired. Say, how does my pa strike you as a good single-handed liar?" and the boy went up to the counter while the groceryman went after a scuttle of coal.—Peck's Sun.

A SMART MONKEY.

A monkey owned in Pittsburg, Pa., is credited with unusual sagacity. The monkey is often told to take one of the two newspapers received by the family to his owner's aged mother. One of the newspapers is printed with large type, and the other with fine type. The good mother can read the first without her glasses, but when she looks over the other she must have her "specs." The monkey always takes the paper asked for. When it is the paper in large type, he leaves the spectacles on the table, but when it is the other paper, he brings the spectacles also.

HINTS.

Benzine and common clay will clean marble.

Castor-oil is an excellent thing to soften leather.

If you are buying carpets for durability, choose small figures.

If your flat-irons are rough, rub them with fine salt, and it will make them smooth.

To clean a browned porcelain kettle, boil peeled potatoes in it. The porcelain will be rendered nearly as white as new.

Wood ashes and common salt, made compact with water, will stop the cracks of a stove and prevent the smoke from escaping.

A strong solution of carbolic acid and water poured into holes kills all the ants it touches, and the survivors immediately take themselves off.

To ascertain whether a bed be damp or not, after the bed is warmed, put a glass globe in between the sheets, and if the bed be damp, in a few minutes drops of wet will appear on the inside of the glass.

A NEWSPAPER ON WALL-PAPER.

During the siege of Vicksburg, the people living in that city were reduced to great extremity. Still, the editor of one of the papers managed to issue his journal regularly. The number for July 2, 1863, the eve of the surrender, was printed on wall-paper. A copy of this remarkable journal is now in the possession of a St. Louis gentleman. It is styled "The Daily Citizen." Each sheet consisted of a twelve-inch section of eighteen-inch wall-paper, of cheap, dull, leaden-hued pattern, with fancy flowers along the edges. The letters were blurred in many places, and altogether the paper must have been a sorry sight to its half famished readers.

CADET APPOINTMENT.

Hon. Wm. H. F. Fiedler, member of the House of Representatives from this Congressional District, received yesterday morning, from the Adjutant General, an official notice informing him that there was a vacancy in this district for a cadet appointment in the United States Military Academy at West Point, and inviting him to have it filled accordingly. Mr. Fiedler would be pleased to receive applications from candidates up to the first day of April for said position. Applicants must be from 17 to 22 years of age, and must pass a very thorough examination in reading, writing, grammar, composition, geography and history, and also a physical examination.—[Newark Register, 9th.

LETTING THE MATTER DROP.

A solemn-looking citizen appeared at police headquarters yesterday, and beckoning the chief into a private room, said:

"You know that $600 robbery at my house that I reported yesterday morning?"

"Certainly, and I have put two of our best men on the case, and—"

"Well, I—ahem—I have decided not to pursue the matter. You needn't take any further steps. In fact—"

"You don't mean to say that you have recovered the money?"

"Oh! no—not at all."

"Found a clew, eh?"

"Well, n-o-o, not exactly. The fact is the money was taken out of my trousers' pockets at night, and—and—this morning my wife had sent home a new sealskin sack."

"Ah."

"And so you see I have about concluded to let the matter drop—let the matter drop," and with a deep sigh the bereaved husband drifted out.—San Francisco Post.

FASHION NOTES.

Robes of sateen appear among the new goods.

Checks and plaids are the features of Spring silks.

New shades of red are delf, sultan and Russia-leather red.

The new muslins are soft finished, without any starch or size.

Ashes of roses has made its appearance among the æsthetic colors.

Very wide sashes of æsthetic ribbon are to be revived for the Summer.

Great quantities of natural or artificial flowers are worn on ball toilets.

Birds and fruits form a part of the design of many of the dressiest sateens.

Robe dresses with embroidered flounces appear among Spring importations.

Buttercups and blackberries are the latest Parisian combination for bouquets.

The feature in new polka-dotted cotton dress goods is the large size and close proximity of the dots.

The draperies are much bunched around the hips, and even below that point by some dressmakers.

Extremely pretty embroidered silk, muslins, crapes and gauzes are employed for evening and ball dresses.

Sprays of flowers, beautifully imitated in precious stones, are taking, as brooches, the place of the hideous insects so long in favor.

A new brooch represents three owls on a perch, and another is a basket of flowers; the basket being gold and the flowers turquoise forget-me-nots.

Crimped frills of tinted crape set against standing, lightly-gathered ruffles of oriental lace, are worn inside the neck and sleeves of evening dresses.

Chain bracelets of India designs, made of yellow gold, are in great favor, and bangle bracelets of gold wire as fine as thread, several being worn at one time, are likewise highly popular.

New French hats are trimmed with narrow braid embroidery. Of course, in this case the hat must match the dress in material and color, the crown is plaited and the smooth brim has a narrow border.

At a private party for little folks in New York, a small boy wore a long coat of ruby velvet and satin trousers to match; vest of white satin with gold buttons; shoes of ruby satin covered, stockings of white silk.

Cushions for deep cane chairs are made of tufted plush or satin, and as an accompaniment a strip of the same material and color is embroidered as a scarf for the back and finished off with deep fringe, which is generally of rich quality.

Braiding is to become popular again. Rounded soutache will be used, as the designs can be executed in raised work by its use. It is easy to give Eastern effects by carrying out a free design upon muslin, scrim or thin materials of any kind.

Tortoise-shell ornaments for the hair are now very fashionable, especially the clear amber sort in different shapes. The most becoming and the favorites are the hairpins with small balls at the top, two or three being used to ornament the hair on one side.

Articles of dress as well as mantles, hats and muffs made of material to match the costume are now trimmed with handsome bows. Large and small fur collars are fastened with long ribbons, and muffs are often to be seen with bows to match, in the middle or on both sides.

Last April, a letter was mailed at Mannheim, Germany, for a widow living in Warbheim, Germany. In May the letter reached the Milwaukee, Wis., post office. The distance between the place where it was mailed and its destination is only a few miles, and before it is delivered it will have traveled more than 10,000 miles. The address on the envelope was as follows: "The wife of the merchant Lehr, widow."

A REMARKABLE SHOT.

While going to Norton last Monday, W. Bishop noticed a gray wolf chasing a jack rabbit. The wolf on seeing the team stopped and looked at the party in the wagon. The team was stopped and Mr. Bishop, drawing his revolver—a 22-calibre Smith & Wesson—fired at the wolf. The bullet struck the wolf in the neck and passed lengthwise clean through him, killing him instantly. The distance, on being measured, was found to be seventy-six yards.

A GLORIOUS SCHEME.

From the Denver Tribune Primer.

Some af-ter-noon, when Sis-ter Hel-en is out hunt-ing new Beaus with Cousin Es-telle, Coax Le-na's Cat into Sis-ter Hel-en's Room, stain his Mouth with Red Ink and gum a fea-ther from the Can-a-ry to His Nose. Then you can take the Bird from its Cage and sell it to the Junk Man a-round the Cor-ner for six-ty-five Cents, a-taking good care to leave the Cat in the room. When Sis-ter Hel-en Comes Back there will be an en-ter-tain-ment, and in-ter on a love-ly tri-an-gle will be made by Un-cle Char-ley, the Cat and a Club.

A WONDERFUL LITTLE MACHINE.

A machine has been invented by Doctor Mosso which measures thought. It is called the plethysmograph. Thought causes nervous action, and a certain quantity of blood is consumed during the action. This blood is what is measured. Some idea of the machine may be obtained from the following description of an experiment.

A man placed his arm in a cylinder of water tightly inclosed. A rubber tube connects the interior of the cylinder with an apparatus which makes record of the electric currents used. Stimulus was applied to the arm by means of an electric circuit, with which were two keys—one a true key and the other a false, or dummy key. Touching the true key, the electric current produced contraction in the arm, and caused the rubber tube to sink in proportion to the force of the current. But it was noticed that when the false key was touched the tube sank also. Since no real effect was produced the result was caused by the mind alone, blood passing from the body to the brain in the act.

When a certain noted scientific man put his arm in the machine he was requested to multiply 297 by 6, mentally. The recorded curve in the tube showed very clearly what blood the brain had required to perform the operation.

A classical professor of Turin doubted the use of the machine. Doctor Mosso replied:

"Well, I can tell whether you read Greek as easily as you do Latin."

The professor put his arm in, took a Latin book and read for a minute. The record showed that the mental exertion was slight. Then the professor took a Greek book. The record showed that it was really taxing upon his mind to read Greek, and he was obliged to admit that the funny little plethysmograph had told the truth.

POETRY.

THE SWEET COUNTRY COUSINS.

BY J. F. [illegible]

How dear to the heart are the sweet country cousins,
When dog-days of summer begin to draw near;
When bricks have grown hot, and when sun-strokes by dozens
Fill body with anguish and bosom with fear!
The green waving fields, the sweet smelling breezes,
The 'scaping from turmoil to quiet and calm,
The rich creamy milk which the ready hand seizes,
And e'en the cousins who live on the farm;
The plain country cousins, the [illegible] cousins,
The sweet country cousins who live on the farm!

The sweet country cousins! O, aren't they a treasure?
How handy to have at vacation time;
And paying one's board is too costly pleasure,
When all can be had without spending a dime.
How pleasant to live on rich cream and ripe berries,
Fresh golden-hued butter, and cakes light and warm;
Free use of horses, the carriage and the wherries,
Of sweet country cousins who live on the farm!
The plain calicoed cousins, the [illegible] cousins,
The sweet country cousins who live on the farm!

How dear are the sweet country cousins in summer!
How fragrant the meadow, romantic the dawn!
But straightway your faces begin to grow glummer
At thoughts of their visit next winter in town;
The theatre, the concert, the lecture, the money
Expended in tickets!—the thought gives a qualm;
The sequel of summer is not quite so funny—
Why don't the sweet cousins remain on their farm?
The brown-visaged cousins, the great awkward cousins,
The clod-hopper cousins should stay on their farm!

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

BLAKE'S WIDOW.

Jem Blake was shot dead in his own doorway by Antonio Gueldo, and the trial was to come off directly.

The extraordinary interest in the affair was less due to the murder and its peculiar circumstances than to the fact that this was the first case tried at San Saba in any more formal court than the time-honored institution of Judge Lynch.

As there was no place specially arranged for the trial, Judged Pitbiando hospitably offered the use of his shed. Here a rough table and a chair were place for the Judge, the other necessary furniture, intended to represent the dock, the stand, etc., being eked out with boxes from Silas Baggett's grocery store.

Jack Smith looked at these preparations for a time with frowning discontent, and then strolled down the road, turning into the bend that led to Blake's. When he reached the door of the shanty he leaned against the jamb and poked his naked head inside, fanning himself in an embarrassed way with his greasy fragment of a hat. He had come there with the intentions of saying something, but the sight within made him forget it all.

Blake's widow sat there, as she had sat pretty much all the time since the murder, staring straight before her, with her chin in her palm. The sunlight struck through the foliage of the red-oak trees that grew before the door, and checkered with flickering brightness the floor and cradle in which Jem's baby was sleeping.

There it was, just as it had been three days ago (could it be only three days?)—just as it had been when she went out that morning to look after the drying clothes and left him standing in the door by the cradle (how fond he was of the baby!)—just as it was when she heard the crack of the pistol and ran in with an awful sense of suffocating fright—just the same as when she had found him lying upon the cradle, dabbling its white linen with his blood, and the baby playing with his hair. She screamed once, the first and last complaint any one had heard her make; then she was quiet and helpful through it all—when men came and lifted him up; when they laid him out on the rough bed in the other room; when they carried him to the grave, she following with the baby in her arms.

Jake Smith was trying to find the link missing in his thoughts; he sniffed with perplexity—or something else—and Jem Blake's widow looked up without speaking. Jake nodded pleasantly four or five times.

'Pooty chipper?' asked he.

Blake's widow smiled sadly, bent over the sleeping child and smoothed the little clothes with a tender touch.

'They're agoin' ter try him in a court,' Jake went on, 'an' I don't believe—'

'Try who—Antonio?' she turned towards the burly figure in the door with a flash of interest in her black eyes.

'Yes. The Judge is makin' a court out of his shed. I hope it'll turn out all right, but it seems like givin' the Mexican devil a chance he oughtn't ter have.'

'He can't get clear, can he?' she asked, rocking the cradle gently and patting the coverlet.

'I don't see how, but he has got some kind of a law cuss to speak for him—a feller that stopped here a day or two ago on his way to Galveston—and it makes me kinder 'o nervous.'

Blake's widow did not appear to notice the last remark, for the child, disturbed by the talking, had awakened and sat up in his cradle with a wondering look.

'Pooty, ain't he?' said Jack, regarding the small figure with interest. 'Looks just like—ahem!—you. Poor little—I—a—' he stammered, and treated his hat like a mortal enemy. 'Of course he's had—you've got—there's nothin' I could do for yer, maybe?'

She answered with a grateful look, but it was accompanied with a shake of the head.

Jake bent down and with his big forefinger softly rumpled the hair of the baby's head; then he went out and left them, Blake's widow sitting as he found her, and the baby staring down the path after him.

He walked on until he reached the top of the little hill, where he could look down upon the roof which covered the piteous scene he had just left. Here he seemed to have half a mind to turn back, for he hesitated and stopped; but he changed his partial intention after lingering a moment, and walked meditatively onward, with the exclamation, 'Wal, some women do beat the dickens amazin''.

'Of course everybody came to the trial. The arrangements were soon found to be altogether too meagre. Pitbiado's shed was filled to overflowing, and Baggett made a clean sweep of every empty box in his store.

Antonio's lawyer, a sharp-eyed, sharp-featured fellow from Galveston, had bustled about with surprising agility on the day previous, holding mysterious conferences with ill-conditioned fellows of Gueldo's kidney.

The court was assembled, the jury had been chosen, and the witnesses were all present save one—Blake's widow.

Pretty soon there was a stir at the door, then a murmur of surprise ran through the crowded room.

'May I be cussed,' said Jack Smith, audibly, 'if she hasn't brought her baby.'

What reason she may have had for not leaving the little thing in charge of some sympathizing women—and there were plenty who would have been glad of the trust—was not apparent; however that might be, there it was clasped firmly in her arms, its bright red cheeks contrasting with her whiteness, and its father's sunny hair mingled with her dark locks.

With some difficulty way was made through the throng to her seat which had been placed on one side of the Judge, directly opposite the candle-box on the other, where Antonio sat. She took her place and never moved during the whole of the trial, excepting as he was required to testify, and once when the baby tugged at some glittering thing that lay hidden in the folds of her dress, at which she took pains to distract its attention with a chip from the floor. As for the baby, it sat there with its big blue eyes open to their fullest extent, entirely absorbed in the novel scene, save at the moment when that irresistible glitter caught its eye.

Every one being now present, the trial went on in good earnest. A number of witnesses were examined, whose testimony showed that Gueldo had had trouble with Blake, and more than once threatened his life; that Gueldo's pistol had one chare empty on the evening of the day of the murder, whereas in the morning it had been full; that he was seen that morning around Blake's house, and more than that, Blake's widow had heard Gueldo's voice just before the fatal shot, and had seen his retreating form as she ran out.

At the last point the Galveston lawyer asked the witness a few questions regarding how she knew it was Gueldo, and how she had recognized the voice as his. She didn't know how exactly, but was none the less sure for that.

There had been a rumor about that some one had heard Antonio made a boast of having "done for Blake this time," but if there was a witness for this he could not be found now.

And so the prosecution closed.

The Galveston lawyer began by involving in a whirlpool of hopeless contradiction the witness who had sworn to having seen Gueldo near Blake's house. Then he expatiated on the case with which one person may be mistaken for another, and brought a witness to show how Gueldo had already been said to resemble some one in the village. Finally he produced three of the ill-conditioned fellows before referred to, who swore that Antonio was with them on a hunting expedition during the whole of the day on which the murder was committed.

It was a clear case of alibi. Jake Smith's astonishment at the ease with which the thing had been accomplished was unbounded. He threw a disgusted look towards Pitbiado, but the Judge was nonplussed and didn't seem to be interested with things in Jake's vicinity.

'Gentlemen of the jury," said he, "things has took a turn I didn't altogether expect. I don't know as there is much to be said. I s'pose you've got to go by the evidence, an' that don't need any explainin'. Ef you kin make out, accordin' ter that, that Antonio Gueldo killed Jem Blake, why, jest recollect that's what yer here fur.'

Jake Smith fidgeted about on his box and cast anxious glances through the open door toward the clump of nopals where the jury were deliberating.

Antonio talked and laughed in an undertone with his counsel, and Blake's widow sat staring at both of them with compressed lips and a strong expression of determination coming into her face.

It wasn't long before the jury filed in again, all seating themselves but the spokesman, and Judge Pitbiado rose, wiping his forehead with his shirt-sleeve.

'Straightened it out, have yer?' asked he, nodding to the spokesman.

The man nodded slowly in return.

'Yer see,' said the spokesman, with a hesitating and disappointed air, 'ef yer hadn't a-corralled us with stickin' ter the evidence we might 'a done better, but accordin' to that Antonio wasn't thar when the murder was dun,, and ef he warn't thar he couldn't 'a done it; and ef he didn't do it, why—then—of course—he's —not guilty.'

Pitbiado didn't dare to look at anybody; he stared up at the rafters, down at the table, nowhere in particular, and then turned towards the prisoner.

'You kin go,' said he at last, and with great deliberation, 'but don't stay 'round here too long.'

There was a dead pause, during which nobody moved.

Jake Smith exploded a single cuss-word, which he had kept in for some time past, and Blake's widow stood up.

'Have you got through, Judge?' she asked.

'Wal—I—s'pose so.'

'And is there nothing else to be done? I'm afraid there aint.'

'And he's free to go?'

'Y-e-e-s.'

Antonio Gueldo rose with an insolent grin and picked up his hat.

The baby crowed, for it saw the glittering thing again.

There was a sharp report—Antonio pitched forward in a heap upon the floor, and Blake's widow stood with the pistol pressed to her breast.

A line of thin blue smoke curled from the muzzle of the weapon and formed a halo around the child's flaxen head. The glittering thing was quite near the little hands now, and they took it from the yielding grasp of the mother.

Blake's widow looked steadily at the figure on the floor—it was quite motionless; then she turned and went through the wide passage that was opened for her by the silent crowd, holding the baby very tenderly, and the baby carying the pistol.

The child laughed with delight; it had got its shining plaything again.

A LENGTHY COURTSHIP.

A couple were recently married in Goshen after a courtship extending over a quarter of a century. The local chronicles say that so far as could be judged the course of their true love has always run smooth, both families being 'agreeable,' and there was no visible obstacle to their union years ago, except that they were never quite ready. Friends first laughed, and then teased them, and at the condition of affairs became so much a matter of course that even gossip forgot to busy itself about them. The young lady was one of the belles of the town and had no lack of other suitors, but she turned a deaf ear to them all.

In order to secure a sure profit, no store cattle beast, of the right stamp and well done to, can be sold at less than 4½ cents per pound.

HOW TO SUCCEED.

You are the architects of your own fortunes. Rely on your own strength of body and soul. Select some specialty for your life's work, and adhere to Paul's precept: "This one thing I do." Let your star be industry, self-reliance, faith, and honesty, and inscribe on your banner, "Luck is a fool, Pluck is a hero." Earnest effort in one direction is the surest road to wealth and high position. Don't take too much advice. Keep at the helm, steer your own ship, and remember that the great art of commanding is to take upon yourself the largest share of the work. Don't practice too much humility. Think well of yourself. Strike out. Assume your position. It is the jostlings and joltings of life that bring great men to the surface. Put potatoes in a cart over a rough road and the small potatoes go to the bottom. Turn a raft of logs down a mill-race and the large logs come on top. Rise above the envious and jealous. Fire above the mark you intend to hit. Energy, invincible determination, with a right motive, are the levers that move the world. Don't drink. Don't chew. Don't smoke. Don't swear. Don't deceive. Don't read injurious novels. Be in earnest. Be self-reliant. Be generous. There are two sides to every balance, and favors thrown in on one side of the scales are sure to be reciprocated in the other. Be civil. Be a gentleman. It is a foolish man who does not understand that molasses will catch more flies than vinegar. Read the papers; they are the great educators of the people. Advertise your business. Keep your own counsels, and superintend your own business. Make money and do good with it. Love God and your fellow-men. Love truth and virtue. Love your country and obey its laws.

VULGARITIES OF SPEECH.

The above term properly includes not only words and phrases of obvious coarseness, but a large class of expressions in which a fine word is employed in place of a simple one, or a word that does not properly convey the meaning is used. The use of many-syllabled words in place of short ones has been a notorious vice of newspaper writers, whose example has been largely followed in conversation. Without running to the opposite extreme, the simplest language sufficient to convey one's meaning is the best to use. Many will find it profitable to keep handy for reference the following list of common errors. Much might be added to it:

Accord, for give, "the information was accorded him."

Aggravate, for irritate; aggravate is to make worse.

Allude to, for refer to or mention.

As, for that; "not as I know," for "not that I know."

Avocation for vocation; a man's vocation is his business; avocations are things that occupy him incidentally.

Jily ill.

Inaugurate, for begin.

Kids, for kid gloves.

Learn, for teach.

Liable, for likely or apt.

Loan, for lend.

Reside, for live.

Commence, for begin.

Pants, for pantaloons, or better still, trowsers.

Partake, for eat.

Plenty, as an adjective, when plentiful is meant.

Balance for rest or remainder.

Character, for reputation; one may have a good reputation but a bad character, and the two words should never be confounded.

Dangerous, for danger; a sick man is sometimes most absurdly said to be dangerous, when it only means that the poor fellow is in danger himself—a very different thing.

FLYING-FISH.

In the sea there are three flyers that really, from the extent of their flights, deserve the name. Those of our readers who have been at sea, especially in the South, may have seen the common flying-fish, with its brilliant blue-and-silver body and lace-like, sheeny wings. From the crest of a blue wave they dart, singly or in flocks, fluttering along, rising and falling, turning in curves, and returning to the water with a splash—perhaps to fall a victim to some watchful bonito (or dolphin) that has been closely following them beneath the water. These privateers of the sea are their greatest enemies, as they rise in the air following them under water, and emerging just in time to catch the luckless flyers as they descend. The dolphins will take great leaps of twenty or thirty feet in following the poor flying-fish, which, notwithstanding their long wings and wonderful powers often fall victims to their tireless pursuers. They frequently fly aboard vessels at night, perhaps attracted by the lights, or, it may be, caught up by the wind from the crest of some curling wave, and carried high in air against the sails.

The gurnard, though it has also long, wing-like fins, presents otherwise a totally different appearance. Its head is inclosed in a bony armor, from which projects two sharp spines. Some of these fish are of a rich pink color, while others are mottled with red, yellow and blue and as they fly along over the water, and the sunlight falls upon their glittering scales, they seem to glow with a golden luster. With such hard heads, it will not be surprising information that they are disagreeable fellows to come in contact with; at least, so thought a sailor who was standing at dusk upon the quarter deck of a vessel, near one of the West India islands. Suddenly, he found himself lying upon his back, knocked over by a monster gurnard that, with a score of others, had darted from the water, this one striking the man fairly in the forehead. The gurnards are also chased by dolphins, and they are frequently seen to rise in schools, to escape from the larger fish, while hovering above them are watchful gulls and man-of-war birds, ready to steal them from the jaws of their enemies of the sea.

In company with these flying-fish may often be seen curious white bodies, with long arms and black eyes. They are flying-squids, members of the cuttle-fish family, and the famous bait of the Newfoundland cod-fishermen. On the Banks they are often seen in vast shoals, and during storms tons of them are thrown upon the shore. When darting from wave to wave, they resemble silvery arrows, often rising and boarding ships in their headlong flight. So valuable are they for bait, that four or five hundred vessels at St. Pierre are engaged in catching them by means of jiggers.

Many of the squid family leave the water when pursued. Even the largest of them, often forty or fifty feet long, have been seen to rise ten or fifteen feet in the air, and sail away as if propelled by some mysterious force, their hideous arms dripping and glistening. They are certainly the largest and strangest of the flyers without wings.—From C. F. Holder's "Flying Without Wings," in St. Nicholas.

CLOUDS AT SEA.

One bright Sunday, when the surface of the sea was like glass, a long chain of cloud mountains lay to the south of us all day, while the rest of the sky was clear. How they glowed in the strong sunlight, their summits shining like a boquet of full moons, and making a broad, white, or golden path upon the water! They came out of the south-west, an endless procession of them, and tapered away in the east. They were the piled, convulted, indolent clouds of midsummer—thunder-clouds that had retired from business; the captains of the storm in easy undress. All day they filed along there, keeping the ship company. How the eye reveled in their firm, yet ever-changing forms! Their under or base line was as straight and continuous as the rim of the ocean. The substratum of air upon which they rested was like a uniform layer of granite rock, invisible, but all-resisting; not one particle of these vast cloud mountains, so broken and irregular in their summits, sank below this aerial granite boundary. The equilibrium of the air is frequently such that the under surface of the clouds is like a ceiling. It is a fair-weather sign, whether upon the sea or upon the land. One may frequently see it in a mountainous district, when the fog-clouds settle down, and blot out all the tops of the mountains without one fleck of vapor going below a given line which runs above every valley, as uniform as the sea level. It is probable that in fair weather the atmosphere always lies in regular strata in this way, and that it is the displacement and mixing up of these by some unknown cause that produces storms.—John Burroughs, in the April Century.

LITERARY NOTES.

In the North American Review for April, the scriptural and the legal aspects of Divorce are presented respectively by the Rev. Dr. Theodore D. Woolsey, well-known for his insistance on the indissolubility of the marriage tie, and by Judge John A. Jameson, a jurist whose long experience with divorce cases in Chicago, both on the judicial bench and at the bar, lends to his observations a very special value. Dr. P. Bender, a Canadian who has studied to some purpose the political, social and economic conditions of his country, under the title, "A Canadian view of Annexation," makes a forcible presentation of the reasons which incline many citizens of the Dominion to regard with favor the idea of absorption by the United States. Senator John A. Logan sets forth the need which exists for "Nation Aid to Public Schools" in the several States and territories. The Rev. Dr. Howard Crosby writes of "The Dangerous Classes" that menace the perpetuity of civil order and the peace of the community, meaning the manipulators of corporation stocks and the men who, having amassed enormous wealth, used it for nefarious purposes. James C. Welling, President of Columbian University, treats of "Race Education," the problem that confronts the philosophic statesman, of the presence in our body politic of a strong negro contingent. "The Water Supply of Cities" is discussed by Charles F. Wingate, "Ethical Systems" by Prof. F. H. Hedge, "Street Begging" by Rev. Dr. Charles F. Deems, and "Criticism and Christianity" by O. B. Frothingham. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York, and for sale by booksellers generally.

POINTS ON FATTENING CATTLE.

Most animals eat in proportion to their weight, under average conditions of age, temperature and fatness.

Give fattening cattle as much as they will eat, and oft times a day.

Never give rapid changes of food, but change often.

A good guide for a safe quantity of grain per day to maturing cattle is one pound to each hundred weight; thus an animal weighing 1,000 pounds may receive 10 pounds of grain.

Every stall feeding in the fall will make the winter's progress more certain by 50 per cent.

Give as much and salt at all times as they take.

In using roots it is one guide to give just so much, in association with other things, so that the animal may not take any water.

In buildings, have warmth, with complete ventilation, without currents, but never under 40 degrees, nor over 70 degrees Fahrenheit.

A cool, damp, airy temperature will cause animals to consume more food without corresponding result in bone, muscle, flesh or fat, much being used to keep up warmth.

Stall feeding is better for fat making than box or yard management irrespective of health.

The growing animal, intended for beef, requires a little exercise daily, to promote muscle and strength of constitution; when ripe, only so much as to be able to walk to market.

Keep the temperature of the body about one hundred degrees; not under ninety-five degrees nor over one hundred and five degrees Farenheit.

Don't forget that one animal's meat may be another animal's poison.

It takes three days of good food to make up for one of bad food.

The faster the fattening the more profits, less food, earlier returns and better flesh.

Get rid of every fattening cattle beast before it is three years old.

Every day an animal is kept after being prime is loss, exclusive of manure.

The external evidences of primeness are full rumps, flanks, twist, shoulder, purse, vein and eye.

A good cattle man means a difference of one-fourth. He should know the likes and dislikes of ever animal.

It pays to keep one in constant attendance on 30 head of fattening cattle.

Immediately when an animal begins to fret for food, immediately it begins to lose flesh; never check the fattening process.

No cattle whatever will pay for the direct increase to its weight from the consumption of any kind or quantity of food—the manure must be properly valued.

Never begin fattening without definite plan.

There is no loss in feeding cattle well for the sake of the manure alone.

On an average it costs, on charging every possible item, 12 cents for every additional pound added to the weight of of a two or three-years-old fattening beast.

In this country the market value of store cattle can be increased 25 per cent. during six months of the fattening finish.

INTERNATIONAL.

The pressing need of the industrial interests of the United States is an enlarged foreign demand for their varied productions. That fact cannot be overthrown by either avariciousness or clamor, and it involves alike the well being of both capital and labor.

There was signed at the City of Washington on the 20th of last January a treaty between the United States of Mexico and the United States of America, the purpose of such international agreement being, to quote its own language—"to strengthen and perpetuate the friendly relations happily existing between them, (United States and Mexico) and to establish such commercial intercourse as shall encourage and develop trade and good will between their respective citizens."

Such treaty bears the signatures of General Grant and Mr. Trescot on behalf of this country, and of Messrs. Romero and Canedo as the accredited representatives of Mexico. It is distinctly worded and enumerates a long list of articles which shall enter the respective countries clear of all duty charges.

Among those the United States conditions to receive free of duty from and as the productions of Mexico, the following are the principal:—Animals, barley, beef, coffee, eggs, grasses for the manufacture of paper, flowers, fruits, goat-skins, hides, hemp, rubber, logwood, vegetable dyes, molasses, sugar, cocoanut oil, quicksilver, sarsaparilla, straw, leaf tobacco, vegetables, wood and timber.

And of the productions of the United States which Mexico agrees to take unvexed by tariff taxation, the leading articles are as follows:—

Musical and scientific instruments.
Iron and steel rails, bars and beams.
Barrows, trucks, carts, cars and carriages.
Bricks and coal.
Books and clocks.
Stoves and crucibles.
Sewing machines and roofing.
Pumps, engines and locomotives.
Agricultural implements of all kinds.
Houses of wood and iron.
Anvils, anchors, oars and masts.
Marble in blocks and flags.
Mining machines and apparatus.
Naphtha, petroleum and coal-oil.
Printing materials of all kinds.
Wire, tubes and water-pipes.
Artisans tools and instruments.
Dynamite and powder.

To men of intelligence it seems strange that a commercial treaty promising such practical advantages to the people of both lands, as the above named certainly does, was not immediately and with unanimity ratified by the Senate, but, owing to some narrow minded influence, it was laid aside for consideration at the next session.

Mexico is a realm of countless natural wealth, enterprise has awakened her citizens, railroads are building to develop her internal resources and to connect with our lines of travel and traffic. If sound judgment and business liberality can be made to sway Congressional action at Washington a vast market will open throughout the wide Mexican domain for the real benefit of American industry.

Read the schedule of American productions Mexico offers to receive free of duty and imagine the enormous value of home labor they legitimately represent.

To make the Workingmen of America prosperously protected open to them the markets of the world.

HOME, SWEET HOME.

There is magic power in music. The inspiration of song thrills as no other influence can, and when associated with the precious memories of home life, or patriotic achievements, it becomes the medium of elevating thought and joyous emotion. The familiar words and air of "Home, Sweet Home" bear such relationship to the finer feelings of human nature, and grow dearer with the flight of time.

The author of "Home, Sweet Home" was an American, a native of New York, John Howard Payne, who died at Tunis, April 10th, 1852, being then United States Consul at that Mediterranean port.

After resting nearly thirty-one years beneath African soil his remains were exhumed in January of the present year, re-coffined and sent to this country, reaching New York last week and lying in state in the Governor's Room until Friday evening, when they were removed to Washington, there to await final interment and monumental record in Oak Hill Cemetery on the 9th of June next, the ninety-first anniversary of the poet's birth.

The project of bringing the mouldering remains of the author of "Home, Sweet Home" from their far away place of sepulcher to the shores of home-land for re-interment originated with his personal friend, W. W. Corcoran, Esq., a wealthy and liberal citizen of Washington, who pays the entire expense.

It is a beautiful tribute on the part of Mr. Corcoran to both the living and the dead. Long years have sped since John Howard Payne ceased to write, but his immortal verse is with us clad in the freshness of youth—

"'Mid pleasures and palaces though we may roam,
Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home!
Home, Home, Sweet Home!
There's no place like Home!"

While the Republican Senate and Democratic House kept up a howl of "reform" and led the people to believe they were in favor of economy in public expenditures, during the late session of the Legislature, they passed a bill near the close of the session, to increase the already large compensation of private Secretaries to the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House, from $600 to $800 each. The compensation of these officials were large enough already. If the newspapers who are supposed to shout themselves hoarse in the interests of these servants of the people previous to their election, had however, asked not to have legal rates of advertising reduced, how would these representatives of the people have voted? Why, for a "reduction!" of course.

FINAL ADJOURNMENT.

The State Legislature adjourned sine die on Friday last, after doing considerable work, though none of the bills passed were of great importance to the people at large, especially in the matter of railroad taxation. To the Democratic House is to be accorded whatever good may have resulted to the people in the expediting of business during the session. The Republican Senate has left behind it a record not to be envied by either its party or the people. From the beginning of the session to its close, it acted in a partisan spirit. In its refusal to go into joint session with the House to nominate or confirm State and other officials it has made a shameful record. The Governor's nominations of men fit for the positions designed them, were ignored, while that branch of the Legislature evidenced their contempt for the Constitution of the State by an adjournment against its provisions. To the credit of its presiding officer, be it said that he made a most capable official in his capacity, but the meed of praise should be bestowed upon Major O'Connor, the Speaker of the House, who by his fair rulings and strict attention to business, did much to facilitate the affairs coming before the House. That his worth and capability were appreciated is attested to by the fact of his being the recipient of more than one costly and appropriate gift at the close of the session, as well as by the passage of resolutions of respect from the members. The mission of the One Hundred and Seventh Legislature is ended. Let us hope that the fruits resulting from its deliberations may be of benefit to the people at large, who sent the representatives comprising its bodies to the State Capitol.

AN OLD BIBLE.

The old family Bible now in the possession of Joseph E. Leigh, of Hopewell, was printed in London by Christopher Barker, in the year 1583. It was brought from England by Joseph Leigh (the first of the Leighs in New Jersey), who came to this country some time between 1712 and 1715, and settled at Perth Amboy. He gave this old Bible to his son Ichabod; Ichabod gave it to his son Joseph, in the year 1770; Joseph gave it to his son, John Evans Leigh, and he gave it to his grandson, its present owner, in 1867. The marriages, births and deaths of several generations are recorded in this old family relic.

Another Slander.

If our credulity had exceeded our good sense we should have exclaimed on the morning of Saturday, March 24th, "Let Plainfield be draped in mourning, let her bells toll, let her inhabitants rend the air with wailing and weeping from the mountains to the hills, for behold the churches of the fair town have been branded with hypocrisy." What of that? Byron has said "When falls the Coliseum, Rome shall fall." We say when falls the church, the community shall fall. A fit subject then is this for our tears and lamentations.

The fact of the case is we had read in the N. Y. Herald of the above date an account of the latest defalcation. Then we came to the following personal, interview: "What do we think of him here?" said a leading citizen in Plainfield to a Herald reporter last evening, in reply to a question about Marsden's defalcation. "Why," he continued, "we think he's just the same as all the rest of the leading Plainfield church pillars. He's turned out another sanctimonious skin; that's what he's done." "Has Plainfield had many rotten church pillars?" "Oh, yes, quite a lot." Perhaps this reporter wore cotton in his ears, and thus the words fell upon him with an uncertain sound. He mis-stated the report of the party interviewed. We hope this was the case. We should then be dealing with sentiments only instead of sentiments and a man together.

The vials of our wrath had been poured out upon this detestable embezzlement. But fortunately we had reserved a fair residue; for after we had read the article it was difficult to decide who should have the prize for the highest grade of villainy, the man who had defaulted or the man who had slandered. One had broken the eighth commandment, the other the ninth commandment. One had stolen, the other had lied. Well, this is another exhibition of ignorant, jealous, deluded skepticism. It is like a howling cur; it barks, but never bites. Whenever it can identify roguery with church membership it tosses its hat and cries "Another church pillar knocked from under." But the ruin must be complete. So Samson like it would demolish the whole temple. Would that it might meet Samson's fate! It is strange that the same evidence cannot be used in these as in other matters. We believe it was Daniel Webster who was conducting a case, and after the opposing counsel had defended the prisoner who had stolen some wheels, Webster drew aside a curtain and said "Well, here are the wheels." And so when this carping coxcomb would vilify every "leading church pillar" in Plainfield, we would say "Here are the churches, with as noble a clergy and as sound a laity as there is in the State." Far be it from us to extenuate those gross offenders who from time to time have plied their dark schemes under the cover of the church and that too in Plainfield. This latest embezzler is said to be a church member. We are not certain, but we doubt it. Grant that he was, he never was a "church pillar." As some one has said, he was a pillar sham. It is a sad commentary on a man's eyesight when he can't tell the difference between a church pillar and an architectural flower on the ceiling which requires a field glass to find it. If the statement that the "leading citizen" makes is true how is it that the churches of Plainfield are moving on with such a steady tread. Instead of the abomination of desolation which ought to prevail on the basis of such a premise, we see a grand work of benevolence and love. We should like to see this man converted into a battering ram and butt against these "rotten church pillars." Well, there would be one casualty. The Herald reporter would be present again, but his report would be more authentic this time. There would be a glowing description of a mixed mass of broken ram's horns, a shattered head, and a splintered beam. But the church pillars would still stand. They are columns of adamant. It is the old story. Libel and slander have been burning the Christian church through the centuries but like the bush in the desert of Midian, it burns but is not consumed.

THE PUBLISHERS.

On for an Opera House!

NEXT Sunday—Low Sunday.

MINSTRELS to-morrow evening.

NEW moon—one week from to-night.

COUNCIL meeting next Monday evening.

DON'T leave your horses unhitched on the streets.

HOUSES continue in great demand. Where are our capitalists?

PLAINFIELD will soon enjoy telephonic communication with New Brunswick.

FOREPAUGH'S circus, one of the greatest in the country, will visit Plainfield early in May.

A BILL to require the doors of public school buildings to open outward passed the Legislature.

THE reduction of the tobacco tax to eight cents a pound will cheapen that article after May 1st.

WEDNESDAY of last week was Spy Wednesday, the day on which Judas betrayed his Master with a kiss.

THE members of St. Mary's T. A. B. Society and its friends are enjoying themselves at a ball this (Thursday) evening.

OUR city will stop growing if it does not furnish its residents with a suitable hall for the presentation of public amusements.

THERE is "big money" in an Opera House in this city, if built on the scale of comfort, elegance, convenience and seating capacity demanded by the size of the population, its tastes and desires.

HORSES for riding, driving or working; horses for farming use, single roadsters and teams; in fact, any kind, quality or cost of horse, can be obtained at the New Brunswick stables of John W. Morris.

AT an election held Tuesday evening, the following were chosen Trustees of the M. E. Church for the coming year: I. W. Pangborn, P. M. French, J. W. Jackson, D. H. Mulford, G. H. Burgess, H. K. Carroll, J. McGee.

SOMEBODY'S dog has been raiding Plainfield chicken-coops during the past two weeks. Messrs. Opdyke, Sterling, Darling, VanWinkle and others have suffered more or less by the killing of their poultry.

THE biggest box of oranges ever shipped from Valencia was received by P. M. Demarest, the Front street grocer, last Tuesday. The box was five feet high and contained 420 very large and fine specimens of the fruit.

MARSHALL'S lecture on the Yellowstone Park is given this (Thursday) evening in the Chapel of the Congregationalists. A rare treat will be experienced by those who attend, and financial success is deserved by the Society arranging it.

EASTER on the 25th of March is a coincidence that no man living has seen. It was as far back as 1668, 1674, 1731 and 1742 that Easter came on the 25th of March. This coincidence is the first of its kind in our century, and will not take place again till 1894.

THE new school bill permits districts having more than five hundred children of school age to decide by vote whether they will or will not elect six Trustees instead of three. If they decide to increase the number methods for their election are provided. The increase is not compulsory.

THE Methodist ministers are considering the project of paying the expenses of delegates to the various Conferences instead of asking parishioners to feed and lodge the brethren upon these occasions as heretofore. This is right. A preacher ought not to be sent to Conference like a beggar.

IF it is true that the members of the present Council were elected to represent the people, look after the city's interests and accomplish the desires of the public, it will—among other things—appropriate a sum sufficient and give its Committee power to have the names of the streets painted on the corner lamps.

THE original New Orleans Minstrels that will appear at VanDeventer Hall to-morrow evening, is a combination well known to the Plainfield public and always endorsed by a "big house" whenever it appears in this city. All the old favorites will take part in the programme, while new features and new talent have been added.

MR. Charles Ziemmer of W. Front street, who had been granted a license to sell liquor upon the payment of the required fee, neglected to fulfill that important condition. He was, in consequence, recently arrested for violating the ordinance, by selling without a license, and was fined $20 for such act by His Honor, the City Judge.

AN apology is due our readers for the poor quality of paper upon which recent issues have been printed. The last shipment from the mills was accidently made up below the usual grade, and as it takes a little while to get out so large a quantity as we naturally prefer to order at a time, we trust our patrons will excuse another issue upon stock so unusually inferior.

THE little children at Scotch Plains, who were orphaned by the sudden deaths of father and mother, soon after the family arrived from Kentucky, are to be sent to England in May. Some funds due the father from Kentucky have been paid over, and there will be money enough to pay their way back to their friends in England, who are prepared to receive them.—Elizabeth Journal.

THE largest audience that ever gathered in the M. E. Church, crowded that building Thursday evening of last week upon the occasion of the closing entertainment of the Y. M. C. A's Sixteenth Annual Course. It seemed as if everybody was present, and it is therefore unnecessary for us to report the universal commendation accorded to the Royal Hand Bell Ringers. The Course thus closed most auspiciously, but let us hope that the Seventeenth will be given in an Opera House capable of holding the audiences that would in such case attend.

A RUNAWAY horse came near causing a serious accident on Park avenue last Monday. The animal started from Cook's lumber yard, attached to only the front wheels of a heavy lumber wagon, and dashed through Park avenue toward Front street, at a terrific pace. The street was crowded with vehicles containing ladies and children, and it was miraculous how a collision was averted. At the corner of Front street stood a covered carriage, containing only a little three year old child, the horse attached having been carelessly left unhitched. The runaway just grazed this vehicle, and ran as far as Bliven's Hotel, where he was captured.

IT'S a cold day when the thermometer at the corner of Park avenue and Front street registers 32 degrees above zero.

OUR public thoroughfares need attention and cleaning up. Street Commissioner Meeker is doing the needed work.

AN official notice published in this issue announces the dissolution of the long established law firm of Van Winkle & Manson.

ON your way to church next Sunday, look not back when the precocious kid remarks, "there's a bug on your coat, mister!"

THE temperance billiard room of G. P. Smith will remove next Monday from Front to Second street adjoining the engine house.

GERMAN services will be held in Trinity Reformed church next Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The Rev. Dr. Mohn, of Hoboken, will officiate.

BISHOP Scarborough will administer confirmation and preach in the church of the Holy Cross, North Plainfield, next Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

A MISSION will be given at St. Joseph's R. C. Church, North Plainfield, by the Carmelite Fathers commencing on Sunday, April 1st, at 10:30 o'clock, a. m.

MR. Jerome Peck, of Park avenue, worked by the side of John Harris in "Uncle John" Simpson's hat shop for fifteen years, during their younger days.

IN a few weeks the new Union County "freshet" bonds will be issued and offered for sale. The bonds recently offered by the County, have all been disposed of at 102.

AN elegant indication of Easter that adorned our desk and perfumed our "sanctum," recently, was a Marechal Neil rose from the conservatories of Geo. H. Burgess, Esq.

THE Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department meet to-morrow evening to audit the accounts of the Treasurer and his annual statement of receipts and disbursements.

THE post office in this city, as well as others throughout the United States, was closed from 2 to 5 o'clock, p. m., of Wednesday, upon the occasion of the funeral of the late P. M. G., Howe.

AT Becker, the dyer's, No. 42 West Front street, you can get what is guaranteed to be a sure death to moths. Try it and prove it. Cleaning, dyeing and repairing of clothing, &c. in all branches.

MR. Rudolph H. Becker, of New Brunswick, has made a wager that his pair of ponies will drink lager beer from glasses at a saloon bar in Brooklyn, N. Y. They have performed the feat before.

THE Y. M. C. A. has been officially informed that it cannot again engage the M. E. church for the giving of its annual course of entertainments. Unless our citizens of means take some decisive action towards the erection of an Opera House, we must give up all such pleasing attractions in the future.

AT the well-known establishment of S. C. Lilienstern, No. 25 West Front street, there may be found one of the largest and most varied assortments of ready-made clothing ever shown in this city. It includes the best styles of all the first-class manufactures, and anyone may be suited in material, trimming and price.

THE scheme to erect a Music Hall on the Stillman Homestead property, has gone just so far and no farther. The last $10,000 remains unsecured, and still the wealthy citizens of North Plainfield who would gain so much by the completion of the project at the location contemplated, fail to contribute their financial assistance.

AT the carriage factory of L. M. French No. 18 Somerset street, may be found one of the largest assortments of handsome and useful vehicles in the State. Special styles made and trimmed to order, at prices equal to the lowest for the same high grade of work. A few good second-hand carriages are also offered cheap, to make room for other stock. Call and look at the goods.

HAD not John W. Murray, Esq., and others succeeded in quieting the audience at Van Deventer Hall, Tuesday evening, there would have been a general rush through the narrow door-way and down the single pair of stairs. The consequences would have been a crushing and smothering and probable loss of life. Let us have an Opera House with proper exits.

SOME indignant North Plainfielder nailed up a sign at the Grove street bridge last Monday morning as follows:

To the Freeholders of Somerset County:

This Bridge that is being built is the biggest H u m b u g that was ever forced on the people of Plainfield and North Plainfield Townships.

Yours Truly, MANY CITIZENS.

This hint expresses the feelings of a large majority of citizens of both sides of the "brook".

THE capitalists of North Plainfield having almost universally failed to subscribe towards the erection of the proposed Music Hall on Front street, the project will possibly have to be given up. Let those who have been so active in arranging the scheme now devote their energies to building an Opera House the other side of the railroad. The subscriptions already secured will almost entirely be retained, and in some cases, we are able to state, doubled.

A LITTLE lad aged about 12 years, the only son of a widowed mother, fell between the cars of a coal train Wednesday afternoon and had both legs crushed.—The victim, whose name was Hugh Rogers, was attended by Dr. Fritts, and removed to the Muhlenberg Hospital, where Drs. Hart and Endicott amputated the limbs—one at the knee and the other about three inches below. The patient rallied from the shock, and to-day (Thursday) his symptoms give promise of ultimate recovery.

OUR citizens should encourage and assist the young men of Plainfield in every endeavor to attain healthy recreation and moral sport. The Crescent Base Ball Association re-organizes for the coming season, out of debt, with money in the treasury, a membership including the "pick" of Plainfield's gentlemen and every prospect of success in its efforts to promote out-door exercises. Will not some one having grounds to lease in the vicinity of the city, offer this Association the rental of the same.

Mr. John Walker, the Park avenue baker, was recently the recipient of natural curiosities in the shape of two Flamingoes, native birds of the West Indies. They were a gift to him from a friend who is captain of a vessel plying between this and that country. Unfortunately one of the birds died soon after his arrival here. The other is in good health and spirits, and is now domiciled on the farm occupied by ex-street Commissioner John Wilson, on Mountain avenue, father-in-law of Mr. Walker.

THE New Jersey Telephone Co., which has an established exchange here, have just completed the laying of 2,700 feet of cable, from Bergen Point across the Kill-von-kull to Staten Island; from Staten Island to Elizabethtown, thence to Plainfield. By this route the distance will be reduced one-half what it is at present, which should give us New York subscribers as distinct as our locals. This new route will be completed in April. The company is rapidly pushing its lines to New Brunswick, Woodbridge & Amboy while Long Branch and Trenton will also be connected by October. Mr. Percy G. Gill has the work in charge.

Holy Cross Election.

The annual meeting of the Holy Cross Parish was held Tuesday evening, and the following persons were elected:

Wardens—William Rockhill Potts and George P. Depue.

Vestrymen—James Lyon, Frank S. Brown, Mason W. Tyler, Eli Long, and Isaac C. Yawger.

Delegates to Convocation—W. J. Leonard, J. J. Henderson, William Mooney. Alternates—James Lyon, I. C. Yawger, Frank S. Brown.

Easter Elections at Grace Church.

At the annual election by Grace Church parish the following officers and delegates were chosen:

Wardens—W. E. Lowe and J. B. Dumont.

Vestrymen—E. N. Erickson, W. R. Cook, O. T. Waring, G. Mayer, O. H. Fleming, E. L. Finch, Charles Tweedy.

Delegates to Diocesan Convention—J. B. Dumont, W. E. Lowe, C. S. Gulick. Alternates—W. R. Cook, E. L. Finch, O. H. Fleming. Delegate to Convocation—O. H. Fleming.

Deservingly Rewarded.

At the close of the special Sunday School services commemorative of Easter in the Chapel of the Congregationalist's last Saturday afternoon, the pastor, Rev. Wm. Manchee, took possession of the desk and addressed the School. His remarks were brief but full of flattering expression of the appreciation of himself, the teachers and the scholars of the labors of their Superintendent, Mr. Geo. W. Rockfellow, and his unremitting kindness and courtesy to all. In the name of the School he then presented the Superintendent with a magnificently framed steel-engraved copy of Faed's picture, "The Poor, The Poor Man's Friend," and an oil-painted plaque in velvet mounting for the Superintendent's wife who came in for a large share of esteem of the School. Mr. Rockfellow was so taken by surprise that he could not sufficiently express his sincere thanks. He assured all of his heartfelt interest in the School and its work, and that they might depend upon a continuance of his personal endeavours.

Grove Street Bridge.

The iron work of the Grove street bridge is now being put in position by workmen, and travel over the structure may soon be expected to be resumed. There is great disappointment expressed by the general public, over the appearance of the bridge, which has a narrow contracted appearance when viewed from either end of the street. This is partly to be accounted for by the width of Grove street. The bridge itself has a road-bed of 22 feet, with 7 feet wide sidewalks on each side. However, we agree with the general expression on the subject, that it would have been wiser to have expended more money and erected a structure that would have been more in keeping and appearance with the beautiful avenue it is erected on.

It was no fault of the Union County Board of Freeholders that a handsome and appropriate bridge was not erected at this point. The votes of the "interior" members of the Somerset County Board prevented such a result. They thought a bridge the same as their fathers rode over in years gone by was good enough—hence the present unsightly structure.

A Glorious Easter.

The glorious Eastertide opened as auspiciously last Sunday as the most devout follower of the Nazarene could desire. In thorough harmony with the religious feelings of the majority of the community, nature smiled beneficently upon the anniversary of Christ's triumph over death. It is rather superfluous to speak of the weather, but as a matter of record for future reference we may state that the atmosphere was simply grand. All Plainfield was out to church, or enjoying an exhilirating walk in an air so buoyant that everybody felt at peace with himself and all the world. So remarkably perfect a day so early in the season was unexpected, and consequently winter clothes instead of Spring costumes arrayed most of the pedestrians. A few new dresses, one or two fresh bonnets and more light overcoats were, however, observable.

A great change was presented in all the churches, from the sombre aspect that usually characterizes their interiors to the joyous appearance of Easter Sunday. The pulpits were elaborately decorated with natural flowers, and special services that included distinctive music were given in all the different edifices. Large audiences attended and were greatly impressed with eloquent and instructive sermons on the Day—its origon and uses. No more appropriate weather nor satisfactory observation of the day was ever experienced in Plainfield.

Another.

Again a Plainfielder figures in bold head-lines in the newspapers as a law breaker, and his family, home and past life is more or less accurately discussed by the community at large. The latest of our citizens to be used as a topic of general conversation, is John F. Marston of Kensington and Putman avenues, who while interest clerk of the Equitable Trust Co., on a yearly salary of $1,200, has embezzled about $80,000 and confessed such act in a letter to the officers of the company.

The accused was engaged in other enterprises and undoubtedly merely took money which did not belong to him, but which he thought he could replace. The President of the Trust company says it will take fully two or three weeks before he would be able to give an exact accounting of Marston's embezzlements. There were a number of books which were under the care of the defaulter which it would be necessary to prove, but he did not think the amount lost by the company would be over $80,000. He said that was the amount which Marston had set as the extent of his defalcation, and he had every reason to believe that Marston understood it to his interest to tell the truth. This officer was not prepared to say what action would be taken by the company against its dishonest clerk except that the entire matter was in the hands of the district Attorney and that Marston would in all probability be prosecuted—if arrested.

Similar acts by Plainfield churchmen in the past, leads the New York press to infer that Marston was also a prominent member of one of our many churches. Such, however, is not the case. But we leave this point to be discussed by an able communication elsewhere. The only personal knowledge we have of any active or extensive acquaintance with religious organizations possessed by the defaulter, was when he a few years ago sang as a choir boy in a New York church. As to his "extensive circle of friends" in this city, it was principally confined to a few young fellows with whom he was rather popular but who, it is said, played entirely too "stiff" a game of poker for Marston's comfort.

His possessions in this city will be devoted towards making up the deficiency, but will form but a small portion of such. It has been rumored that his father-in-law, President of the Farmers Loan & Trust Co., would settle the matter, but this we are assured is not so. All will agree that such would be hardly the proper example to set his own employees.

WAR is declared against the English Sparrow in many sections of this country, and their extermination is called for. It is claimed they destroy the eggs and young of wrens, robins, blue birds and other song birds.

Personals.

Justice Wadsworth is confined to his bed from a severe attack of pneumonia.

Dr. W. E. Mattison, of North Plainfield has been appointed a Notary Public by Gov. Ludlow.

Jerome Peck, Esq., has been confined to his home for several days in consequence of severe illness.

Mr. Rush Rhees of this city was awarded the first prize in oratory at Amherst College, recently.

Mr. and Mrs. John Morton are being congratulated and envied at the advent, Saturday evening, of a ten-pound boy.

U. S. Senator Sewell will please accept our thanks for a copy of the "Act to reduce international-revenue taxation, and for other purposes."

The many friends of Wm. G. Ayres will be glad to learn of his entire recovery, and a complete renewal of his former health and vigor.

Mr. Wm. H. French, formerly of Westfield, this county, now enjoys a lucrative position as night clerk in the new Grand Union Hotel, Trinidad, Colorado.

Ex-Councilman John Harris, President of the Plainfield Building, Loan and Savings Association, died at his residence No. 54 New street, last Saturday afternoon.

Among the sights that attract the attention of Flemington's public, Easter Sunday, the most to be admired was the "truly good Runkle" at the head of his Sunday School class.

Bad Luck From Horse Shoes.

The horse shoe is considered an emblem of good luck. Particularly so when it is found. Then two facts await the lucky shoe, one to be nailed over the door; the other to be taken inside, gilded, japanned or painted and then decorated with amateur girlish art.

But horseshoes do not always bring good luck. A man who lives in this town and who buys horseshoes and other old iron, went to Plainfield recently, and stopped at a new blacksmith's shop where a large lot of old shoes lay neatly piled up, a sign of prosperity on part of the blacksmith, intimating that he had taken off all these old shoes and put on as many new ones. The iron merchant looked at the pile and said, "I want those horse shoes."

"They're not for sale."

"I'll give ten dollars for the lot."

"Take 'm," said the blacksmith.

But when the merchant in old iron found out that those horse shoes had been piled around several big empty boxes, so as to make the pile look big, he groaned inwardly and wanted the Plainfield man to take two dollars for the lot and call it square, but this the blacksmith refused to do, and the Elizabeth man was out about eight dollars' worth of old horse shoes.—Elizabeth Journal.

The Scotch Plains Minstrels.

Van Deventer Hall was certainly never honored with an audience composed of a finer class of people than that which gathered there on Tuesday evening upon the occasion of the entertainment given by the Scotch Plains Minstrels Company. The programme opened with a "first part" that called forth the separate and combined talents of the entire company, and which from beginning to end was a most satisfactory affair. Mr. T. A. Gore as interlocutor filled the middle with enviable ability, and Messrs. McNair and Stanbery as bones and tambo kept the audience "convulsed" with jokes and sayings rich with age. These two sang "A Frog Went Courting" and "Baby's got a tooth," respectively, in a manner that was justly appreciated. Messrs. P. B. and J. E. Miller gave vocal solos that were decidedly pleasing and evidenced their possession of fine voices. Mr. Rowe, however, who is undoubtedly, the best vocalist of the company, was unable to finish his "I fear no foe" with the effect he was capable of giving, by reason of some fault of the piano. Mr. Wilbur was accorded the biggest reception of the evening. It was some minutes after his appearance at the front of the stage before the loud applause could be sufficiently quieted to allow the beginning of his song, "Come to my arms, Norah darling." A double encore was the compliment conceded by the host of friends this popular gentleman numbered among the audience. The balance of the programme consisted of the usual sketches that go to make up a well ordered minstrel entertainment. They were rendered by the full force of the company in a very amusing and gratifying way. A slight panic that was caused by a rush from the gallery and a cry of "fire" by some boys who heard the ringing of an alarm, was quieted by cool heads in the audience. Apart from the nervous prostration of a lady, no evil resulted.

Destruction of the "Rock House."

About ten o'clock Tuesday night last, the fire department of this city were called out in answer to an alarm of fire caused by a bright glare in the direction of Washington Rock, which is situated on top of the mountain back of Dunellen. It was soon ascertained that the "Rock House," at that point, was burning. Of course the department could be of no use, and went but a little ways. Groups of persons gathered wherever a favorable view could be obtained of the magnificent spectacle afforded by the burning of this large building. Although distant over two miles from this city, small objects were readily made discernible on the roofs of buildings by the glare cast on them from the flames. The origin of the fire is attributed to a defective flue. The building was occupied by ex-Postmaster Wallace Vail and wife, Mr. E. A. Greig and Mr. Barker, a neighbor whose wife recently died. The two former had finished a game of billiards in the west end of the building, and were about retiring, when Mr. Barker detected a smell of smoke. Throwing open a door of the room they had not half an hour before been occupying, flames were discovered. Mr. Vail was partially disrobed. Hastily drawing on his boots he ran outside to the former bar-room on the west end of the building and burst open a door. He found the room full of flame and smoke. Efforts were at once made to save some of the furniture, but so swift was the progress of the flames through the old and dried timbers, that they succeeded in saving only a few personal effects. Mr. Vail went to the brow of the mountain and fired off both charges of a double barreled gun, the reports of which were heard by neighbors below and their attention attracted to the fire. They immediately hastened to the rescue, but could do nothing. The property belonged to ex-Judge E. W. Runyon, of this city. The house was originally erected by Cornelius Staats and Elias R. Kirkpatrick in 1852, and additions afterward made to the house by Mr. James Frame. The Staats Bros. were the last owners previous to its passing into the hands of Judge Runyon. Two New York gentlemen had an engagement with Mr. Vail to look at the property on Wednesday, with a view to purchasing it. They came out here on that day and visited the ruins.

The insurance is as follows: On building—agency of W. C. Butler, Niagara of New York, $1,250, Royal of London, $1,250, Merchants of Newark, $1,250, Trade of Camden, $1,250. Agency of Wm. Woodruff, Westchester of New York, $2,000, Liverpool, London & Globe, $1,250—total $8,500. On furniture—Pope & Co., German American, $1,000. Woodruff, North British and Mercantile, $800. Leonard, American of Newark, $600—total $2,400. Wallace Vail had, in addition, $300 insurance on his own personal property.

OBITUARY.

EX-COUNCILMAN JOHN HARRIS.

John Harris, the subject of this sketch, was born in 1810, at Green Brook, near Sebring's Mills. He came to Plainfield in 1831, and in the year 1832 commenced working at his trade, hatting, in the hat shop of John Simpson, on Second street. He remained in Mr. Simpson's employ about 16 years, and then left his trade and engaged in the fruit and candy business for a time, when he commenced the manufacture of mineral waters in what was known as the "old distillery" building, on Somerset street. In 1850 the place was burned down, and Mr. Harris removed his factory to Second street, where he successfully carried on the business until 1856, when he turned the same over to his sons, while he sought health in travel.

When Plainfield became a city in 1869, Mr. Harris was elected one of its first Aldermen. He also was a Justice of the Peace for over sixteen years. A few years since he served a term as Councilman. He has also been long identified with the Plainfield Building & Loan Association as a member and officer. He was also a prominent Odd Fellow, having been initiated in the old Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., Sept. 9th, 1846, and was also a charter member of the present Lodge of that number, when it was resuscitated Aug. 9th, 1872. He was also a prominent member of the M. E. church for the past fifty years. Mr. Harris was universally respected by all who knew him as an honest, upright citizen and christian man. His death was as sudden to his family as to the community at large. He had been confined to his room but a day or two, from what was considered a heavy cold. On the day of his death, he complained of a severe sore throat, and asked his son Thomas to hand him a looking glass. Raising himself up, he held the glass with a firm hand so that he could see the interior of his mouth, took a long gaze and fell back dead.

The funeral services were conducted at the M. E. Church, this city, under the auspices of Plainfield Lodge I. O. O. F. No. 44, which body turned out in large numbers. There was a large gathering, also of citizens. Rev. J. L. Hurlbut preached an eulogistic sermon over the remains which were afterward interred in the Methodist Cemetery on William street, the Odd Fellows escorting the hearse. David Weaver acted as Marshall, and Walter L. Hetfield, Assistant Marshall. Chaplain Eden L. Boice performed the burial ceremonies at the grave. The pall bearers were James K. Arnold, Clarkson Hamill, F. V. Weaver, James Clarkson, E. B. Titsworth, William Roe. Deceased leaves a wife and seven children to mourn his loss.

Resolutions.

Plainfield, N. J., March 27th, 1883.

The Committee on the decease of Bro. John Harris, P. G., Plainfield, No. 44 I. O. O. F., present the following:

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst by death, our most excellent and highly esteemed brother John Harris, P. G., thereby leaving a blank in Plainfield Lodge No. 44, I. O. O. F., that will never be filled, neither shall his voice be heard again in our Lodge. Therefore, we his Brothers, bow, in humble and reverent submission to the will of God, for he doeth all things well.

Resolved, That in our deep sorrow we unite with the family of the deceased brother, and in seeking consolation for ourselves, would remember them. We tender our heartfelt sympathy in this their time of affliction.

E. L. BOICE,
WALTER L. HETFIELD, } Committee.
JOHN VETTERLEIN.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Matt. Clark is the happy father of a daughter. The event occurred on Friday last.

Lawyer Edgar was at Plainfield last week attending an important case on trial.

Ronke & Edgar, vegetable dealers, are doing a thriving business in the green grocery line.

Nothing has been heard of the irrepressible John lately—he is keeping quiet—a burnt child dreads the fire.

Edmund D. Chamberlain has purchased of Martin V. B. Clark a tract of thirteen acres adjoining his farm on the Rahway road.

Our popular musician, Edgar Wilcox, has been very sick for the past week, but is now convalescing and will soon be able to attend to business.

William B. Chamberlain, residing on North avenue, who has been very sick for the past month with Pneumonia, is slowly recovering from the effects of the disease.

Charles Marsh who has resided in our town for a long time, will remove to Elizabeth next month. The farm will be occupied by William Leveridge, son of John H. Liveridge of N. Y.

Welch Bros. have purchased the house and lot on Westfield avenue, recently owned by the Dime Savings Institution of Plainfield. They expect to improve the property the coming year.

Oliver Badgley who has been living on Elmer street since last fall, expects to occupy the Leveridge house, formerly Sanford, on the corner of Elmer and Picton streets, April 1st.

An error was made in the last issue of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST in regard to the Town Committees' action as to the amount of the Town Treasurer's bond. The amount should have been $1,500 instead of $15,000 as printed.

The store formerly occupied by Sparkman & Seager, in Ferris building, Broad street, has been rented by Mrs. Wooley of Dunellen, N. J., who expects to open it as a clothing and dry goods store within a few weeks.

In one of the ponds in the vicinity of Westfield, which was stocked with carp a few years ago, three of the fish were found, about two weeks ago, dead. They were as large as shad and weighed at least four pounds each. The pond had a drain to it which became opened and allowed the water to run off. The ice had settled down at the bottom and smothered the fish.

The following resolutions were adopted by the Committee appointed at the last annual school meeting, and after being nicely engrossed were presented to Mr. Stephen S. Mapes.

"At the annual school meeting of the voters of Westfield, N. J., held in the school house on Tuesday evening, March 20th, 1883, Mr. James O. Clark presiding, announcement was made of the death of the aged father of Mr. Stephen S. Mapes, President of the Board of Trustees.

Remarks expressive of sympathy of the meeting were made by several gentlemen, and the undersigned were appointed a committee to present the matter in writing to our afflicted friend and fellow townsman. In doing this we realize the powerlessness of human words to comfort one so sorely bereaved, nevertheless we do feel it to be our duty to offer our friendly sympathy and condolence.

We sincerely pray that our Heavenly Father whose dispensations, though sometimes beyond our comprehension, are surely always meant for some good end, may himself pour the consolation into wounded hearts. To Him we commend our brother.

HENRY ROSWELL,
A. P. GRANT, } Committee.
WELLINGTON MOREHOUSE.

The following is also a copy of a letter received by Mr. S. S. Mapes, from his brethren in the church:

MR. S. S. MAPES,

Dear Brother:—We esteem it a privilege in this your hour of bereavement to extend to you and your family our brotherly christian sympathy.

Though we know that death is the common lot of all, yet when that hour comes to our friends, when the silver cord is loosed and the golden bowl is broken, and the spirit returns to God who gave it, our hearts are crushed by the blow, and surely when the sacred ties are broken, which are consecrated in the relation of God to us—a father and his children's hearts must be crushed and bleeding. Dark indeed would be such an hour; the revelation thrown no light on what lies beyond. But under the shadow of such an affliction, our burden of sorrow is lightened by anticipating the reunion of father, mother, children and friends, in that land of pure delight, which is the hope of every believer in Christ who is the Resurrection and the Life. This hope is yours through Christ our risen Saviour.

We offer our sympathy as Brethren in Christ.

Yours Fraternally,

W. L. Hoagland, David Sayres, James B. Ferris, E. L. Embree, W. B. Woodruff, B. J. Crosby, Geo. H. Brown, Robt. R. Sinclair, Wellington Morehouse, B. F. Ham.

Lyceum Hall was filled with a select audience on Wednesday evening last, it being the first appearance of the Westfield Dramatic Club (amateur), the Programme consisting of a farce in one act: "The Boston Dip," and "Woodcock's Little Game. A comedy in two acts, was well rendered in all its parts. The piano was presided over ably by the Misses Anthony's. The Dramatic Club deserves the patronage of the people of our town as all the proceeds above actual expenses are for some public benefit. They propose having another entertainment on the evening of May 2d.

Catarrh of the bladder, stinging irritation, inflammation, all Kidney complaints, cured by "Buchupaiba." $1.

USEFUL IN THE FAMILY.—We usually leave it to doctors to recommend medicines, but Parker's Ginger Tonic has been so useful in our family in relieving sickness and suffering that we cannot say too much in its praise.—Salem Argus.

Malaria, Chills and Fever, and Bilious attacks positively cured with Emory's Standard Cure Pills—an infallible remedy; never fail to cure the most obstinate, long-standing cases where Quinine and all other remedies had failed. They are prepared expressly for malarious sections, in double boxes, two kinds of Pills, containing a strong cathartic and a chill breaker, sugar-coated; contain no Quinine or Mercury, causing no griping or purging; they are mild and efficient, certain in their action and harmless in all cases; they effectually cleanse the system, and give new life and tone to the body. As a household remedy they are unequaled. For Liver Complaint their equal is not known; one box will have a wonderful effect on the worst case. They are used and prescribed by physicians, and sold by Druggists everywhere, or sent by mail. 25 and 50 cent boxes. Emory's Little Cathartic Pills, best ever made, only 15 cents. Sold by H. P. Reynolds, Plainfield, N. J.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead, and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. SMITH, KLINE & CO., Wholesale Agents, Philadelphia, and HALL & RUCKEL, New York. [illegible]

PROCEEDINGS OF THE BOARD OF CHOSEN FREEHOLDERS OF THE COUNTY OF UNION.

[OFFICIAL.]

ELIZABETH, N. J., March 1st, 1883.

The Board met in regular monthly session on Thursday, March 1st, 1883, at 2 o'clock p. m.

Present—Director Martine and Freeholders Briant, Clark, Doty, Halliday, Eller, Husbands, Isenmann, Mapes, Newbury, Oliver, Runkle, Smith, Stover, Thompson, White—16.

Absent—Freeholder Hubbard—1.

The minutes of the last meeting were read (excepting list of bills ordered paid) and on motion approved as read.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A communication from P. H. Gilhooly, Esq., late County Attorney, informing the Board that a writ of mandamus had been granted in case against the city of Rahway, was read and on motion received and ordered on file.

A report from the County Attorney was read in reference to the question of a Justice of the Peace acting in cases of sudden deaths, to the effect that a Justice cannot lawfully act except where the County Physician (or his representative) cannot be procured.

On motion received and ordered on file.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

From Committee on Elizabeth draw bridges.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Your Com. on draw bridges in the city of Elizabeth beg leave to report that the following appointments have been made and agreements signed for draw tenders, for one year, commencing January 1st, 1883, viz: For South Front street draw bridge, John W. Van Pelt, at the rate of $100 per year. For Bridge street draw bridge, Asher M. Clayton, at the rate of $40 per year.

Respectfully submitted,
PETER ELLER,
GEO. W. DOTY,
W. E. CLARK,
Committee.

January 4th, 1883.

On motion received and ordered on file.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

GENTLEMEN:—Your Com. on Rahway bridges met at Chamberlain's Hotel on February 8 to receive bids on Milton avenue draw bridge, across the Rahway river in the city of Rahway, and the lowest bid was that of the Pennsylvania Bridge Works for the sum of $6,550, with the old bridge. Capacity of the bridge to be 80 lbs. per square foot, with factor of four; span of bridge 120 feet long, 20 feet roadway, sidewalks 6 feet each, high truss. They also propose to take the old draw bridge material and put it back in place as it stood before the freshet, including approaches to same, complete, for the sum of $3,850. The Com. adjourned to await the opinion of the Board to decide whether to build new, or replace the old bridge, after obtaining an opinion of an expert, herewith submitted.

Post & McCord, Civil Engineers and Contractors, Iron Work for Buildings and Bridges, 102 Broadway.

NEW YORK, March 1st, 1883.

C. W. L. MARTINE, Esq.,
Director B. of C. F., Union County, N. J.

DEAR SIR:

I have measured all the iron in the draw bridge at Milton avenue, Rahway, N. J., and have made the diagram herewith submitted, showing the dimensions of all of the members of the trusses.

The weight of the iron work in the trusses and floor, the plank and stringers in the roadway and sidewalks, and the sidewalk railings will weigh at the rate of 30 pounds per square foot of floor surface.

The lightest load that should be provided for in any bridge is 40 lbs. per square foot of floor surface.

The diagram shows the strains arising from the above loads, tensile strains being in red ink, and compressive strains in black ink.

It will be seen that the above loads strain the iron in the first set of suspensions bars from the centre towards the ends, to 16,050 lbs. per square inch; the next set is 15,292 lbs. and the third set to 14,720 lbs. per square inch. The iron in these bars will stretch permanently under 26,000 lbs. per square inch, so that we have a factor of safety of only 1 62-100.

In the first post from centre towards end we have a strain per square inch of 9,095 lbs. The ultimate binding strength of this post per square inch is 17,000 lbs. A factor of safety of 1 87-100.

The splices in the first panel from centre towards end are very weak, and should have had cover plates top and bottom well riveted to flanges of channels, as should also the splices in the second panels of bottom chords.

My opinion is—1st. That the live load of 40 lbs. per square assumed in the calculations is too little, and that even under that assumed load the strains are too great upon the iron of the parts above mentioned.

2d. That the iron is injured by being bent and twisted, and should not be trusted to carry as much as new iron.

3d. That the chords, centre posts, end posts, main ties from ends to middle of spans, the counter rods and lateral rods might be used to rebuild the bridge; but that new main ties, new pins, and new vertical posts would have to be provided of larger sizes.

I would not recommend the replacing of the bridge of the dimensions and sizes of iron originally used.

Very respectfully yours,
ANDREW J. POST, C. E.

On motion received and ordered spread upon the minutes.

From Com. of the Whole to meet at Rahway:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders:

GENTLEMEN—

As a Com. of the Whole under instruction of the Board by resolution of February 1st, your Com. met in Rahway to examine and report to your honorable body in relation to the Monroe street, Milton avenue and St. George's avenue bridges of Rahway, would respectfully report that they met at Rahway on the 8th day of February and carefully examined said bridges, and would recommend for adoption the accompanying resolution.

W. E. CLARK.

On motion received and placed on file.

RESOLUTIONS.

By Freeholder Thompson:

Resolved, That $2,000 be paid to the Penn. Bridge Works on account of contract for bridge at Felter Lake, Clark township.

On motion adopted, sixteen affirmative votes, no negative votes.

By Freeholder Halliday:

Resolved, That the contract for building the Milton avenue draw bridge and approaches, in the city of Rahway, be awarded to the Penn. Bridge Works, for the sum of $6,550 with the old bridge.

Freeholder Newbury moved as an amendment that the county keep the old bridge.

Amendment lost.

On motion the resolution was adopted, sixteen affirmative votes, no negative votes.

By Freeholder Halliday:

Resolved, That the Committee on Milton avenue draw bridge, be empowered to renew the contract with Peter Van Pelt as bridge tender for said bridge, at the same compensation as last year, said contract expires March 1st, 1883.

On motion adopted by a unanimous vote.

By the Com. of the Whole:

Resolved, That the Com. on Rahway bridges be instructed to advertise for proposals for repairing the three arch bridge on St. George's avenue, Rahway.

On motion adopted by a unanimous vote.

By the Committee of the Whole:

Resolved, That the Com. on Rahway bridges be instructed to advertise for proposals for the erection of a low truss iron bridge on Monroe street, Rahway. Said bridge to be of one span of 112 ft.; 24 ft. roadway and two sidewalks of 7 ft. each, and also for the building of the abutment walls of said bridge, the walls to be each 66 feet in length and of such thickness as in the judgment of the committee as will be necessary to carry the bridge in safety, and also to advertise for proposals for removing the old bridge.

Freeholder Halliday moved to substitute the following:

Resolved, That the Committee on Rahway bridges be instructed to advertise for proposals for repairing the Monroe street stone bridge, Rahway.

Freeholder Clark offered as an amendment to the last resolution the following:

Resolved, That the Com. on Rahway bridges be and are hereby instructed to advertise for proposals for repairing the Monroe street stone bridge; also to advertise for the building of an iron high truss, 112 feet span, 24 feet roadway, and two sidewalks of 7 feet each, and the building of abutment walls necessary for the same; and also for the removal of the old bridge, the county retaining the iron railing, and to report to the Board at its next meeting.

Vote being taken, Freeholder Clark's amendment was declared lost.

Freeholder Halliday's substitute was lost by the following vote:

Affirmative—Freeholders Clark, Halliday, Isenmann and Thompson—4.

Negative—Director Martine and Freeholders Briant, Doty, Eller, Husbands, Mapes, Newbury, Oliver, Runkle, Stover, White—11.

Freeholder Halliday moved to amend the resolution by making the width of the roadway 40 feet and sidewalks 10 feet each.

Amendment lost by the following vote:

Affirmative—Freeholders Clark, Halliday, Isenman, Mapes, Thompson—5.

Negative—Director Martine and Freeholders Briant, Doty, Eller, Husbands, Newbury, Oliver, Runkle, Smith, Stover and White—11.

The resolution, as offered by the Committee of the Whole, was then adopted by the following vote:

COMMUNICATIONS.

A communication from the Common Council of the city of Rahway, also a petition signed by a large number of taxpayers of said city in reference to the building of the Monroe street bridge the full width of the street, was presented by Freeholder Halliday and read by the Clerk.

On motion received and ordered on file.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

From Com. on Rahway bridges.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

GENTLEMEN—

Your Com. on Rahway bridges would respectfully report that in accordance with a resolution passed at your last meeting, they have received proposals for masonry on the Monroe street bridge, and for superstructures of iron on Monroe street, Church street and Meadow avenue. First, as to iron superstructures, the lowest bid received for a high truss on Monroe street, 24 feet roadway, two sidewalks, 7 feet each, was $4,257; we also received several bids for a low truss, the lowest of which was $5,850 for 36 feet roadway, two sidewalks, of 10 feet each, and as this will present a much better appearance than the high truss and your Com. deem it the most desirable of the two as to strength and appearance, and as the difference in cost was less than $1,500, and in compliance with the request of the tax-payers of Rahway, as by petition presented to the Board, and after further investigation we are led to believe that the wide bridge would eventually be to the best interest of the county, we would therefore recommend the low truss be adopted. The lowest bid for Church street, with 20 feet roadway and one sidewalk, was $1,600, and lowest for Meadow avenue, 20 feet roadway and no sidewalks, was $1,200; therefore we advise the adoption of the accompanying resolution. As to the masonry, we would recommend that the contract for removing the old bridge be awarded to J. M. Weldon for $945, and the new masonry to W. Richardson & Terry, at $11.25 per cubic yard for first-class quarry stone and $7.50 for concrete foundations, in accordance with the accompanying resolution.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

A. J. HALIDAY,
W. J. THOMPSON,
GEORGE N. DOTY,
STEPHEN S. MAPES,
Committee.

On motion report received and ordered on file.

From Com. on Milton avenue draw bridge.

ELIZABETH, N. J., March 15, 1883.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

GENTLEMEN—

Your Com. on Milton avenue draw bridge, Rahway, beg leave to report that they have made a contract with Peter Van Pelt to take charge of the draw bridge at Milton avenue, Rahway, in accordance with a resolution adopted at a meeting of the Board held March 1st, 1883.

A. J. HALIDAY,
PETER ELLER,
WM. J. THOMPSON,
Committee.

RESOLUTIONS.

By the Director:

Resolved, That the two bills of Wm. Runkle amounting to $57.60 each, be paid when properly sworn to.

On motion adopted, fifteen affirmative votes, no negative votes.

By Freeholder Thompson:

Resolved, That eight hundred dollars be paid, to the Pennsylvania Bridge Works on account of contract for bridge at Felter's Lake, Clark Township.

On motion adopted, fifteen affirmative votes, no negative votes.

By Com. on Rahway bridges:

Resolved, That the Com. on Rahway bridges be authorized to contract with the Pennsylvania Bridge Company, of Pennsylvania, for the following bridges: On Monroe street for $5,850, Church street for $1,600, Meadow avenue for $1,200; also to contract with J. M. Weldon for removing the old bridge and debris at Monroe street for $945; also to contract with W. Richardson & Terry for quarry stone abutments at $11.25 per cubic yard, and $7.50 per cubic yard for concrete foundations and $25 for putting on coping.

Senator Vail being present, was invited to address the Board, which he did in behalf of the tax-payers of Rahway, advocating the building of a wider bridge at Monroe street, Rahway.

On motion the resolution was adopted, sixteen affirmative votes, no negative votes, Freeholder Clark having appeared and taken his seat.

PAYMENT OF BILLS.

The following bills, audited and approved, were read and ordered paid by a unanimous vote:

M. W. Mulford, bridge, Linden, $4.35; do, 9.19; Thos. Terrell, Jr., M. D., coroner's account, 18.81; Edward Miller, election, Fanwood, 6; W. Runkle, special deficiency, Plainfield, 57.60; do, 57.60; F. Clark, do, Rahway, 12; W. E. Clark, do, 24.30.

The Director having informed the Board that the Committee on Bonds were not ready to report at this meeting, it was resolved on motion of Freeholder Doty that the Committee report at the next meeting of the Board.

Freeholder Doty moved to adjourn.

Which was carried.

The Director declared the Board adjourned to Thursday, April 5th, 1883, at 2 o'clock p. m.

JOHN L. CROWELL, Clerk.

March 15th, 1883.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE ROMANCE OF ACTUAL LIFE.

HOW FRELINGHUYSEN WON HIS BRIDE.

'Cecile!'

'Yes, papa.'

She arose—a brown-eyed, brown-haired girl, with rare grace and sweetness in her manner—and approached.

Piercevel Deadwood pushed aside the mass of papers that lay on the desk before him and gazed steadily, almost fiercely, at his daughter. She returned the gaze with a timid, hesitating, Maynard look, while the rosy blushes of maiden modesty chased each other rapidly across her fair young features and leaped outward into the great Beyond.

'What brings young Frelinghuysen here so often?' asked the old man.

'His feet, I suppose,' was the answer, in low, shrinking tones. 'I noticed that he had them with him the last time he called'—and the girl shrank instinctively against her bustle.

'I want no nonsense,' replied the father. 'I have called you here to talk about your future. You must make a wealthy marriage.'

'Papa!'

'Don't interrupt me," he continued. 'I have spoken my piece, and have only to add that I am a Hard Man from Wayback.'

Sobbing as if her heart would break, Cecile went slowly to the sofa and sat down with a dull, sickening thud.

She had broken her bustle.

Suddenly she arose.

'I love Harold Frelinghuysen,' she said, 'and I will marry no other man.'

Two minutes later she was doing up her back hair.

* * * * *

'You are sure you love me?'

'Can you doubt me?' asked Harold.

'Yes,' replied the girl, 'I can, but I have decided not to—' and, kissing him warmly, she went away.

* * * * *

Percival Deadwood is again seated at his desk.

'You expect young Frelinghuysen today?' he says to Cecile.

Even while they are speaking the door opens and Harold enters.

'Have you come to redeem your promise?' asks the old man scornfully.

'I have,' is the reply, and Harold places $50,000 in bonds on the desk.

"How did you get this money, and where have you been all winter?"

Drawing himself up proudly, Harold answered: 'I have been door-keeper in a New York walking match.'

Over 5000 Druggists AND Physicians

Have Signed or Endorsed the Following Remarkable Document:

Messrs. Seabury & Johnson, Manufacturing Chemists, 21 Platt St., New York:

Gentlemen:—For the past few years we have sold various brands of Porous Plasters. Physicians and the Public prefer Benson's Capcine Porous Plaster to all others. We consider them one of the very few reliable household remedies worthy of confidence. They are superior to all other Porous Plasters or Liniments for external use.

Benson's Capcine Plaster is a genuine Pharmaceutical product, of the highest order of merit, and so recognized by physicians and druggists.

When other remedies fail get a Benson's Capcine Plaster.

You will be disappointed if you use cheap Plasters, Liniments, Pads or Electrical Magnetic toys.

A SURE REMEDY AT LAST. Price 25c. BENSON'S Medicated CORN and BUNION PLASTER.

GRANDFATHER CLOCKS—Three of them, in first-class running order, each over 100 years old, for sale cheap. Can be seen at Mayer's Jewelry Store, North ave., near depot. [illegible]

SPEER'S PORT GRAPE WINE

Used in the principal Churches for Communion purposes.

Excellent for Ladies and Weakly Persons and the Aged.

Excellent for Females and Weakly Persons.

Speer's Port Grape Wine FOUR YEARS OLD.

THIS CELEBRATED NATIVE WINE is made from the juice of the Oporto Grape, raised in this country. Its invaluable Tonic and Strengthening Properties are unsurpassed by any other Native Wine. Being the pure juice of the Grape, produced under Mr. Speer's own personal supervision, its purity and genuineness are guaranteed. The youngest child may partake of its generous qualities, and the weakest invalid use it to advantage. It is particularly beneficial to the aged and debilitated, and suited to the various ailments that affect the weaker sex. It is in every respect A WINE TO BE RELIED ON.

SPEER'S P. J. Sherry.

The P. J. SHERRY is a wine of Superior Character, and partakes of the rich qualities of the grape from which it is made. For Purity, Richness, Flavor and Medicinal Properties, it will be found unexcelled.

SPEER'S P. J. Brandy.

This BRANDY stands unrivalled in this country, being far superior for medicinal purposes. IT IS A PURE distillation from the grape, and contains valuable medicinal properties. It has a delicate flavor, similar to that of the grapes, from which it is distilled, and is in great favor among first-class families. See that the signature of ALFRED SPEER, Passaic, N. J., is over the cork of each bottle. Sold by all Druggists. [illegible]

POETRY.

A BACHELOR'S CONFESSION.

Bruce Carl is true to Carrie,
Gay Fred makes love to Nell;
But I—how shall I marry,
Who love all girls so well?

Since Isadore's a wonder,
And Lilly is so fair,
And Gabrielle puts yet under
Such striking, sweet despair.

Since Kate's a glorious beauty,
And Maud is love's fair shrine,
And Madge is queen of duty,
To choose who can divine?

Amid the "Tasseled garden,"
Bright eyes and silken curls,
I pass, with fear for warden,
The most bewitching girls.

My art each charm discovers,
No grace eludes my eye;
I wish them happy lovers,
And still I pass them by.

'Tis sweet in fond rotation
To call each face my own,
And dream each day creation
Designed for me alone.

I'm not an icy Stoic,
My heart lies in my hand;
And one, were she heroic,
Could chain me where I stand.

So, Carl, cling fast to Carrie,
Gay Fred, make love to Nell;
Some day—perhaps I'll marry—
But whom I must not tell.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

IN THE NICK OF TIME.

We are a lonely couple—my old man and I. For nearly fifty years we have lived among the Welsh hills in our little cottage, a quiet, uneventful life. Nearly three years ago the iron horse came steaming through our peaceful valley, bearing to us, as it rushed by, some little glimpses of the great, busy world from which it came—stopping a moment at the tiny station four miles away, then flying on again out into the heart of the hills beyond.

This passing of the noon express came to be the one exciting event of our lives; and we never failed to watch it out of sight as it wound its way around the curves, and among the hills that stretched away as far as the eye could see.

One lovely June evening I sat watching for Roger, who had gone over the hills to the station. At last he came in sight, the tired old pony jogging along at his own pace.

'A letter, Linda,' he said, as he stopped at the gate.

A hurried to take it, for a letter was no common thing among us quiet country people. It proved to be from a half-sister of Roger's, from whom he had heard nothing for years. She was the child of his father by a second marriage, and had, since her own marriage, always resided in London. Her letter requested permission to send her daughter Bessie to us for a visit. She wished to remove her from the attentions of a young gentleman who had of late become very devoted, and thinking the entire change of scene might drive the foolish fancy from Bessie's head, she had concluded to write to us to take her for a time.

"Well, she must come, of course," said Roger, at last, breaking the silence into which we had fallen after the perusal of the letter.

'Of course,' I assented, still feeling that I could not have my quiet home broken in upon by a stylish lady, who would ridicule our simple way of living, and be filled with innumerable wants and whims.

'But, after all,' Roger went on in his quiet way, that was always the same, no matter to whom he was speaking, 'I think Harriet must have been in a sore strait to think of us, for she was always a little apt to hold her head higher than the rest of us. But the girl must come, and we will do our best by her, and try to make her stay pleasant. You had better answer the letter to-night, Linda.'

So the letter was written, and the invitation made as cordial as possible.

In about a week she came, Roger driving over to the station with the cart and horse to meet her and carry her luggage. I stood in the door as they drove up, trying my best to appear delighted and hospitable; but one look into that girlish face drove away all fears I had entertained in regard to airs and graces. The curling hair was pushed back under a net, her cheeks were flushed with excitement, and the babyish lips looked almost ready to quiver, as a home-sick look crept into the brown eyes raised to mine. I took her right into my arms—I could not help it; I have wondered since how I ever came to do it; and the child—for child she was it looks—laid her head on my shoulder, and cried a few home-sick tears; then we went into the house, where the tea was waiting, and, though she scarcely touched a mouthful, still I think before the meal was over we had grown pretty well acquainted; and I at least, had determined to do all in my power to bring back the sparkle to those lovely eyes, and the bloom of happiness to those cheeks.

She retired to rest early that night; I accompanied her into the great, cool west room, which she was to occupy; and seating herself by the window, she told me all about her life that was connected with her coming to us.

'I know very well why I was sent here,' she said, 'and at first a rebellious feeling took possession of me; but after I saw your dear, motherly face, I was glad I came; and I mean to be content if I cannot be happy.'

'We mean you shall be happy, dear,' said I, kissing her tenderly. 'You are tired now, and a good night's rest will do wonders for you. Good night, now, and pleasant dreams.'

'Good night, auntie, and thank you for your kindness.'

Then I closed the door softly, and went down to where Roger sat in the deepening twilight.

'Why, Roger, she is nothing more than a child. I don't believe she is hardly a day over sixteen years old.'

'Yes, she is, Linda; she told me she was nearly nineteen as we came from the station.'

'Roger,' I said after a pause.'

'Well, dear?'

'I think she looks as our Daisy would have looked at her age, if she had live.'

'I don't know, Linda—perhaps,' said Roger, with a deep sigh.

For the old man and woman that we were, the memory of our three-year-old darling, buried so many years ago, was still a very tender spot in our hearts, and, strange as it may seem, we rarely spoke of her; for it seemed so hard to part with our only one, and a gloom would settle over us whenever her name was mentioned.

So the days came and went; and the pure mountain air seemed to breathe health and rosiness into Bessie's cheeks and wide open eyes.

I called her a child, for child she seemed to me; and Roger took her at once into his great, loving heart. Ah, there was no one so good and kind as Roger in all the world to me. Although our heads had whitened together, and the storms of life had beaten hard upon us both, still we loved each other with all the fervor of youth, for our hearts could never grow cold.

Many were the rambles that Bessie took among the surrounding hillsides, for in that season of the year the hills were crowded with flowers, and all nature seemed at it best. Night after night she would come home, her basket laden with the rare blossoms, or some curious leaves or stones which she had picked up where the railroad had cut its way. One spot in particular was her favorite resort. Just at the left of the house stood a high hill, and the railroad curved directly around the base; nothing could be seen beyond the curve from either direction. Above the track, on the side of the hill next our house, was a huge tree that had stood there for years. There Roger had constructed for Bessie a rude seat beneath the spreading branches, where she would take her book and sit for hours at a time, unseen by all, yet having a fair view of everything for miles around.

A brook gurgled below, beneath a bridge over which the line was laid. Although but an insignificant stream, the banks on both side were high and steep, and a single misstep would lead to destruction.

Bessie sat one day in her favorite retreat under the old tree. I had rung the bell for dinner, for Roger was at work in a distant field. Bessie began collecting her books, preparing to go to the house, when she heard the whistle of the noon express.

She thought: 'I will wait until the train goes by, just to see the people; perhaps I may see some one I know; at any rate, they cannot possibly see me.'

So, turning her eye toward the b ridge, she nestled back against the trunk of the old tree, when what was her surprise and horror to see the rails which spanned the bridge entirely gone, and nothing but certain death awaiting the inmates of the coming train.

Roger had spoken that morning of several rough-looking fellows who had been seen hanging around the station, and who seemed to be inspecting the line in both directions, and undoubtedly to select a place where they might, from motives of revenge, remove a portion of the rails and wreck the train. This last was conjectured by us after all was over, although no particular notice was taken of them at the time.

To think was to act with Bessie; and she knew if the lives of the people were saved, it must be through her instrumentality.

The train was but a little distance off, and what she did must be done quickly.

Hastily untying the broad sash of red ribbon which encircled her waist, she tied it to one end of her parasol, and rushing down to the line—right in the teeth of the monster that was bearing down upon her—she wave frantically the signal of danger.

Flying down the line, calling at the top of her voice for them to stop, although her words were unheard in the roar of the coming train, she reached the curve and rushed wildly on, still holding aloft the streaming red flag.

Oh, if they would but stop before the bend was reached! Was it possible that the mighty wheels slackened a little in their fearful speed?

Yes, the shriek of the whistle told her she was seen and understood. Slower, slower went the wheels, until at last, just as the curve was reached, the long train stopped, and the people looked out to ascertain the cause of the delay. But where was the brave girl who had risked her own life to save the lives of strangers? Down on the ground, almost under the very wheels, poor Bessie lay, her courage having suddenly forsaken her when she saw the danger was over.

Many hands were extended to raise her; consciousness was finally restored, and the story told from her trembling lips as she pointed in the direction of the curve. Several of the passengers, together with the driver, stoker, and guard of the train, returned from an investigation of the disturbed track, soon made plain to those present the nature of the danger from which they had been rescued.

One of the passengers, who had gone to view the rails, now came up, and turning to the guard, said:

'This has been done by human hands.'

The speaker was a tall, erect, finely built young man, probably about twenty-five years of age; dark brown hair, a skin that was darkened by the exposure of the sun, and a pair of brave, serious, blue eyes. As he spoke, Bessie raised her head from the lap of the lady where she had been laid, and a single word escaped lips.

'Walter!'

Low and tremulous as the word was spoken, the young man turned instantly, and for the first time noticed Bessie.

'This is the young lady who so bravely —' began the guard; but, before he could finish his sentence, Walter had taken one stride to where Bessie lay, and raising her in his arms, clasped her to his heart.

'Bessie, my darling! Thank heaven, I have found you at last!'

The surprise of the people present may well be imagined.

'How came you here, Bessie, and just at this time?'

'Oh, Walter, how glad I am that I saved your life, and the lives of all these friends?' said she, looking around upon them with her eyes full of happy tears. 'My uncle lives yonder in that white cottage—ah! there he comes now.'

The stpping of the train had aroused the interest of several neighboring families, and the hospitable offers of dinners and conveyances for carrying passengers to the station were liberally poured forth.

'Uncle Roger,' said Bessie, as we walked slowly homeward, 'this is my best and dearest friend, Walter King. I know you will honor and respect him for his own sake, as well as mine, when you come to know him.'

'I should be willing to trust to your judgment in anything,' said Roger, 'and any friend of yours shall be mine also, if he will.'

'With all my heart, my dear sir,' said Walter, in his frank, pleasant way, extending his hand, which was most cordially taken.

'Bessie,' said Walter, as they sat alone in the little sitting-room after dinner, 'I was on my way to a distant town, to engage in business in a large machine shop there.' I had an excellent offer, and after you left home I cared but little where I went; anything was better than staying there, where we spent so many happy hours together, and felt that our happiness was over. I tried all manner of means to procure your address, but in vain. I called at your house one day, and your mother literally turned me out of doors. So many people prefer money to industry, and sneer at the brown hand of the working man,' said he bitterly.

'But, Walter, so long as I am true to you, what need we mind what anyone says or thinks? You know I am ready and willing to go with you anywhere.'

'Yes, I do know it my darling!'

Well, to make a long story short, thro' the kindness of the rough, though generous-hearted farmers, the passengers were all conveyed to the next station that night, where a branch road would carry them to their journey's end. Walter, however, remained with us. Many letters which he showed us proved beyond all doubt that he was a mechanic of the first-class; and his clear blue eyes and brown, toil-hardened hands gave proof of an honest soul within, and steady and industrious habits. Indeed, his only crime was that of poverty—and that was a terrible one in the eyes of Harriet Worthington. Wealth and position were her idols—the gods to whom she bows; and she scrupled not to break the heart of one so good and sweet as her own Bessie.

One quiet dreamy morning about a month after the events just related, there was a wedding in the pretty church near our cottage among the hills. A little girl with a very resolute face and eyes full of happy, loving light, and a man thoughtful beyond his years, kind, brave, tender-hearted, were made man and wife.

A letter was dispatched the same day, informing Bessie's parents of her marriage.

Walter went directly to the distant town which he had intended to visit, to prepare a home for his bride, leaving her with us, safely sheltered in the embrace of the kindly hills.

Of course Bessie's mother was terribly angry at first; her father, a weak little man, who was content to walk in the path marked out for him by his wife, made no serious objection—in fact, I think he rather liked Walter from the first. But such anger cannot last, and reconciliation soon followed, especially when Walter was found to be a money-making man, and sure to make his mark in the world.

Every Summer Bessie and Walter come to us, for no one is quite like 'Aunt Linda' and 'Uncle Roger' to Bessie, who will always seem to us the brown-eyed child who made our life so bright for a few short months, although her own seemed so dark.

And Roger and I have never regretted our part in the work of making two young hearts happy.

WISDOM FOR BOYS.

Do you wish to make your mark in the world? Do you wish to have the respect of the respectable! Do you desire to acquire a competence of this world's goods? Do you wish to be men? Then observe the following rules:

Hold integrity sacred.
Observe good manners.
Endure trials patiently.
Be prompt in all things.
Make few acquaintances.
Pay your debts promptly.
Yield not to discouragements.
Lie not for any consideration.
Join hands only with the virtuous.
Keep your mind from evil thoughts.
Watch carefully over your passions.
Respect the counsel of your parents.
Dare to do right; fear to do wrong.
Question not the veracity of friends.
Sacrifice money rather than principle.
Never try to appear what you are not.
Go not into the society of the vicious.
Consider well; then decide positively.
Use your leisure time for improvement.
Injure not another's reputation in business.

FASHION NOTES.

Gathered flounces have been revived.

Cashmere shawls never go out of vogue.

Spiders of oxidized silver are worn as lace pins.

Classic and æsthetic styles will prevail in London.

New English straws come in every shade of color.

Parisian women wear only small crinolets and busties.

Broad-brimmed picturesque hats, laden with ostrich plumes, are worn by young ladies.

Any other than chatelaine watches for women under forty are considered old-fashioned.

The long nurse apron front, with panier above it around the hips, is a favorite style for spring costumes.

New mulls and silk muslins are dotted and figured in silk broche spots, dots, diamonds, flowers and leaves.

Jackets of velvet of the new royal French blue are worn, trimmed with gold soutache and small gilt buttons.

Crinkled Japanese silk is made into large square neckerchiefs, which are folded three-corner, shawl-shape, and worn with house toilets.

An attractive reception dress is made of moonlight blue satin, with embroidered silver thread all over its surface.—White lace flounces are the trimming for such a dainty dress.

The Connaught jersey is for spring costumes. This is made of ribbed wool cloth, or net of light quality in dark, stylish colors, and is trimmed across the front with wide black braids in hussar stripes.

Plump, fat spiders in golden webs are superseding owls as decorations for fans, books, plaques, etc., and at a party in Washington the other evening a dress which attracted much attention was embroidered in this new fashion.

Overskirts on imported dresses for spring have a deep square apron, reaching almost to the lower flounces of the underskirt, and have very few wrinkles across them. Passementerie cords, with a tassel on each end, are arranged on the back of basques and occasionally on side panels of heavy dresses.

I said you had stolen the sermon. I find I was wrong; for on returning home, and referring to the book whence I thought it was taken, I found it there."

WISE WORDS.

In order to deserve a good friend we must become one.

Never borrow more than you can pay back, and never lend more than you can borrow.

What we charitably forgive will be recompensed, as well as what we charitably give.

An able man shows his spirit by gentle words and resolute actions; he is neither hot nor timid.

He who is puffed up with the first gale of prosperity will bend beneath the first blast of adversity.

The incapacity of men to understand each other is one of the principal causes of their ill-temper towards each other.

The chief properties of wisdom are to be mindful of things past, careful of things present and provident of things to come.

With love, the heart becomes a fair and fertile garden, glowing with sunshine and warm hues, and exhaling sweet odors.

Those who excel in strength are not most likely to show contempt in weakness. A man does not despise the weakness of a child.

When a woman smiles at an affront, one of two things are certain. She has either lost all modesty, or she is assured of her revenge.

As we are bound not to inflict unnecessary sufferings on animals, so we are obliged to avert all that tends to add to the sorrows and trials of our common humanity.

If you stick your finger into the water and take it out, it is in vain you look for the hold, and equally so it is to suppose, whatever space you occupy, that the world will miss you when you die.

He who is great when he falls is great in his prostration, and is no more an object of contempt than when men tread on the ruins of sacred buildings, which men of piety venerate no less than if they stood.

The Constitutionalist.

W. L. FORCE & A. L. FORCE,
EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

THE PURPOSE OF DEMOCRACY.

Had the Democratic party national sway in the United States it would—

Abolish needless taxation.

Reduce revenue to the legitimate wants of Government.

Levy tariff duties with practical intelligence and exact justice, so as to protect in reality every business pursuit and species of labor.

Block the designs of mercenary monopoly, now artfully seeking to make the power of money supreme and popular rights subservient.

Advance the prosperity of home industry by enlarging the foreign demand for its various productions.

Bring back under the American flag ocean commerce, once the pride and profit of the country.

Make honesty and ability official requisites, and restrict the number of office-holders to actual necessity.

Maintain the principles of true Republicanism by re-establishing and enforcing plainness and utility in every branch of the public service.

Defend at all hazards and in the face of the whole world the dignity of American citizenship, and the individual rights of each citizen, whether native born or naturalized.

Such sketches the action of the Democratic party did it possess full governmental authority, and the welfare of the people calls for an early realization of that event.

A VICIOUS SYSTEM.

In England, during the past month, died a gentleman bearing the title of Lord Haldon, but who was known originally as Sir Lawrence Palk. He entered Parliament in 1854 as a Conservative, and in 1880 was raised to the peerage. He had no statesman ability, his name was never associated with any public measure, and yet for nearly thirty years he sat as a member of Parliament.

Why was he there?

Because he was rich, owned large landed estates, and subscribed liberally to campaign funds.

That tells the story and reveals the style of English law-makers. They must be rich in money and land and willing to spend freely for election purposes. Poor, or even moderately circumstanced men, however distinguished for talents and purity of character, have no chance there. Selfish aristocracy rules defiantly.

It is a fraud upon the governed masses.

We cannot denounce it too severely, yet we are compelled to admit the humiliating fact, that a similar vicious system is gaining foothold in this land of professed free representation.

Senators and Representatives, some of them utterly unfitted for the position, sit in the Congress of the United States solely because of personal wealth corruptly used to influence their election.

It is not only disgraceful to the American name but dangerous to the stability of freedom.

It is robbery of the people and treason against the Constitution.

It ought to be at once and forever stopped.

THIS YEAR'S SCHOOL TAX.

Comptroller Anderson has computed the school tax for 1883, and the County Collectors were notified on Saturday last of the amounts apportioned to their respective counties.

This tax is levied at the rate of $4 to each child in the State between the ages of 5 and 18 years, as shown by the last school census, and the tax is then apportioned to the counties on the basis of taxable property in each, as shown by the latest returned valuations. The number of school children in the State, according to the last census, was 343,897, and the amount of tax to be raised is therefore $1,375,588, payable by Jan. 1, 1884.

The amount for which each county is liable is as follows:

Atlantic	$19,196 16
Bergen	40,169 38

AN OIL WELL IN NEW JERSEY.

While Willard Thompson was watching cattle near the ore mine of the Lopatcong Mining Company, in the village of Pleasant Hollow, N. J., about eight miles from Washington, his attention was attracted by a bubbling sound, when he discovered a fluid of a greasy appearance flowing out of the ground. He told his older brother, who spread the news. A quantity of the fluid was secured, and it was found to be oil containing much water, with a rusty looking scum and a very strong smell of petroleum. When poured upon a piece of brown paper the latter rapidly ignited. This is the first appearance of oil in that part of the country and the people are greatly excited. The spring is on a wood lot owned by Andrew Burr, a colored man. The oil oozes from the apex of a pear-shaped mound. Burr has refused $3,000 for three acres of the land, saying that he does not want any noise around his dwelling.

It is a settled fact that the New Jersey Central Railroad has purchased the narrow gauge road to Atlantic City and will at an early date alter it to a broad gauge. This stroke of policy upon the part of the Jersey Central not only places it in possession of a piece of property which if properly managed can be made profitable, but also affords it an outlet to Philadelphia and creates additional competition between it and its powerful rival, the Pennsylvania Railroad, which will in the end doubtless result in benefit to the public.—Camden Democrat.

The Ohio delegation in the last House of Congress stood 14 Republicans, 5 Democrats. In the next Congress it will stand 13 Democrats, 7 Republicans. These figures are respectfully referred to those editorial gentlemen who are making boobies of themselves by foully declaring that the grand old party of Democracy, of the people, and of Constitutional liberty, is dead. The Democratic party will never die, and Billingsgate opposition, of pen or tongue, only adds to its strength. You must look in another direction, gentlemen, for a political corpse on which to pour malignant abuse. Democracy is a hundred years old and vigorous as of yore.

The Governor has signed the bill to prevent bribery at primaries, conventions and elections. This law is an improvement over the old one in several respects but particularly in that it begins at the very root of the evil—at the primaries, caucuses and conventions. So long as ambitious, unscrupulous office-seekers could buy up delegates and pack conventions, elections were made a farce whether conducted with or without bribery. In either case it was money that secured the office and it mattered but little whether it was spent to secure the nomination or was received directly by the individual voter, its effect in preventing an honest election was the same.—Burlington Enterprise.

NEUTRALIZED!

In what way a prevalent evil may be shorn of its power to harm.

Malaria is a broad name for many diseases—all originating in blood poisoning. Bilious fever, the typhus and typhoid fevers and chills and fever are prominent members of the family. Malaria defies alike the builders, the plumbers and the physicians. Despairing of ordinary treatment the latter almost unanimously recommend BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER as the greatest and essential specific of the age. These plasters act upon the liver, spleen, bowels and kidneys.

Worn over the region of the liver, and upon the back over the kidneys, they ward off malaria like an armor. No other plasters do this.

When you purchase, satisfy yourself that the word CAPCINE is cut in the middle of the plaster. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, N. Y. Highest awards at International Expositions.

GOVERNOR Ludlow has appointed, as Prosecutor of Somerset county, John D. Bartine, whose nomination for the position was rejected by the Senate recently.

NONE of our citizens attended the Vanderbilt ball, but all had the privilege of reading the full account of it in the next day's paper, and were probably just as happy as the invited guests.

THE aerial suspension trick, as performed in this city recently by Prof. Taylor has been fully exposed, with illustrations, in the Philadelphia Press. The lady was enclosed in a steel frame, of ingenious construction.

IT is asserted that owing to the disastrous failure of the grape crop in France last year, New Jersey will be called upon to export at least a hundred per cent more of "pure native French wines" this season than last.

THE following were drawn on Tuesday last from Plainfield as petit jurors for the May term: Ephriam C. Morse, Louis F. Wadsworth, Vincent W. Nash, F. Adelbert Dunham, Asa Collier and Edmund W. Peck.

THE bill passed by the Legislature requiring that all goods manufactured in the State Prison shall be stamped or branded with the name of that institution, has, by the signature of the Governor, become a law.

APRIL fool candy is one of the novelties at confectionery stores. On opening it all sorts of things are found. Cayenne pepper, sawdust, corks and China babies are a few of the treasures thus obtained. It sells for about 80 cents a pound.

REPORTS of peach crop failures come in very slowly this winter. Only 19 have come to hand thus far. A year ago 27 had been received—that is up to April 1st, 1882. This is somewhat discouraging to the lovers of this delicious fruit.

"BOOTS blacked inside"—is a sign placarded around different parts of New York city. This to some people may be a very decided improvement on the old way—but we fail to see it. We shall still stick to the good old fashion of having our boots "blacked" on the out-side.

"LAMBS" have no business guessing at the weights of hogs. The system of measurement by experts comes within a few pounds of the actual weight, then by depositing a sufficient number of guesses on each side of the measurement calculation, the expert generally hits the exact weight.

WEEK after week, and month after month, we have been crying "Oh, for an Opera House;" consequently we may be pardoned any personal satisfaction felt at the certainty that the Stillman Music Hall will be soon commenced. Within the last few days new subscriptions have been secured, and a beginning is promised "inside of a month."

ADVERTISING—that is in papers known to have large circulations—pays, or smart business men in the cities would not pay such prices for it as the following: The Chicago Tribune, for a column a year receives $26,000. The New York Herald receives for its lowest price column $30,823, and for its highest $348,600. The New York Tribune for the lowest $29,764, and for its highest $65,648.

THE ex-Rev. George C. Miln, who has left the pulpit for the stage, evidently does not believe in the theatrical maxim, "Begin at the bottom and work up to the top." He has sailed for London, where he will spend six months in studying under John Ryder, a veteran actor, after which he will return and seek star engagements. Mrs. Miln is the sister of Mr. A. T. Shotwell of this city, and the possessor of many friends in Plainfield.

THE North avenue market under the management of N. J. Randolph in Flagg's Hotel building, is to make a new departure to-morrow morning by opening in connection a fruit and vegetable department under the charge of Abraham Francis. The latter is too well known as a veteran marketman well acquainted with the tastes of our citizens, to need an introduction. On his stands will be found all things in their season at the same low prices adopted by the market.

THE Governor of Georgia, the Governor of Pennsylvania and the Governor of Ohio have each been the presidents of base ball clubs. Senator Edmunds, of Vermont, also found such an office a stepping-stone to higher honors.

AN excellent soap-bubble preparation is composed of oleate of soda and glycerine, and from it bubbles two feet in diameter and exceeding brilliancy can be blown. Some of these have been kept forty-eight hours under glass. So 'tis said.

SNOW to the depth of about three inches fell on Friday last, which was quite an unusual thing considering the lateness of the season. The first month of Spring has given us some weather which would do credit to quite a severe Winter.

THE ladies of the Grace Church Guild will give an entertainment entitled "The Seasons," at the Stewart Mansion, corner of Peace and Sixth streets, during Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, the 17th, 18th and 19th insts. H. M. S. Pinafore will be on exhibition at 8 o'clock.

THERE will be a consecration of the Church of the Heavenly Rest at Evona, Thursday, April 12th, 1883, at 11 o'clock, a. m., by the Right Rev. John Scarborough, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese. Evening service, with confirmation at 8 o'clock.

IN our advertising columns to-day, appears the new horse and wagon of John A. Thickstun, ready to deliver orders to any part of the city. Now is the time and the corner of Third street and Madison avenue is the place, to buy superphosphates, manures and all kinds of fertilizers.

IN this issue Messrs. Geo. Watson & Co., of Newark, make their announcement for the Season. In the Spring a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of clothes, and smiles with pleasure as he notes the cost of Watson's latest styles. Read the advertisement carefully and inspect the goods before purchasing elsewhere.

THE American Queen under its new management reaches us improved greatly in many particulars, but in none is advancement more apparent than in its music and dramatic department. This latter is edited by Mr. George Wotherspoon, a critic thoroughly acquainted with these matters and entirely competent to write of such.

MR. Wm. I. Marshall's lecture at the Congregational chapel during Thursday evening of last week, was attended by a thoroughly satisfied audience. The Ladies Aid Society, which is doing so much for the entertainment of the public and the benefit of the church, certainly deserves the encouragement of the community and the desired financial results.

THE attention of the Treasury Department has been called to the fact that the three-cent nickle pieces are open to the same objection, as regards the designation of their value, as the new five cent nickle piece. The word "cents" does not appear on the three-cent piece, and the only designation of its value is the Roman numeral "III" on the reverse.

THE Seventh Annual Sociable of St. Mary's T. A. B. Society, held during Thursday evening of last week in St. Mary's Hall, was a success in every particular. From the Resolution adopted at the Council meeting of March 5th, fixing the salaries of the various city officers:

"Captain of Police, $700 per year, in full for all services."

From the Quarterly Report of City Judge Good, presented to the Council at its regular meeting of April 2d:

"Half fine of Jacob Blimm, to W. S. Chase complainant, $25."

Personalia.

Mr. Fred. Bobiel of Liberty street, sailed on Wednesday for Rotterdam Germany, intending to be gone about eight weeks.

Mr. Wm. Whelock desires to notify the publishers of "The History of Union and Middlesex Counties" that the copy of that work left at his residence may be obtained by calling at the office of this paper.

AT Laing's Hall this morning at 10 o'clock, will commence the sale by auction of the furniture, carpets, and household goods of Mr. J. Marston. Great bargains in elegant articles may be obtained.

In another column we publish the resolutions of regret passed by the Plainfield Saengerbund expressing sympathy with the loss sustained by their associate, Fire Commissioner Flaig, in the death of a little boy and girl. Both died within six weeks.

The windows of the Hon. Wm. B. Maxson's office in the First National Bank building, have been artistically lettered by Mr. John H. Dunning, in a manner that attracts the admiring attention of those passing up Park avenue.

President of the Council, Robert L. Livingston, returns from his participation in the opening of the trout season with a few hundred pounds of the speckled beauties. As one of his many friends that have profited by his skill, we hope he will live until we forget his generosity.

For Chief.

The following nominations have already been made for Chief and Assistants of the Plainfield Fire Department:

Gazelle—For Chief, F. A. Vail; 1st Assistant, C. H. Smith.

Zephyr—For Chief, F. A. Vail; 1st Assistant, Geo. Hooker, Jr.; 2d. Assistant, Nicholas Conway.

Warren—For Chief, A. L. Carney; 1st Assistant, W. L. Wright; 2d. Assistant, Nicholas Conway.

Plainfield's Good Fortune.

The Methodist Episcopal Church in Plainfield has changed its pastor. By the appointment of Bishop Foss, at the session of the Newark Conference just closed, Rev. Thomas H. Stockton, who has been for three years pastor in this place, is sent as a Missionary to South America; and in his place Rev. Alexander H. Tuttle, of Elizabeth, becomes the pastor of the M. E. Church here. Rev. Mr. Tuttle is known as one of the ablest preachers in the Conference. He will preach his opening sermons next Sunday morning and evening.

Resolutions of Regret.

WHEREAS the hand of Divine Providence has removed from this life the beloved children of our fellow member Solomon Flaig; therefore, in view of the great loss sustained by our associate and the affliction that has thus fallen on him and his wife, be it

Resolved, That the members of the Plainfield Saengerbund do herewith express their sincere sympathy with the parents of the deceased, and hope that their sorrow will find consolation in the surety that the little ones have found rest and peace in the arms of He who said "Suffer Little Children to Come Unto Me."

New Postal Note.

The new postal notes are likely to be very popular, particularly those for small amounts, as already 459 out of every thousand orders are for $5 or less. The limit of single money-orders is raised from $50 to $100, the following scale being adopted: Not exceeding $10, 8 cents; $10 to $15, 10 cents; $15 to $30, 15 cents; $30 to $40, 20 cents; $40 to $50, 25 cents; $50 to $60, 30 cents; $60 to $70, 35 cents; $70 to $80, 40 cents; $80 to $100, 45 cents. The reduction on sums under $10 from present money-order rates is one-fifth. Sums not exceeding $5 will be but 3 cents, or a reduction of about two-thirds the present rates. The postal notes will be issued payable to bearer simply, there being no expressive letter of advice attending it, and they will be good for three months, after which time the bearer, if he neglects to get his money, must send to Washington. The object of this is to prevent it being used for general circulation.

The Grove Street Bridge.

The universal feeling of the community against the narrow bridge over Green Brook at Grove street, that renders so unsightly one of the handsomest thoroughfares in the city, has been understood by the Union County Board of Freeholders, and so far as lays in the power of that Board steps to remedy the evil have been taken. At a meeting of the Committee on Bridges held last Monday, work on the bridge was ordered to cease, and the action of the Somerset County Board at its regular meeting next Tuesday, is awaited. If the latter agree to the plans proposed by the former, the bridge at Grove street will be removed to Water street and that bridge will be transferred to the brook at Cadmus' Mills where a new one is necessary. It is then proposed to build a bridge the full width of Grove street (which will only cost about $1,100 additional) and the demands of the locality will thus be satisfied.

A New Jersey Centenarian.

Last Thursday Mrs. Patience Hopping, of Atlantic Highlands, N. J., widow of the late Judge James Hopping, celebrated her one hundredth birthday at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Mary Leonard, of Leonardville. She was born in the eventful year of 1783, the year in which the treaty of peace was signed between America and England. She was a cousin and playmate of the Hon. Garrett D. Wall, well-known in New Jersey history. The names of her kindred are in the register of the officers and men of the New Jersey regiment that fought in the Revolutionary war. Her father and brothers fought at Monmouth, Trenton, Princeton, Red Bank, Brandywine, and the battle of Long Island. Mrs. Hopping has three surviving children (Edward and John Hopping and Mrs. Mary Leonard), seventeen grandchildren, twenty great grandchildren, and three great-great-grandchildren. She is a little above the medium height, her step is elastic, her eyes are undimmed and she has the strength of many a woman of sixty. Her memory is very retentive, and she is probably better informed in regard to the old families of Monmouth than any other person in the county.

A Rare Treat.

Waldo Messaros, the Pulpit Orator of Philadelphia, is a native of Lepanto, Greece. He was educated in England, and has travelled extensively in Europe, Asia and Africa. He came to this country several years ago, and last Fall accepted the pastorate of one of the worst broken down churches in Philadelphia. No congregation scarcely, no life in it, in fact not much of anything but a church building and plenty of debts. Now every Sunday the church is packed, even every available foot of standing room being occupied and many unable to obtain admission at all. A vigorous thinker, he is also a perfect master of the English language, and "his style is as classic as his own classic Greece." He is a scholar and a linguist, speaking fluently eight different languages, and no description, however eloquent, can do justice to his power as a speaker. In the last three months he has filled fifty-one engagements in Philadelphia alone, besides declining from ten to twelve each month.

He will deliver a lecture under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Congregational Church, in the new Chapel, corner of Seventh street and Madison avenue, next Tuesday evening, at 8 o'clock. Subject: "Hooks in Our Noses."

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The Boy's Branch will hold their 2nd. Monthly Reception on Friday at 4 o'clock. Every boy of the Branch is invited.

The usual hour for Bible Study is on Saturday evening at 8 o'clock. The young men are earnestly invited to attend.

The date of the next Reception to be given by the Ladies' Auxiliary will be April 26th, instead of June as has been announced.

The Board of Directors will meet this (Thursday) evening at 8 o'clock. It is hoped every member will be present, as business of importance will be transacted.

The Librarian of the Association will lead the Young Men's Prayer and Song Meeting on Monday night. The topic is: "The only Food that Satisfies the Soul."—Jno. 6:41-63. Will the young men attend the meeting if possible.

Next Monday afternoon the quarterly meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary will be held in the Lecture room. Reports of the work will be read, and it is expected that the Rev. G. A. Hall, State Y. M. C. A. Secretary of New York, and Rev. Dr. Brister, of Newark, will address the meeting. The literary programme promises to be very interesting.

REPORTS OF CITY OFFICERS:

By Mr. Serrell, Report of City Collector for March. Read and filed.

Also Quarterly report of City Judge, showing the amount of fines collected, $113; disbursements, $41.65; balance, $71.35. Referred to Salaries Com.

REPORT OF COMMITTEES:

By Mr. Serrell, from Special Com., in the matter of the City against ex-Collector Clark, that the latter had produced the books pursuant to the order of the Court, and that Mr. Francis H. Gardner had been engaged to examine the same and report the result to the Committee.

By Mr. Beguelin, from Alms Com., the following as correct: Plainfield Relief Association, 55.50; A. Willetts, 7.50; Mrs. Boice, 20; W. Haywood, 5.95; Mrs. Gamberton, 3. Referred to Aud. Com.

By Serrell, from Finance Com., as correct: J. Johnson, $231.44; J. B. Brown, $19.54. Referred to Aud. Com.

Also, that an examination had been made of the accounts, books and annual report of ex-Collector Brown for 1882, and the same found correct. Received and filed.

Also a report in relation to the making of the tax levy by the Assessor. Received and filed.

Mr. Polak, from Lamps Com., reported on the petition of E. C. Swift & Co., and recommended it be not granted.

Mr. Corriell thought the requirements of the ordinance regarding the erection of frame buildings within fire limits should be fulfilled. He moved the report be received and recommendation adopted. Seconded by Mr. Gardner and carried; all ays.

Mr. Gardner, from License Com., reported its approval of the applications for hack, cart and pedler's licenses, presented that evening.

On motion, all granted.

NEW BUSINESS:

Mr. Polak moved for adoption a resolution appropriating $1,500 to be used upon the streets and to repair the damages of the recent flood. Seconded by Mr. Beguelin.

Mr. Serrell was called to the chair, and Mr. Marsh moved to amend the resolution by making the appropriation $750. Seconded by Mr. Jones.

Amendment lost—Messrs. Beguelin, Coriell, Gardner, Polak, J. Simpson and R. Simpson voting in the negative.

The original resolution was then carried—all ays.

Mr. Coriell presented for action the usual ordinance providing for the assessing and collecting of the annual tax.

Read by the Clerk the first time, and on motion, passed to its second reading by sections.

The levying of the tax for city purposes amounting to $10,000 was approved, but the section providing for a tax of $2,000 for the poor fund instead of $2,500 as was customary, was defeated, and an amendment by Mr. Coriell making the levy as usual was carried.

Affirmative—Messrs. Beguelin, Coriell, Gardner, Polak, J. Simpson, R. Simpson—6.

Negative—Messrs. Jones, Marsh, Ross, Serrell—4.

The third section of the ordinance levying $800 for the Library Fund, was amended by Mr. Beguelin's motion to make it $600. The section as amended was then lost by a tie vote, and a subsequent motion to reconsider was also lost. The ordinance as amended was ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading. (Published on our second page).

Mr. Coriell moved to strike out of the proposed contract with the Plainfield Gas Light Co., the clause providing for the keeping in repair of the lamps by that company.

On motion of Mr. Serrell, the matter was referred to the Lamp Com., with power.

Mr. Coriell, from Salaries Com., reported as correct the following: H. Hamilton, $24.50; W. L. Hotfield, $7.50. Referred to Aud. Com.

Mr. J. Simpson, from the Aud. Com., reported correct bills of Wm. H. Haywood, $5.95; Mrs. E. L. Boice, 20; Alex. Willett, 7.50; Plainfield Relief Association, 55.50; Margaret Gamberton, 3; H. Lowrie, 23.10; W. S. Chase, 60.74; Runyon & Leonard, 147.40; Henry Hamilton, 24.50; Walter L. Hotfield, 67.50; Geo. W. Grant, 22.35; Morgan Bird, 62.50; M. Conway, 8; Patrick Burgan, 45.83; George W. Grant, 45.83; John B. Brown, $19.54 and John Johnson, 231.44.

Warrants ordered drawn.

Also taken from the table and ordered paid: G. A. Bloom, $163; N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gas Light Co., 123.50.

On motion of Mr. Beguelin, the communication of D. Hand asking for an investigation of the charges of the City Judge against the morals of the Poor Farm, was taken from the table and the following committee appointed for the purpose: Messrs. Beguelin, Coriell and Serrell.

Mr. Polak called up the resolution relating to the placing of the names of the streets on the corner lamps, and moved that $20 be appropriated for such purpose. Carried.

The Council then adjourned until Wednesday evening.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, April 4th.

The Council met pursuant to adjournment.

Present — President Livingston and Messrs. Beguelin, Coriell, Gardner, Marsh, Polak, R. Simpson—7.

Absent—Messrs. Jones, Ross, Serrell, J. Simpson—4.

Mr. Polak, from Lamps Com., reported as correct the following: Plainfield Gas Light Co., $227.91; N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gas Light Co., $162.71. Referred to Aud. Com.

Mr. Gardner, from License Com., reported its approval of the application of J. Blimm for an inn and tavern license and to sell spirituous liquors.

On motion of Mr. Polak, seconded by Mr. Gardner, the same was granted.

Affirmative—President Livingston and Messrs. Beguelin, Coriell, Gardner, Polak and R. Simpson—6.

Negative—Mr. Marsh.

On motion of Mr. Coriell, amended by Mr. Marsh, the Lamps Com., was empowered to have painted such lamps as were necessary at an expense not to exceed $100.

The Council then adjourned.

COMMUNICATED.

For "The Constitutionalist."

To the Citizens of Plainfield and Vicinity.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—When our country was assailed and threatened with disruption, the loyal sons of the North, South, East and West sprang to the front, faced the foe and dared death, that their county might live; now appeal to you. Thousands went down in the storm of battle and their living comrades now honor them on Memorial day. From the living loyal soldiers came the G. A. R. From the G. A. R. has come the beautiful and appropriate ceremony of annually decorating the graves of their fallen comrades. No more beautiful and befitting testimonial could be shown them. It is very proper that the living participators in those trying times should remember their fallen comrades in this manner. But as it was for yours they bled and died, we ask your presence and cordial co-operation on this memorial occasion. As they went forth to battle to the sound of music and amid the roar and rattle of firearms, so on these occasions should they be saluted with the same sounds that stirred their hearts to action, and the last sounds which greeted their ears, be heard through the land. The same flag they so proudly carried should be borne over their graves and seen floating from every house top. Let all give material aid and assistance that this day, set apart for this especial purpose may be properly observed. Flags, music and other material will be necessary. We feel assured it is only necessary to call the attention of the good, liberal and patriotic citizens to this fact, and all things necessary will be provided. As the 4th of July is our great National Day, so this is the "All Saints Day" of our political calendar.

AMOS.

THERE are thirty-two $10,000 bills in circulation in this country. We have none of them.

AN EASTER LILY.

BY A. S. R.

A lovely Easter lily,
Sent to me by a friend,
It makes me think of Heaven
Where all our troubles end.

O snowy, satin lily,
You bring to mind again,
An Easter many years ago,
But fraught with many a pain.

Again I see a little face,
The rim of joy and health,
And two blue eyes like stars of light,
And the soul looking thro' pure and white.

O, face that I shall never see,
O, eyes beloved in vain,
What years there lie 'tween you and me,
What years of grief and pain.

CARPETS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION!

A N. Y. WHOLESALE STOCK EXHIBITED.

The largest and finest assortment, from the most beautiful designs of Brussels to the least expensive Ingrains, shown at our store. We have completed arrangements with one of the largest Carpet houses in New York to supply us with all the new designs, as they appear, and to fill all our orders at prices that will enable us to sell you Carpets as low as you could buy them at any retail house in New York, or elsewhere. We show you this immense stock through a new and very practical invention, called a "CARPET EXHIBITOR," so constructed that we can exhibit 100 different samples within five minutes, and show a continuous floor covered from each sample of half a yard, or in other words the sample is multiplied indefinitely, making it appear as if a carpet was perfectly matched and nailed upon the floor. Selecting Carpets in this way is much more satisfactory than the old way of matching loosely upon the floor. Carpets cut to fit the room—also, made-up if desired. Very respectfully yours,

RELIGION AND STOCKS.

HOW A PIOUS MAN WHO TALKED ABOUT ZION GOUGED THE BAD BOY'S FATHER.

"Pa has quit the church," remarked the bad boy, "and says he won't belong to any concern that harbors bilks. What's a bilk?" asked the boy as he opened a candy jar and took out four sticks of hoarhound candy.

"A bilk," said the groceryman, as he watched the boy, "is a fellow that plays a man for candy, or money, or anything and dont intend to return an equivalent. You are a small sized bilk. But what's the matter with your pa and the church?"

"Well, you remember that exhorter that was here last Fall, that used to board around with the church people all the week, and talk about Zion, and laying up treasures where the moths wouldn't gnaw them, and they wouldn't get rusty, and where thieves wouldn't pry off the hinges. He was the one that used to go home with ma from prayer meetings when pa was down town, and who wanted to pay off the church debt in solid silver bricks. He's the bilk. I guess if pa should get him by the neck he would jerk nine kinds of revealed religion out of him. O, pa is hotter than he was when the hornets took the lunch off of him. When you strike a pious man on his pocket-book it hurts him. That fellow prayed and sang like an angel, and boarded around like a tramp. He stopped at our house over a week, and he had specimens of rock that were chuck full of silver and gold, and he and pa used to sit up nights and look at it. You could pick pieces of silver out of the rock as big as buckshot, and he had some silver bricks that were beautiful. He had been out in Colorado and found a hill full of the silver rock, and he wanted to form a stock company and dig out millions of dollars. He didn't want anybody but pious men that belonged to the church, in the company, and I think that was one thing that caused pa to unite with the church so suddenly. I know he was as wicked as could be a few days before he joined the church, but this revivalist, with his words about the beautiful beyond, where all shall dwell together in peace and sing praises, and his description of that Colorado mountain where the silver stuck out so you could hang your hat on it, converted pa. That man's scheme was to let all the church people who were in good standing and who had plenty of money, into the company, and when the mine began to return dividends by the car-load they could give largely to the church and pay the debts of all the churches and put down carpets and fresco the ceiling. The man said he felt that he had been steered onto that silver mine by a higher power, and his idea was to work it for the glory of the cause. He said he liked pa and would make him vice-president of the company. Pa he bit like a bass, and I guess he invested five thousand dollars in stock, and ma she wanted to come in, and she put in a thousand dollars that she had laid up to buy some diamond ear-rings, and the man gave pa a lot of stock to sell to other members of the church. They are all into it, even the minister. He drew his salary ahead, and all of the deacons they come in, and the man went back to Colorado with about thirty thousand dollars of good pious money. Yesterday pa got a paper from Colorado giving the whole snap away, and the pious man has been spending the money in Denver and whooping it up. Pa suspected something was wrong two weeks ago when he heard that the pious man had been on a toot in Chicago, and he wrote to a man in Denver who used to get full with pa years ago when they were both on the turf, and pa's friend said the man that sold the stock was a fraud, and that he didn't own no mine, and that he borrowed the samples of ore and silver bricks from a pawnbroker in Denver. I guess it will break pa up for a while, though he is well enough fixed with mortgages and things. But it hurts him to be took in. He lays it all to ma. He says if she hadn't let that exhorter for the silver mine go home with her this would not have occurred, and ma says she believes pa was in partnership with the man to beat her out of her thousand dollars that she was going to buy a pair of pious diamond ear-rings with. Oh, it is a terror over to the house now. Both the hired girls put in all the money they had and took stock, and they threaten to sue pa for arson, and they are going to leave to-night, and ma will have to do the work."—Peck's Sun.

RIVERS AND STREAMS.

An interesting table is given in the State Board of Health report in relation to the extent of river drainage. By this we perceive that the Raritan river drains more square miles of territory than any of the local rivers, as follows:

Hudson river receives through the Walkill and its tributaries in New Jersey the drainage of	203
Hackensack river drains	130
Passaic river drains	980
Raritan river drains	1,099
Delaware river drains	2,100
Maurice river drains	380
Little Egg Harbor river drains	476
Great Egg Harbor river drains	435
Total	5,874

The Delaware river and bay receive the drainage of 2,850 square miles in New Jersey; the Atlantic Ocean 4,827 square miles, and the Hudson river 203.

Below we give a summary of the length of certain streams in the State and their drainage area:

	Miles long.	Sq. m. dr'e
Passaic river	80	974
Hackensack river	30	182
Raritan river, including the South branch	86	1,100
Lamington river	26	128
North Branch	24	65
South Branch	50	280
Millstone river	25	260
Stony Brook	20	55
Green Brook	15	63
South river, including Manalapan Creek	20	133
Rahway river	22	82
Navesink river	22	38
Shrewsbury river	10	20
Shark river	11
Manasquan river	22	80
Musconetcong river	40	163
Assunpink creek	21	105
Crosswicks creek	35	151
Rancocas creek	32	290

Longfellow evidently paid his fare like a man. Didn't he write in "Excelsior," "Try not the pass, the old man said?"

It takes but thirteen minutes to load an elephant on a train, while it takes twenty for any sort of woman to kiss her friends good-bye and lose the check for her trunk.

THAT BAD BOY AGAIN.

HIS PA TEACHES BOXING LESSONS.

The bad boy has been in mischief again. Here is his account of the affair:

Pa told my chum and me that it was no harm to learn to box, cause we could defend ourselves, and he said he used to be a holy terror with the boxing gloves when he was a boy, and he has been giving us lessons. Well, he handles himself pretty well for a church member. I read in the paper how Zach Chandler played it on Conkling by getting Jem Mace, the prize fighter, to knock him silly, and I asked pa would he let me bring a poor boy, who had no father to teach him boxing, to our house to learn to box, and pa said certainly, fetch him along. He said he would be glad to do anything for a poor orphan. So I went down in the Third ward and got an Irish boy by the name of Duffy, who can knock the socks off of any boy in the ward. He fit a prize fight once. It would have made you laugh to see pa tell him how to hold his hands and how to guard his face. He told Duffy not to be afraid, but to strike right out and hit for keeps. Duffy said he was afraid pa would get mad if he hit him, and pa said 'nonsense, boy, knock me down if you can, and I will laugh, ha! ha!' Well, Duffy he hauled back and gave pa one in the nose and another in both eyes, and cuffed him on the ear and punched him in the stomach, and lammed him in the mouth and made his teeth bleed, and then he gave him a side winder in both eyes, and pa pulled off the boxing gloves and grabbed a chair, and we adjourned and went down stairs as though there was a panic. I haven't seen pa since.—Peck's Sun.

THE VALUE OF CASHIERS.

An Ohio merchant who kept three clerks, each one of whom made his own change and had free access to the money drawers, was the other day asked by a commercial traveler why he did not keep a cashier to receive all moneys.

"Cost too much," was the reply.

"But are your clerks honest?"

"Perfectly honest."

"Have you any objection to my trying them?"

"Certainly not. Go ahead in any way you wish."

The traveler went away, but in about three hours he returned and said in a loud voice so that all might hear:

"When I was here this forenoon I paid you a bogus quarter by mistake. In case you find it in counting up to-night, lay it aside and I'll redeem it."

Then the traveler, accompanied by the merchant, took a position where the back door and the alley could be kept in view, and in less than ten minutes out came the head clerk and emptied a handfull of silver on the head of a barrel and pawed it over. The bogus quarter was not there. He returned to the store and out came the second clerk and went through the same programme. He was followed by the third and after he disappeared the merchant calmly observed:

"I've been waiting thirteen years for trade to pick up, and I rather think I'll try the cashier system."

EDITING A NEWSPAPER.

BY KATE THORN.

It requires more science to edit a newspaper than it does to govern a nation.

Not one man out of a thousand can steer his literary craft without cutting across the track of some "old subscriber," and then he finds himself on a lee shore in short order.

Everybody criticises newspapers. We do not know a single man who does not cherish the idea that if he had a chance he could edit the London Times or any other thunderer, with much more ability than it is edited.

"Nothing in the paper now! So utterly stupid!"

We hear the complaint at every turn, and the man who could not spell cat without putting a C in it, will turn up his nose and fling aside his paper, which very likely he has borrowed, and tell his friends that he wishes he had the control of that sheet! he'd see if he couldn't turn over a new leaf.

An editor is supposed to know what every individual who reads his paper wants. He must be careful not to bear down on any of the beliefs of his old subscribers.

If some of them are Universalists, he must steer clear of mentioning the locality signified in the new version as Hades; and if some Baptists and Methodists are included in his list, he had better be careful how he insinuates that any man dare hope for Heaven unless he has been gathered in under their banner.

He mustn't go in for temperance, because there are many good people taking his paper who drink, and who sell lager beer. And on the other hand, he ought to be very cautious how he indorses inebriation, for there are many young people among his readers who might be influenced for bad.

The editor must be "a mitten for either hand." He must please everybody. He must always print anything an "Old Subscriber" wants him to, from the messages of all the Presidents down to a receipt of grease and molasses for the gapes in chickens.

He must not say anything about his pay. He ought to be thankful that anybody will take his paper. To send a subscriber a bill is the height of impudence.

To expect pay for extra copies to send to absent friends is a monstrosity. What can he want to keep these old papers for?

If the paper fails to reach a mail subscriber, what a row there is! Publishers should be more careful. They should see that the mails attend to their business. The man who pays three dollars a year for a paper does not want to be swindled by the publishers keeping back a number. And he generally writes him to that effect, and the publisher, as innocent of any intended swindling as a child unborn, mails him another paper, and possesses his soul in silence.

If the editor inserts an article in his periodical which offends an irascible subscriber, he is liable to receive a call from that individual—sometimes he gets a cow-hiding, unless he has the presence of mind to kick the irate visitor down stairs before he can begin aggressive operations; and very often editors are brought into the courts and indicted for libel, when they have been guilty of telling the truth.

So, young man, if you are going to be an editor, part your hair in the middle that your brains may be evenly balanced, and with your file in one hand and your paste pot and scissors in the other, wade in; but go slow, young men—go slow!

MR. HARRIS ON THE RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

During the pendency of the River and Harbor bill in the House, Hon. Henry S. Harris of this State made a brief but brilliant speech in advocacy of the appropriations for New Jersey. He received many congratulations from his fellow members on account of the ability displayed. Jones of Newark tried to be witty at the expense of Cheesequake Creek, but the vote to retain it in the bill was greater than for any other appropriation which was sought to be taken out. Concerning Jones' opposition Mr. Harris said:

"I cannot understand why a representative from the State of New Jersey should ask to have the appropriations from these creeks stricken from this bill when the work of improvement is already half completed. I remember that the last River and Harbor Appropriation bill carried an appropriation of $50,000 for the Passaic River in the gentleman's district, and the present bill carries for the same an appropriation of $15,000. I remember that he then wanted to navigate through solid ground between Jersey City and Newark, to have a ship canal built at the cost of a million. Evidently a change has come o'er the spirit of his dream."

The conclusion of the speech of Mr. Harris was as follows:

"However, while we who supported the last bill suffered the injustice of having very many honest people misled, not only as to our acts but as to our motives, nevertheless that bill, in my view, served a useful social purpose. It was a safety valve whereby the cranks of the country let off their surplus of energy, and it also permitted many persons of damaged reputations to masquerade as reformers—to rehabilitate themselves in seeming pure political virtue."

"In my own district there was scarce a political broker who had sold himself and everybody else over and over again to all sides of everything but was horror struck at such a 'steal.' There was scarce a man who had paid the penalty of imprisonment in the State Prison for theft of public funds but stood around the colors in the front rank of reform as an opponent of 'that steal.' And as hypocrisy is always most zealous, those most unsavory in their histories were the loudest in denunciation."

"But, Mr. Chairman, I shall withhold my vote from the bill because there is much honest difference of opinion among the people of my district as to its wisdom, and I purpose to respect the sentiment of those who sent me whenever I can ascertain it. Notwithstanding, however, that I shall adopt that course I have taken this opportunity to defend some of the appropriations for my State because they were, I thought, unjustly assailed, and have also availed myself of my privilege of placing on record my protest against the unjust, ignorant, and in many cases malicious abuse lately heaped upon those who could not reach with reply the firesides and homes into which these cowardly attacks, hissing with personalities penetrated. My conscience is clear, and I trust and believe that those who now honestly attach to me and to others blame for voting for the River and Harbor bill passed at the first session of the Forty-seventh Congress will not continue to do so when the fires of prejudice, kindled and fanned for the most part by persons with sinister motives, shall have consumed themselves, and information and reflection shall have led to the formation of a just opinion."

THE BROOKLY BRIDGE.

Eliot McCormick contributes to the New York Observer an interesting article on the greatest structure of modern times, the Brookly bridge. The writer says:

"When a man has once walked from one end, at Sands street, Brooklyn, to the other, at the City Hall, New York, he will be impressed with the fact, as never before, that the bridge is over a mile long; and when he has paced off the distance from tower to tower, he will not doubt that it is 1,600 feet. He will appreciate then for the first time that the great cables are as large around as his body; that the supports of the bridge contain enough wire to extend around the globe; and that the stone in each tower would cover an acre of ground piled thirty feet high. Nor will he have any difficulty in believing that the bridge is the largest of its kind in the world. As a matter of fact, the central span is 350 feet longer than the new bridge at Niagara Falls, and is nearly as twice as long as the old one; it exceeds in length the suspension bridges at Cincinnati and Wheeling—each 1,000 feet long—by 600 feet; and throws into relative insignificance the picturesque structure which spans the gorge of the river Sarine, at Friburg, Germany, and the bridges at Conway and Menai Strait, in Wales. It represents, in short, the highest achievement of the bridge-maker's art, as displayed in this or any other country."

AN INCOME AND NOTHING TO DO.

A man who has nothing to do is a pitiable object. He is simply a kept man. He is living on charity. Some amiable ancestor, now dead, has left him the money that he lives on, all he has to do is to draw the money and eat, drink and sleep. No eyes can brighten with happiness when he comes home, because he only comes home when the other places close. He cannot come home tired, and be petted and rested by willing hands, because it would be a mockery to pet a tired man who had got tired doing nothing. Such a man simply exists and is no good on earth. If he would wheel a barrow and earn a dollar, and get tired, and buy a beefsteak with the dollar, and have it cooked, and eat it while the appetite was on that he got wheeling the barrow, he would know more enjoyment than he had ever known before. The man with nothing to do on earth no doubt thinks, as he lays around and smells frowsy, that he is enjoying life, but he knows no more about enjoyment than a tom cat that sleeps all day and goes out at night to play short stop to a lot of boot-jacks and beer-bottles. Such a man is a cipher, and does not know enough to go in when it rains. If there were less incomes left to lazy young fellows, and more sets of carpenter tools, there would be more real enjoyment.—Burlington Hawkeye.

Oil has been discovered in New Jersey—in barrels.

The modern "Flying Dutchman"—it's one who carries the beer.

March is a survival sort of month—always ready for a blow out.

A "picture restorer" can not be relied upon to return a stolen chromo.

It is getting rapidly around to that season of the year when the small boy, who can't lift a spadefull of dirt in the garden, will turn up a ten acre lot hunting for fish-bait.

"Yes, sir," said the wood dealer, "I prefer to sell wood to men who do their own sawing. You can't convince a man who has worked all day at a wood pile that there isn't a full cord in it."

LITERARY NOTES.

THE ART AMATEUR

For April contains working designs of oak-leaves for a vase, wild roses for a dessert plate, and aristolochia vine for a panel; a variety of ecclesiastical and South Kensington embroidery designs, and a second page of monograms in A. The frontispiece is a fine drawing of the superb silver cup and tray presented by Ogden Goelet to the New York Yacht Club. An interesting biography of Alma Tadema is accompanied by numerous illustrations of that artist's work, including a large engraving of "Sunday Morning," and another of "A Parting Kiss." A group of clever sketches from the Paris Water Color Exhibition, and a capital pen-and-ink drawing by C. G. Bush—"The Gardener's Favorite"—are also noticeable among the full-page illustrations. Especially interesting are the illustrated accounts of the famous Jones collection in London, and of "A Wood Carver's Home"—the exquisitely decorated house of Mr. Benn Pitman at Cincinnati. There are also valuable articles on book cases (by Arthur Penn), china painting (by Miss McLaughlin), the Leland Art School at Philadelphia, flower painting, portrait drapery, portiere embroideries, fancy ball costumes, dining rooms and other practical topics. French paintings in New York, and the recent exhibition of the Art Club of that city, are discussed editorially; "My Note Book" is full, as usual, of pungent paragraphs, and in every respect this number well maintains the high standard which The Art Amateur has for itself. Price, 35 cents; $4 a year. Montague Marks, publisher, 23 Union Square, New York.

THE WHEELMAN.

The first number of the second volume of this rapidly progressing magazine, appears in a new and very attractive cover, one of Ipsen's best designs, which is better suited to the excellence and success already achieved. This cover design is, we believe, the only one that can be ranked with that of Vedder which adorns The Century. The Wheelman may now becomingly take its place beside the few best illustrated magazines, as well for its general appearance and admirable typography, as for the excellence of the illustrations and articles.

The April number opens with an illustrated article that cannot fail to attract attention on account of the unique and entertaining character of the subject. It is called "Pedalling on the Piscataqua" and is a charming description of a day's ride on a marine bicycle up the Piscataqua River from Portsmouth, N. H. Into the narrative are woven many interesting bits of history and biography suggested by scenes on the way. This is one of the best papers that has been written of the "old town by the sea," and the illustrations are first-class both in drawing and engraving. "From Paris to Geneva" tells the adventures of two London wheelmen on a tour across France on a "Sociable" tricycle. It is full of entertaining incidents and vivid descriptions, and is fully illustrated. "Through Eastern Pennsylvania" is a pleasing descriptive sketch accompanied by a number of engravings.

FRANK LESLIE'S SUNDAY MAGAZINE.

The April number contains even more than the usual attractive features. The Rev. Moses D. Hoge contributes "What is Presbyterianism?" being No. IV. of "Religious Denominations in the United States"; the editor Dr. Talmage, has a characteristic, "Mending the Bible"; Edwin De Leon continues his deeply interesting papers, "The American Pilgrim," etc., etc. There are serial and short stories, a large number of very excellent sketches, some admirably written essays, a sermon by Dr. Talmage, "Homesickness;" several poems of great merit; a record of important events, Personal Notes and Comments, Editorial Comments, Obituary Notes, etc. The miscellany is most comprehensive, entertaining and instructive; the number, in fact, overflows with good things, and abounds with illustrations. The price is only 25 cents a copy, or $3 a year, post-paid. Address, Mrs. Frank Leslie, Publisher, 53, 55 and 56 Park Place, New York.

The May number will contain the first of a series of papers by Lieutenant Fred Schwatka, the Artic explorer, entitled, "Among the Natives of the North."

Concerning the reported negotiations for a lease of the New Jersey Central Railroad to the Philadelphia and Reading Company, the N. Y. Evening Post reports Mr. Gowen, of the latter company, as saying to its reporter:

"The only truth in this report of the negotiations for a lease of the New Jersey Central road to this road is the statement that I am in this city. There have been no propositions considered. If there had been I would not tell you. I do not think it is necessary to inform the public of these matters. When our new branch road to Pittsburg is opened for travel, it will bring a large amount of through business to us. This business we desire to give to the New Jersey Central, and at the proper time some arrangement will be made between the two companies. What form that arrangement will take I cannot say, but before any lease is made of the New Jersey Central Railroad, it will be necessary to take the road out of the hands of the Receiver."

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE FIRST PATIENT.

BY FRANK H. STAUFFER.

Dr. Paul Ventor sat alone in his office, his hands crossed on his knees, his eyes fixed upon vacancy, the light from the side jet falling upon his worn, anxious face.

This room was barely comfortable. The floor was covered with matting. The wall paper was shabby, but was cheerfully relieved by a few cheap yet brightly colored chromos, and the heavy gilt frame which inclosed his diploma. A desk somewhat littered, a book-case but partially filled, an old-fashioned sofa, and a few stuffed, stiff-back chairs, were all the furniture visible. We say visible, because within a small curtained alcove was a low narrow bedstead, and a dingy toilet stand, in keeping with the cracked wash-bowl and pitcher which surmounted it, and with rackety towel rack which stood beside it.

The doctor was quite a young man, prepossessing in appearance, and positive in his manner,—his grave, thoughtful face indicating character and a fair degree of reserved strength. His clothes had a seedy look; they were entire, but much worn, and frayed around the buttonholes, the fading binding rendered less noticeable by the application of ink.

In fact, the doctor was very poor, and the outlook for the future was in no wise encouraging. He had been located in that part of the city for three months, and as yet had not received a single professional call. He had spent his means, and had been compelled to pawn his surgical instruments and a few of his books; he was in arrears for boarding, while the landlord had given him notice to vacate the room.

The doctor was not to blame for his straightened circumstances. He had practiced rigid economy; he had nailed his sign and distributed his circulars; he was at least theoretically well up in his profession; his address was in his favor; he had patiently waited. There was not much sickness in the neighborhood, and what little patronage there was went into the hands of the old practitioners. No wonder that the young doctor's attitude was a forlorn one, and the expression on his face almost devoid of hope.

Suddenly his countenance brightened. Some one had pulled the bell. Who else, if not a patient? He opened the door and a lady entered. She was closely veiled, and yet he knew that she was young, because of the elasticity of her movements.

'You are Dr. Ventor?' she asked, her voice sweet and distinct, though slightly tremulous.

'At your service, madam,' he answered, with a polite bow. 'Pray be seated.'

She took the chair which he placed for her, and removed her veil; and as she did so, he noticed that her hand was small, white, shapely and bejeweled. Her face was exceedingly fair, though it wore a troubled look. Her eyes were black and lustrous. They made a rapid survey of the room, and then rested upon the doctor's face in such a steady, calculating, estimating way, that he felt the blood filling his cheeks.

'I wish you to call upon my father,' she said.

'To-night?' asked the doctor.

'Well—no,' she debatingly answered. 'To-morrow will do. I tell you beforehand, it's an old case, and a bad one. If you succeed in relieving him you have only to name your fee.'

'What is the malady?' asked the doctor.

'He is a hypochondriac,' she slowly, half-unwillingly admitted, the color coming and going in her face. 'He has a strange hallucination, and if he is not lifted out of it, it will end in his death.'

The doctor was becoming fascinated with the sweet face, the graceful gestures, the black eyes, which grew more lustrous because anxiety had filled them with tears. He drew his chair nearer to her own.

'You have consulted other physicians?' he asked.

'Quite a number,' she replied, a little flurriedly. 'Some of the best in the city.'

'Without success?'

'Oh, of course;' and she spoke with impatience. 'They had no—no—intentions. They argued, and—hooted.'

There was something charming about those pauses in the choice of words.

'Yes!' she answered, her face brightening. 'You have caught the idea. Oh, sir, I believe that you can cure him.'

In her excited eagerness, she unconsciously laid her hand on his arm, and the touch thrilled him.

'Why do you come to me?' he asked. 'I am young—inexperienced—unknown.'

'Why?' she inquired, with a searching look. 'I do not know. Why do we do queer things?' and she smiled a little oddly. 'They come to us like a—a—revelation.'

It was an ambiguous explanation, and yet he understood her.

'Perhaps the other physicians were too old, and knew to much,' she added, the old smile again stirring her lips.

'I will do what I can,' the doctor gravely said. 'What is the character of the hallucination?'

'It is concerning his food,' she slowly replied, the piquancy dying out of her face. 'Or, to be precise, it concerns what is given him to drink. For days at a time nothing liquid passes his lips. Oh, it is just dreadful.'

'There are rational intervals?' the doctor asked.

'Yes, thank God!' she exclaimed, with fervor; 'otherwise he would be in his grave.'

'He fancies the water to be poisoned, eh?'

'Oh, worse!' cried the lovely visitor. 'Filled with the finest needles.'

'Ah,' ejaculated Dr. Ventor. He was thoughtful for a minute—then added: 'Give me your address. I will call to-morrow.'

She handed him a card upon which was printed:

G. B. BRANSON.
No — Walnut street, Philadelphia.

The doctor knew the gentleman by reputation; he felt sure that there was a heavy fee in prospect.

'You will be sure to come?' his visitor asked, with a delightful tremor in her voice.

She arose, and dropped her veil over her face, her diamond rings catching a thousand sparkles of light.

'Without fail,' was the doctor's answer, as he accompanied her to the door. 'Is your father in distress now?'

'Very much so, sir.'

They had reached the doorstep. It was to early in the evening yet that she was not in need of an escort.

'One thing more, Miss Branson,' he said. 'It may be best for me not to call as a physician.'

'Why not?' asked she, in surprise.

'He may be prejudiced,' replied the doctor. 'Probably you have not caught my meaning. A great deal will depend upon adroitness. Could I not come upon some pretended business? Of a kind in which he takes an interest?'

She bent her head, and he noticed how finely poised it was.

'He has houses to rent on Brandywine street,' she said, after a pause. 'To rent and to sell.'

'Very good,' rejoined the doctor, 'that will serve me. Now, Miss Branson, you must not be surprised if I cut up some queer antics.' He laughed as he said that. 'Watch me closely, for a clew to what I would have you say or do.'

He felt that she was keenly regarding him, in the dimness, through her veil.

'I think I understand,' she simply said. 'Good evening, sir.'

The next morning Doctor Paul Ventor took from a drawer a strong horse-shoe magnet. He rubbed steadily upon the blade of his pocket knife with one of the poles of the magnet, thoroughly electrifying it. He purchased a paper of very fine needles at an adjoining store; then set out for the residence of his patient.

He found the latter to be a man well advanced in life, intelligent and genial—so genial, in fact, that the doctor wondered at there being so much of the suspicious in his nature.

The room was magnificently furnished, yet without a violation of harmony or taste. The owner was evidently a man of wealth, disposed to consult his ease.

The doctor at once opened a conversation about the houses on Brandywine street, in which Mr. Branson earnestly joined, and vividly explained points in the speculation.

'Sir, could I trouble you for a drink of water?' the doctor suddenly asked.

'Certainly,' replied the other. 'Kate, please bring Mr. ——?'

'Ventor,' supplied the doctor.

'A glass of water,' completed Mr. Branson.

He was addressing his daughter, who had called upon the doctor the evening before, and she was seated in one of the bay windows. She put aside her book, left the room, and returned with a glass of water, which the doctor accepted with a bow.

He was more impressed with her loveliness than ever, now that he had a better view of her. Her hair was black and abundant, her air dignified, her manner royal; she was undoubtedly an intelligent, refined, sensible, pure-minded young woman.

No glance of recognition passed between them—at least her father, did not notice any; but the doctor saw a wailing, wistful, trusting, anticipating look in her eyes, which made his pulse throb faster.

He raised the glass to his lips, and then a well-feigned look of astonishment crossed his face. He ejected some of the water, plucked at his moustache, and then strode to the window, where he seemed absorbed in an examination of the contents of the glass.

'What is the matter?' asked Mr. Branson.

'Matter?' sharply returned the doctor, as he turned from the window. 'Sir, who is this girl?' he sternly asked.

'Girl!' exclaimed Mr. Branson, with a frown. 'She is my daughter.'

'I beg a thousand pardons!' humbly rejoined the doctor, seeming quite flurried. 'This is remarkable? Very remarkable!' and he stared into the glass.

'What is remarkable?' asked Mr. Branson, with a gasp.

'There are needles swimming in the water!' announced the doctor, the nonplused look still on his face. 'Hundreds of them, sir! How did they get in it? Why did she bring me such stuff as this?'

'Needles!' exclaimed Mr. Branson, becoming very much excited. 'There, Kate,' he added with an air of triumph. 'What have I always told you?'

Miss Branson stared into the tumbler, her face comically demure.

'I see no needles,' she said.

'Oh, you don't, eh?' sarcastically rejoined the doctor. 'What do you say Mr. Branson?' and he handed the old gentleman the glass.

'You are right, sir,' declared he; 'I see them with the naked eye; and my sight is one of the best, for I am almost seventy. But you cannot convince her.'

'May be I can,' objected the doctor.

He took out knife, thrust into the glass the magnetized blade, and when he withdrew it a number of needles were adhering to it, for he had adroitly dropped them into the water.

'What have you to say now?' he asked, his eyes upon Kate.

'I am convinced,' said she. 'Why, it is horrible.'

The doctor turned to Mr. Branson, and said:

'You do not seem greatly surprised?'

'Well, no,' replied the old gentleman, with a grin, 'it is no new experience to me. For months I have found needles in the water, milk, tea, coffee—in everything served up to me to drink. I cannot begin to tell you what I have suffered. I called in several physicians but they laughed at me, and treated it as the fancy of a disordered mind. You are the only person who ever detected the needles, and I know you had no hint of the matter from me or anybody else. I shall ever hold you in grateful remembrance, if for no other reason than because you have convinced my daughter. She will believe, with me, that a diabolical and systematic attempt has been made upon my life.'

'On mine, sir, in this instance,' grimly rejoined the doctor. 'It is an outrageous affair, and must be looked into. Who filled this glass?'

'Richard,' replied Miss Branson.

'Who is Richard?' asked the doctor.

'A domestic.'

'Send him here at once!' peremptorily ordered the doctor.

Mr. Branson stared with admiration at his visitor; he was a man of nerve, of purpose, and of promptness; he would surely unravel the mystery.

'This man Richard,' the doctor asked, 'is he a colored man?'

'A mulatto.'

'Compos-mentis?'

'A trifle simple-minded, I suspect.'

'How long has he been with you?'

'Three years.'

'Ah!' ejaculated the doctor. 'He must be sent away at once.'

The servant came into the room, preceded by Miss Branson.

'Did you fill this glass with water?' the doctor sharply asked.

'Yes, sah,' answered the mulatto, a harmless-looking fellow, with high cheek bones and watery eyes.

'Did you drop any needles into it?' asked the doctor.

'Golly, no!' exclaimed the man. 'Dar's no needles in it. It's an old cranky notion of Mr. Branson's. He keeps us all on edge about it.'

'Oh, he does, eh!' frowned the doctor. 'Well, it is no fancy.'

'Dar's no needles in the water,' declared the man.

'We'll see,' said the doctor, as he thrust the magnetized knife-blade in the glass. 'What are these, pray?' indicating a number of dangling needles.

There was something comical in the way the man's eyes dilated.

'Dey is needles, sah, sure as you live!' he exclaimed. 'Dey must jist been in the cooler. I didn't put 'em in; I swear I didn't, sah!'

'Your services here end with to-day!' the doctor sternly said. 'If there is any money due you, Mr. Branson will pay it.'

A dumfounded look settled upon the servant's face, and he was about to protest with vehemence, when Mr. Branson sternly seconded the doctor's order.

'I owe you a week's wages, which Kate will pay you at once,' he said. 'Now go, and be thankful I didn't have you up before a magistrate.'

The man bestowed a fierce, angry look upon the doctor, and then slowly and sullenly left the room.

Mr. Branson and the doctor conversed for an hour upon various topics. The old gentleman was wonderfully pleased with him, and cordial in his invitation to him to call again.

Miss Branson accompanied the doctor to the door.

'Your father is cured,' he said.

'Do you think so?' she asked, her handsome eyes on his face. 'We will wait a week. That was an admirable ruse. Take this, please; it is simply a remembrance.'

A roll of something was placed in his hand.

'Thank you!' he gratefully said.

'You were rather hard on Richard,' remarked Miss Branson, with a smile.

'I wronged him,' admitted the doctor. 'But I had to assail some one. Can you not explain the matter to him, and procure him a situation elsewhere?'

'I will try,' she replied.

The doctor bowed, and then hurried back to his office. He paid the debts which annoyed him most, and felt like another man. At the end of the week he received a second voluntary fee from his fair friend.

The tide turned; patients called on him or sent for him; his practice became assured; he was soon on the high road to competency.

He became a frequent visitor at the house of Mr. Branson, and finally married the dark-eyed young girl who had brought him his first case.

A BRAZILIAN MARKET.

BY DAVID KER.

'Well, this is a queer place, and no mistake!' said my English companion, staring around him with a half-wondering, half-contemptuous look.

And well might he say so. We had strolled into the great market of Rio de Janeiro, at sunrise, on a fine May morning; and look which way we could, some picturesquely outlandish object presented it-at every turn.

Just where the Rua Direita (straight street), the Broadway of Rio, debouched upon the market-place, a train of native monks, looking terrible hot and uncomfortable in their heavy black robes, were moving slowly toward the vast, double-towered front of the Candelaria Church; while from the opposite direction came a sturdy negro, with an unfortunate sloth tied to the pole that rested on his shoulder, and displayed to every passer-by with a hoarse shout of, "Preguica! preguica! bon preguica!" (Sloth! sloth! good sloth!)

On the quay behind us, half a dozen dwarfish Portuguese sailors were dragging ashore, with infinite labor and an amount of screaming and jabbering worthy of the monkey-house at a menagerie, an enormous turtle, weighing at least four hundred pounds.

A little further on, a swarm of mulatto 'piccaninnies' were sucking the oozing sap from a pile of freshly-cut sugar-canes which had been tossed down carelessly close to the water's edge, and seemed to belong to nobody.

On the other side, right in front of the Emperor's palace—a quiet-looking white house, smaller than many a second-class hotel—a squad of recruits, in the blue uniform and double-peaked blue-and-red cap of the Brazilian army, were going through their morning drill.

A strange-looking set they were, of all heights, from six feet to five, and presenting a regular dissolving view of all types and colors, from the sallow face and small, rat-like eyes of the Portuguese, or the yellow-green skin and sharp features of the Indian half-breed, to the round, black, shining visage of the genuine "nigger."

The words of command were given by a fat, puffy Brazilian sergeant (in a uniform much too tight for him), who seemed to have little enough breath to give them with, for after each shout he gave a sort of gasping grunt that shook his whole body.

A few paces behind him, complacently enjoying the spectacle, stood a short, red faced thick-moustached, native officer, whose round, bulging figure, with a tremendously long sword sticking almost straight out behind it, looked very much like a Thanksgiving turkey upon a spit.

But the market itself was the most curious sight of all.

'What an extraordinary place!' cried my comrade. 'Is it possible that the capital of Brazil has really no better market than this?'

In truth, the jumble of queer little booths that surrounded us, made of rotting planks or tumble-down wicker-work, and looking very much like a collection of boxes and lunch-baskets left behind by a monster picnic, makes anything but an imposing show; and the crowd which fills it is quite as outlandish as the place itself. Nowhere else in the world, except, perhaps, on the bridge of the Golden Horn at Constantinople, could one see such a museum of small figures, or hear such a Babel of different languages.

Here is a dapper little Portuguese, with eyes as sharp and black as his moustache, bargaining for a bunch of bananas with a hulking negress, whose black face, surmounted by a flaming red kerchief, gives her the look of a gigantic hot poker; and it is hard to say which of the two screams the loudest, or makes the most frantic grimaces.

There stands a Spanish sailor, with gold rings in his huge ears, and a long knife at his waistband, munching a thick, tough sheet of Bacalhao (salt-fish), which he had just bought; and at a good price, too, judging from the well-satisfied grin of the half-breed salesman.

Yonder come a brace of supple, yellow-faced mulattoes, glancing viciously out of the corners of their small, deep-set eyes at the passing negroes, with whom they were always at feud.

After them appear two jaunty French agents, in the glossiest of black hats, although the thermometer is already 78 degrees in the shade, and will soon be up to 100.

A shrill shout of 'Coalicenca, Senhores!' (By your leave, gentlemen) makes us spring aside just in time to avoid a collision with a squat, sallow, greasy, Brazilian fisherman, who is staggering under the weight of a huge, bulging garoupa (the king of Brazilian fish), almost as big as himself.

The next moment we see him confronted by the tall, gaunt figure of an old Scotch doctor, who, with characteristic shrewdness, does his own marketing, and takes good care to be always the first in the field.

The bargaining is brisk and keen for a few minutes, but in the end the Scot gets the better of the Brazilian, and hands over his fish, with a sly smile, to the strapping negro who slouches at his heels. But to the unbounded amazement of my companion, the purchase is paid for, not with money, but with half a dozen slips of pasteboard, which we both recognize at once as the tickets of the American Streetcar Company at Rio de Janeiro.

'Coin's scarce in these parts since the war with Paraguay,' I explain, answering my friend's bewildered look; 'but these things pass current everywhere instead. If you change a milreis (half-dollar) here, or in any of the towns along the coast, you'll most likely get a lot of them.'

But at that moment a tremendous uproar broke in upon our talk. A big, red-faced Englishman, having accidentally kicked over a fruit-stall, and strewn the ground with waxy guavas and huge ripe 'abogado' pears, of course began to abuse the owner of the stall himself, who retorted with true Brazilian fluency, while the laughter of the bystanders, and the screeching and chattering of the caged monkeys and parrots on the surrounding stalls, made a deafening chorus.

'What can all these parrots and monkeys be here for?' wondered my friend.

'To eat, to be sure! Don't you see that negress yonder carrying off those two parrots to cook? Parrot-pie and monkey soup are among the standard delicacies of Brazil.'

'You don't really mean that, surely?' with a look of horror.

'Indeed I do, though you don't seem to believe it. Why, the first time I came here, I went to dine with a Brazilian grandee, and what should I see but (as I thought) a baby's head looking up at me, with a lack-lustre air, out of my soup! I made just one jump to the door, with a halloo that you might have heard half a mile away; but as I flew through the kitchen I saw a monkey's skin hanging up, and all was explained.' (A fact).

'Ugh! hold your tongue!' shuddered my friend, pressing both hands to his ample white vest, as if fearing to have swallowed a monkey unawares. 'I'm sure I shall never manage to eat soup in this country again!'

And indeed he never did.

DEMOCRACY.

It is amusing to notice the changing style of many Republicans who write and speak against the Democratic party.

According to such opponents Democracy is at times a terrible monster, full blooded and rampant, bent on public mischief, and armed with the power of destruction, and then, turning a sharp corner, by the self same authority Democracy is declared to be a decrepit old thing, shorn of strength, and about ready to fall into the grave of oblivion, unhonored and unsung.

All of which and much more of the same kind, the Democratic party treats as empty nothingness, and so do thousands of intelligent and honest minded Republicans.

It is thread-bare partisan enmity, ancient as the past century, and worthless as a counterfeit nickel.

Dignified opposition and just criticism the Democratic party will always respect, but vulgar abuse and willful misrepresentation it properly disdains.

The reason why the Democratic has outlived other parties in this country, and why it remains to-day, notwithstanding the long years of bitter and mercenary warfare against its very existence, a mighty and wide reaching political organization, is simply because it is now and has ever been the open exponent of Constitutional principles, and the resolute defender of the rights and privileges of a free people.

That is the honored and truthful record of Democracy.

It constitutes an impregnable position.

Democracy, as a party, commenced its labors under the leadership of Thomas Jefferson by securing to the people practical representative government, and it continues to battle for the preservation of popular sovereignty as earnestly as it did in former times to overthrow the aristocratic designs of Federalism.

Democracy is of the people and for the people, and that the people know.

Its march is onward.

A GOOD MAN.

The death of Peter Cooper, the eminent citizen of New York, last week, caused profound and universal sorrow. Having passed far beyond the usual limit of human life, it was reasonable to expect at any day his removal from time into eternity, yet, when the sad event did occur, and it was announced that his venerable and well known form would never again be seen abroad, the tidings carried with them the force of a public shock; and the immense number of people who on Saturday assembled to pay mournful tribute to his memory, spoke louder and more eloquently than words of the popular love he bore.

Peter Cooper was in every particular a good and useful man, and the example of his life actions is a precious legacy to the rising generation, hundreds of whom have cause to bless him as the provider and dispenser of practical benefits.

The truthful inscription over his grave and the noblest life can earn, should be—

PETER COOPER,
AN HONEST MAN AND A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.

THE STAR.

Westward brightly beams the star of Democracy.

Municipal elections held during the past week resulted in rousing majorities for Democratic Mayors and other officers in Chicago,

Cincinnati,
Cleveland,
Dubuque.

Was there ever such an animated corpse as Democracy since the dawn of time?

The very thought of it frightens some of our Republican editorial friends into spasms, as the hanging up of General Jackson's military coat did Britishers after the battle of New Orleans.

Be composed, gentlemen, and wisely bow to fate, you cannot kill Democracy!

It was not born to die.

It is a living, growing power, keeping watch over the liberties of the people.

'Tis the Star of Hope.

C., the U.-G. says that no speech as published in the Congressional Record, and quoted by us last week, was delivered by Representative Harris on the River and Harbor bill. This is false! We were present in the Gallery of the House and heard Mr. Harris deliver it, and ex-Sheriff Ross of Somerset county, a resident of Mr. Honeyman's own town, was also there at the time.

DEMOCRATIC VICTORIES.

The Democrats gained a handsome victory in Rahway on Tuesday last, electing both Democratic Freeholders, which gives the control of the Board to the Democrats for the next year. The Democrats also elect two Councilmen, which makes the Common Council a tie. Moses H. Acken (Dem.) is elected Water Commissioner.

In Trenton the Democrats elect their Mayor and other city officers. The Common Council is Democratic by a two-thirds vote.

In Jersey City, Hoboken, Paterson and Bordentown, the Democrats earned substantial victories.

At the election held at Beverly, Burlington county, a Democratic Council, favorable to license, was elected. Jos. H. Toms, Republican, was elected Freeholder, making the county board a tie. The city has granted no license for two years.

The election in New Brunswick on Tuesday, resulted in a glorious Democratic victory, the Democrats electing the entire city ticket, five out of six Freeholders, and three out of six aldermen. Wm. S. Strong is re-elected Mayor by 454 majority. The County Board of Freeholders stands 15 Democrats to 4 Republicans. Last year it stood 8 Democrats to 11 Republicans.

Honesty is the most honorable title a man can possess.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

John M. C. Marsh, auctioneer, will sell on Wednesday next the stock of milch cows of C. B. Ripley, Esq.

Some of our fishermen are catching a fine lot of suckers in the Rahway river, and the streams emptying into the same.

Joel Moffett has nearly completed the construction of his new house on Mountain avenue. He expects to occupy the same about May 1st.

John Davis, aged 81 years, father-in-law of George P. Leveridge, died on Saturday last of dropsy, of which he has been for some time a sufferer.

Let others go and do likewise. John Darsh has recently had placed in position in front of his store on Broad street, a number of large granite hitching posts.

Mrs. Henry Fairbairn, widow of the late Henry Fairbairn, who formerly resided in Westfield, and mother of Robert Fairbairn, Esq., of Plainfield, died on Tuesday morning last.

The Rev. Warren Hoagland occupied the M. E. Church pulpit on Sunday last, he having been returned to this charge by the late annual conference held at Phillipsburg last week.

Freeholder Mapes has located and has specifications ready for a stone bridge on the Springfield road, near the residence of George P. Brown. The freshet last Fall washed more than one-half of the road-bed near present bridge away.

The Union County Board of Freeholders have recently given out the contract for a stone and iron bridge over the stream near Lambert's Mills, in place of the old arch bridge which was partially washed away by the freshet last Fall.

Hattie Clark, oldest daughter of Stewart E. Clark, residing on Mountain Ave., was married on Tuesday evening last to Henry Mooney, of Newark, N. J. The Rev. N. W. Cadwell, of the Presbyterian church, performed the marriage ceremony.

E. D. Chamberlain recently purchased the well-known horse Tuscarora, otherwise known as the man-eater. It took several men to capture and load him upon a large truck at Jersey City, from which place he was brought to Mr. Chamberlain's farm at Westfield.

The Carleton readings held at the M. E. church on Wednesday evening last for the benefit of Westfield H & L Co. No. 1, was attended by an averaged sized audience. We understand a large number of tickets have been sold and no doubt the affair was a success financially.

On Monday, the coachman of F. Shiller, residing on Broad street, while driving one of Mr. Shiller's ponies to a village cart, the horse became frightened and ran away, throwing the coachman out and injuring him quite severely. But very little damage was done to horse or wagon.

NOTICE!

At a meeting of the Board of Education, held April 9th, 1883, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the Assessor and Collector of Plainfield City, be required to assess and collect for the ensuing year an amount equal to 20-100 per cent. on the taxable valuation of all property in the district as provided by an act approved March 9, 1869, and a supplementary act, approved March 27, 1873.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council preparatory to a third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same. WALTER L. HETFIELD, City Clerk.

AN ORDINANCE

For the assessment of property, and the collection of taxes within the City of Plainfield for the year 1883.

The inhabitants of the city of Plainfield, by their Common Council do enact as follows:

Section 1. There shall be assessed, levied and collected by tax for the current expenses of this city of Plainfield for the year eighteen hundred and eighty-three, the sum of ten thousand dollars ($10,000).

Section 2. There shall be further assessed, levied and collected by tax for the support of the city poor of said city of Plainfield, for the year eighteen hundred and eighty-three, the sum of thirty-five hundred dollars, ($3,500), at the same time and in the same manner as the said sum of ten thousand dollars, mentioned in section one of this ordinance, is assessed, levied and collected.

NOTICE.

At a meeting of the Law and Ordinance Committee the following resolution was adopted:

The Committee on Laws and Ordinances hereby Resolve, That the City Collector be directed to proceed at once to make levies for taxes of 1882, before the expiration of the present warrants now in his hands, or on a failure so to do, the committee will recommend the next warrants for taxes of 1883 be issued to some other person.

MR. GEORGE S. HUNT, the photographer, has moved his studio to No. 13 East Front street, just above the Post Office. His new rooms are specially adapted to his work and supplied with the latest and best appliances for taking pictures by the instantaneous and other processes. On our second page to-day, he advertises great reduction in his terms.

THE always reliable clothiers, McGregor & Co., of Newark, advertise in this issue their usual inducements to buyers that want serviceable and stylish Spring clothing at reasonable prices. Their many Plainfield patrons know where to find them; new customers should turn to the right on leaving the Broad street depot of the C. R. R., and five doors above will see the "Iron Front."

A FOUR-YEAR old son of telegraph operator Blanchard, at the Netherwood station, was so severely burned last week that death resulted Saturday morning. The lad's clothing caught from burning grass, probably lighted by a locomotive spark, and one side of his body was terribly scorched before his father could reach him. He lingered a few days, and hopes of his recovery were held, but the accident resulted fatally.

THE new Bribery law, just signed by the Governor, applies to primary meetings as well as general elections. The Sheriff is required, under a penalty of $1,000, to publish the law 15 days before every election. Sheriff Forsyth, of Union county obeyed the law in this respect, and deputies were stationed at each polling place in Rahway at the recent city election. His action had a good effect in keeping the "corruption fund" in the hands of those who controlled the same.

CITY Treasurer Van Winkle is still seriously ill.

WE publish elsewhere one of the most interesting articles ever given our readers. It is the first of two papers on history and current facts of the city, read before the Union Club.

THERE will be a pigeon shooting match at Campbell's Club House, on Park Ave., next Saturday afternoon, between two amateurs, at twenty birds each for $50 a side. Birds will also be furnished for other matches.

THE Times very truly reasons that in the late "indecency case" it was not necessary to have all the little girls listen to the nine-times repeated complaints. The Times will rejoice with us, consequently, that there is to be no trial and no most abhorrent cross-examination of the little complainants.

JACOB Schaefer is the champion billiard player of the world, he having beaten the French champion, Vignaux, at Chicago last Friday evening at the balk-line game. The score at the close stood: Schaefer, 600; Vignaux, 509. The former made the unprecedented run of 220 during the game.

THE Rev. Howard Crosby, of New York, testified at Elizabeth, Wednesday, that the bible-agent recently arrested in this city for indecency is a Sunday-School teacher and a most exemplary young man. A very near relative of the accused was insane for ten years and died by her own hand. Possibly the young man was unconscious of and not responsible for his acts.

AT a regular Encampment of Winfield Scott Post No. 73, G. A. R., held April 11, 1883, the following resolution was offered and unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the thanks of this Post be tendered to the Hon. Wm. B. Maxson for his generosity and kindness in presenting to this Post, free of cost, Articles of Incorporation of said Post, under the laws of New Jersey.

A TRAVELING agent for a New York bible publisher, was arrested last Friday, after two or three weeks' uninterrupted practice of offences against morality and decency. He was examined before the Mayor and sent to Elizabeth to "await action," under nine commitments holding him to $250 bail in each. Before the Court at that place Wednesday, through his counsel John H. Jackson, Esq., the accused waived trial and the Court will next Wednesday pass sentence in its discretion the same as if a plea of guilty had been entered.

THE American Angler is the only paper published in the United States devoted exclusively to the piscatorial art. It is ably edited by Wm. C. Harris, at 252 Broadway, N. Y., assisted by an efficient corps of correspondents. The Angler has recently been enlarged to twenty pages. An extra illustrated issue, entitled "The Trout of American Waters," is before us, and is deserving of notice. This issue treats solely of the trout family of fishes, habits, habitat, structure, coloration, tackle used, &c. All lovers of fishing should subscribe for this really excellent journal. Address as above.

Services in German.

On Sunday morning next, at a quarter past ten o'clock, services conducted by the Rev. Mr. Koehl, will be held in the Mission Chapel, North Plainfield. All Germans are specially invited. They return thanks to the Congregationalists for the use of their Church the past few Sundays.

Waldo Messaros' Lecture.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Congregational church certainly fulfilled their promise on Tuesday evening. They promised all who would attend the lecture of Waldo Messaros, the Greek orator, "a rare treat," and we are sure all who were there consider that they had it. The subject was "Hooks in our noses." It is impossible to describe the lecture and it would have given but a faint idea of it to have reported it. It needed to be listened to to be enjoyed. Mr. Messaros has a rare gift of eloquence and we should think would captivate an audience on almost any subject he presented. It is no secret now why his church is packed every Sunday. We hope our Congregational friends will bring Mr. Messaros to Plainfield again next season. If they do it is safe to say every seat in their chapel will be occupied the evening he talks.

A T Party.

The young ladies of the Fidelity Society of the Crescent Avenue Church, gave a tea party, Tuesday evening, whereat they cordially entertained and hospitably treated about a hundred guests. The rooms were handsomely decorated, tables laden with flowers and lighted candles were set for seventy-two, and English Breakfast and Oolong tea, sandwiches, cake, fruit and other edibles were bountifully served. A number from other churches were present, the congregations of which hope that their young ladies will follow the example that afforded them so enjoyable an experience.

Regarding Liquor Licenses.

Wednesday of last week, Judge Dixon read from the bench a new law in regard to liquor licenses. Heretofore the applicant had simply to state that he wished a license to keep an inn "in the house where he now resides," to which was attached the names of twelve freeholders. During the last days of the Legislature, however, an act was passed that makes sweeping changes. The act was approved March 23, the day the Legislature adjourned, "to take effect immediately." The new law compels each person who signs an application to record with his name the nature and location of the real estate by virtue of owing which his signature is of avail. We shall publish the law in full as soon as we can procure it.

Acknowledgment by the Governors.

Plainfield Steam Fire Engine and Hose Companies have received from the Board of Governors of the Muhlenburg Hospital the following acknowledgment of the donation of some $50 made by those companies to the funds of that Institution:

To the members of Plainfield Engine and Hose Cos., No. 2:

PLAINFIELD, N. J., April 1883.

GENTLEMEN:—At a meeting of Managing Committee of the Board of Governors of Muhlenburg Hospital, held Friday evening, April 6, 1883, the following resolutions were unanimously passed:

Resolved, That the thanks of the Board of Governors of Muhlenburg Hospital, are and are hereby tendered to the members of Plainfield Engine and Hose Companies No. 2, of this city, for their generous donation to the funds of the Institution, this evening presented by their committee, and that in this charitable act the Board of Governors recognizes that readiness of purpose which always characterizes the Firemen, not only to answer the calls of their particular vocation, but to respond with equal promptness to the entreaties for aid for the sick, suffering and destitute, when such appeals are brought to their knowledge.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Board and a copy of the same be transmitted to the companies above named.

By order,
W. R. COCK, Sec'y.

Personals.

MR. R. R. Lancaster and family of LaGrande avenue, sail on the 26th inst., by Steamer "Servia" for Europe. They will reside during the Summer at Vevay, Switzerland.

Mr. Lawrence O'Neil has the sympathy of a host of friends in his recent affliction, he having lost two grown up daughters from pneumonia within two weeks of each other, while another younger daughter lies dangerously ill from the same disease.

Vote of Sympathy.

At a meeting of Howell Division, No. 97, Sons of Temperance, held Tuesday evening, April 10th, the following action was taken:

WHEREAS, Two of our esteemed brothers, Joseph and James R. Perine, having, through the wisdom of the Almighty Father, been called upon to mourn the death of a beloved wife and mother, we deem it right to Resolve, That the heartfelt sympathy of this Division is hereby extended to our stricken brothers, coupled with the confident hope that He, "who tempers the wind to the shorn lamb," will be with and uphold them in this the hour of their sad affliction.

Fire Board Election.

The annual election for members of the Board of Managers of the Fire Department took place in this city Tuesday, and was attended with some little interest. The polls were open from 2 to 7 o'clock. The board consists of six members, of whom two are elected every year. Both of the retiring members, Edward L. Morris and Ephraim H Depew, the latter the Treasurer of the Board, were candidates for re-election. There was no opposition to the former, who received 397 out of a total of 417 votes. Rufus K. Case and Hugo Weigmann ran against Depew, and there was strife between the friends of each faction. Case received 151 votes, Weigmann 63, and Depew 186, the latter being elected. Jos. A. Hubbard was re-elected Assessor, getting all but two of the votes cast, and $7,000 was appropriated to maintain the department. 36 votes were cast giving authority to pay the Assessor's fees.

Grove Street Bridge.

Much has been said by residents of both this city and North Plainfield in condemnation of the new iron bridge over Green Brook at Grove street, and the impression has gone abroad that the Somerset County Board of Freeholders were to blame for the erection of such an inferior structure as a fine avenue like Grove street demanded, by reason of parsimoniousness on their part. Since our last issue we have interviewed members of both the Somerset and Union County Boards, and find that injustice has been done members of the former Board by said impression. We gather that, although the Union County Board desired to build a bridge the entire width of the street, in consequence of the fact that at the time there was a lack of necessary funds to rebuild all the bridges swept away by the freshet, and the feeling throughout portions of the county was against erecting costly structures, (even an indignation meeting being held in Elizabeth on the subject) it was decided to erect a bridge such as is now partially completed at this point, by the Union County members. Resolutions to that effect were presented to the Somerset Co. Board, which promptly agreed to such a structure, although some members were opposed to iron bridges. Therefore no particular blame can be attached to that body. On Thursday of last week, the Union County Board met and decided to remove the present new bridge to Water street, and erect a new one the entire width of the street. This proposition was submitted to the Somerset County Board at their meeting on Tuesday last. That body decided to meet together at the site of the bridge on Thursday morning April 12th, and view the premises. It now certainly does rest with the Somerset Board whether a bridge shall be built befitting Grove street.

As we go to press to-day (Thursday) the Somerset County Board, after a morning spent in this city with the Bridge Com. from the Union County Board, are still in session and the latter Committee, after waiting to receive a favorable verdict from the Board, has adjourned.

The Tier Pond Case.

We are so fortunate this week as to be able to give below the full text of the opinion of Judge Van Syckel, rendered at Elizabeth Thursday of last week, in a case of local interest and judicial importance:

N. J. Supreme Court, Union Co. Circuit.
Boice, et al, vs Tier. } In Trespass.
Cross, Bergen & Noe for Pl'ff, J. R. & N. English for Def't.

OPINION BY JUDGE VAN SYCKEL.

The trespass complained of was the cutting and carrying away of the ice upon a pond on the lands of the plaintiff. The evidence shows that the plaintiff are in possession and seized in fee of the real estate of the late Cornelius Boice. A portion of this tract of land is covered by the pond upon which the ice in question was formed. The defendant justifies the taking of the ice under a license from Phineas M. French. It is shown that a stream of water runs through the premises of the plaintiff upon which the said French is the owner of a mill below. The water power for said mill is furnished by means of a dam in said stream, on lands of said French, which he of right maintains at such a height that it flows the water back upon the lands of said plaintiff, thereby forming the aforesaid pond. The right of French to have the water flow down to his mill for the purposes thereof is dominant, subject only to the reasonable uses by the plaintiff thereof, for their close, for house use, for their cattle and ordinary navigation. The right of French is not to the water while it remains in the pond on the land of the plaintiff; he has not the right to go up there and take out a single drop; his right is simply to hold back the water by means of his dam, and when needed to have it flow down to his mill wheels. The plaintiff may use the water for the purposes mentioned, but cannot sell it to others, if thereby the quantity which would otherwise become available for power to the mill owner, is appreciably diminished. This is well settled law. The fact that the water in the pond becomes congealed in the winter and assumes the form of ice, does not affect the legal rule in regard to it. The rights of the parties are not changed by the action of the elements. The mill owner has no more right to go upon the lands of the plaintiff and take the ice, than he has to go there in summer and take the water. The plaintiff may take the ice for their reasonable family uses upon the premises, but they cannot sell it if thereby the water flow to the plaintiff's mill is appreciably diminished. In this case the question as to diminution of the power cannot arise, as the ice was severed and removed by the defendants, vendee. The defendant had no right to sell the ice and therefore his license furnishes no defence to Tier. The value of the ice in this case would be the measure of plaintiff's damages, but they have failed to show the quantity taken or its value. The evidence of Tier who was called by the plaintiff to prove damages, is that in 1878 he took no ice from the locus in quo, and very little in 1879. With this meagre evidence, I can find for the plaintiff only six cents damages.

[The above decision rules that Mr. French has no control over the water above the dam, nor power to lease any privileges in relation thereto; and that the same belongs entirely to Mrs. Boice and Mr. Tier the owners of the land surrounding.]

A REPORT ON TAXATION IN THE CITY OF PLAINFIELD TO THE UNION CLUB.

History and Current Facts.

FIRST PAPER.

Previous to 1848, Plainfield was a township controlled and governed as to its local affairs by a township committee consisting of three persons, with power to raise such amounts for school, fire, and road purposes each year as the inhabitants of said township should vote at the annual meeting, which was usually held in the month of April.

In 1849 a new policy was initiated. In that year a certain portion of the township of Plainfield was divided off and called District Number One, and the inhabitants of that district were authorized to raise $2,000 for school purposes, to be vested in the trustees of said district, elected according to an act entitled, "An Act to establish Public Schools"; and they were also authorized to purchase and hold such real estate as might be necessary for the purpose of erecting one or more public school houses, not exceeding five acres, and sell, exchange or mortgage the same, as might be most for the public benefit; and to apply the money which they should raise under the direction of the act then passed for the erection and maintenance of one or more suitable school houses, and for the support of one or more public schools. The school trustees so elected were to advertise the amount that they desired for school purposes and were to recommend the amount they thought necessary for that purpose; and if not sanctioned by a vote of the electors of school district number one, the township committee had the right to determine the amount of money to be raised; and the money, when raised, was to be paid to the town superintendent of public schools for the township of Plainfield.

I have spoken of this act as the first departure from the régime that had previously existed in Plainfield, with reference to the management of public affairs. It will be noticed that this act did not create a corporation; it simply emancipated the trustees, who were elected by the people, from the control of the people of the township of Plainfield, in the matter of the amount of money that they should raise for school purposes.

In 1860 the trustees so elected were constituted a corporation, and the property that they held as trustees under the form er acts, was vested in the corporation, which was given the same powers with reference to the control of the property that the individual trustees originally had.

In 1866, by a special law, the said trustees were authorized to raise not to exceed one-fourth of one per centum upon all the property within said school district for school purposes, and the time for election of trustees was changed from the general annual meeting of the inhabitants of the town to a special meeting of the inhabitants of the district. By this act, the amount that they were authorized to raise was increased to about $5,800.

In 1867 they were authorized to borrow $15,000 and issue bonds of $500 each; two bonds to be paid each year, and the amount to pay the interest and the principal of the bonds, to be added each year to the assessment and collected as an extra tax.

In 1869 they were authorized to raise $15,000 additional; principal and interest to be paid as provided for in last act. They were also, in this year, made a Board of Education, and their powers were enlarged and it was directed that all their moneys should be deposited in the First National Bank of Plainfield or in such bank as the trustees should determine, to the credit of the trustees; certificates of which deposits should exonerate the township collector from all liability as to the funds so deposited.

In 1873 the boundaries of school district number one were made to conform to and include the limits of the city of Plainfield, and the number of trustees was increased to five, their terms of office being five years; and their election was ordered at the time of the annual city election, and city trustees or the Board of Education were given the power to determine annually what amount of tax should be required for school purposes, not to exceed one-half of one per cent. of the taxable valuation of the district, including the State school tax for that year; and upon a requisition and certificate of the Board and an advertisement for three weeks, the assessors were required to assess and collect the amount, at the same time and in the same manner with the city taxes.

This act completed the emancipation of the school board from the control of the popular vote in determining what amount should be raised for school purposes in Plainfield.

In 1854 the Legislature passed an act creating and declaring all owners or proprietors of dwelling houses liable to injury by fire, situate in the village of Plainfield and in the township of Warren within certain defined limits, a body politic under the name of the Plainfield Fire Department. The capital stock was limited to $4,000, solely to be applied to procuring machinery, engines and other fire-preventing appliances, and the amount which it should be lawful to raise in any one year should not exceed $1,000. The said fire department was authorized, through its Board of Managers, to make an assessment of its own and to levy an especial tax upon its members residing within such limits each year, for the purpose of raising the sum required by the corporation; and provision was also made for the collection of said tax through nearly the same machinery by which State and county taxes were to be collected.

In 1867 an amendatory act was passed to increase the capital stock of such fire department to $14,000, and authorizing them to raise $2,000 by tax.

In 1869 the authorized capital stock was increased to $20,000 and the amount that said corporation was allowed to raise was increased to $4,000 and the department was also authorized to borrow $18,000, the interest and principal to the amount of $2,000 of which bonds were to be paid each year by an extra tax.

In 1870 the authorized capital stock was increased to $50,000, and they were authorized to raise each year $6,000 by tax, and to borrow $10,000 additional, of which $1,000 of principal was to be paid each year out of the tax levy, besides the interest.

In 1871 the limits of the fire department were extended.

In 1873 the duty of the said fire department to retire and cancel $1,000 each year, as provided in the act of 1869, was deferred for seven years, and they were authorized to borrow $3,000 in addition to what they then owed for current expenses.

In 1875 they were authorized to borrow $5,000 additional money; $1,000 of the principal of the loan to be paid each year, and their total annual assessment not to exceed $7,000.

In 1882 the department was authorized to renew bonds then due or that would become due on or before July 1st, 1884.

It will be seen that through this legislation, Plainfield has two distinct corporations, one in charge of its schools and the other in charge of its fire department, neither of which is under the control of the city proper; one of which, the fire department, is authorized to raise $7,000 annually and the other of which, the school trustees, is authorized to raise one-half of one per cent. on the taxable valuation of the city. At the present time, the finances of these two corporations stand about thus: The fire department has bonds outstanding amounting to $12,000, and in addition owes a note of about $3,000; assessed against property in Plainfield and North Plainfield for 1883, $7,000; collected in 1882, $7,800. The Board of Education has outstanding bonds amounting to $15,000; tax levy for 1882, $28,418; collected for 1883, $21,129.19; collected for all previous years in 1882, $29,906.41.

In 1869 the Legislature first granted a municipal charter to Plainfield. Under this charter the limits of the city were inside the limits of the township and the township government still continued and had supervision as before of roads, of the town poor and the schools outside of District No. 1.

The township Committee from 1869 to 1874, raised by taxation about $5,000 annually for township purposes. This should be borne in mind in comparing the early years of the city under the charter with the last few years. For five years after Plainfield became a city the township committee raised and expended about $4,000 annually for local purposes within what is now the city of Plainfield. By this charter of 1869, the city government was vested in a mayor, three aldermen, eleven common councilmen, a treasurer and so many policemen and such subordinate officers as the common council may deem it necessary to appoint, who had power to raise and spend $10,000 or a greater sum, if the people voted it, for nearly the same purposes that our present city charter makes provision; but it was especially provided that this charter should in no way conflict with the election of the township officers, but they should not exercise jurisdiction within the city limits.

In 1872 the city charter was amended and practically a new charter was adopted which abolished the township within the limits of the city, although the township do not seem to have recognized the fact that they were abolished until a new act with that expressed intent was passed by the legislature in 1873. The charter of 1872 constituted one mayor, eleven common councilmen and one treasurer with the assessor and collector, three local officers transferred from the township to the city, the executive and legislative officers of the city of Plainfield, and gave them the control of all local administration not vested in the fire department and the board of education. The care of the streets, the lighting of the city, the control and direction of the police, provision for the poor, a civil and criminal administration in connection with city ordinances vested in a city court, the collection and disbursements of all revenues raised by taxation or otherwise within the limits of the city of Plainfield, were by this charter intrusted to the city government, and for all this they were authorized to raise for general city purposes by tax, such sum of money as might be necessary for the support of the city poor, and such further sum, not exceeding $10,000, as they shall deem expedient for the current expenses of the city and all other purposes and objects authorized by the act, with the proviso that if in the opinion of the common council more money was needed, the people might hold an election and vote whether more money should be granted or not.

In 1873 this charter was amended in several unimportant details and the time for collecting taxes was changed so that taxes became delinquent September 1st, instead of December 20th, in each year.

In 1874 an act was passed authorizing the Common Council to raise for city purposes under the charter such sum of money as a percentage of 40 cents on each hundred dollars of assessed valuation upon all persons and property within the city would produce if this amendment should be ratified by a popular vote. The popular vote was had and the amended provision rejected.

Once only, i. e. in 1876, the people voted an extra tax levy of $5,000 for city purposes under the provisions of the charter of 1872.

To recapitulate—From 1850 to 1854 local administration in Plainfield was divided between the township committee and the trustees of school district No. 1.

From 1854 to 1869 between township committee, trustees of school district No. 1 and the Plainfield fire department.

From 1869 to 1873 between township committee, trustees of school district No. 1, Plainfield fire department and the inhabitants of the city of Plainfield.

And from 1873 to the present time between the last three.

In 1850 Plainfield had a population of 2,447

Population of Elizabeth
1860 was 11,567
1870 was 20,832, increase 85 per cent.
1880 was 28,229, " 30 "

Plainfield shows a larger percentage of increase during the decade from 1870 to 1880, than either Orange or Elizabeth.

When we compare the increase of expenditure in connection with Plainfield's growth as disbursed by the several corporate entities having the local administration in charge, we notice a remarkable difference at once.

The school trustees commenced with authority the raise $2,000 in 1848 and have expended, until now they annually levy a tax exceeding $25,000.

The fire department commenced with authority to raise $1,000 in 1854 and have increased until now they annually assess the inhabitants within their limits for $7,000.

The amount raised annually for general city purposes has not been regularly increased although as will soon appear the amount levied and raised has varied from divers causes in different years.

The following table shows the amounts assessed in Plainfield each year from 1870 to 1882 inclusive for school, fire, general city and township purposes:

YEAR.	SCHOOL.	FIRE DEP'MNT.	CITY, ETC.
1870....	$13,175 00	abt. $4,000	$13,000 00
1871....	16,750 00	.....	16,000 00

1882....	[illegible]	7,000	12,500 00

*And $8,872 raised by Mandamus to pay judg'mts.

It will be seen from the foregoing that while the amount raised for schools in Plainfield has increased since 1870 from a little over $15,000 to above $28,000, or about 90 per cent. and the amount raised for the fire department has increased in the same time from $4,000 to $7,000, or about 75 per cent. The amount raised for general city and local purposes has diminished from $21,000 in 1872 to $12,500 in 1882; while the population was increasing 60 per cent. and roads and streets and lamps and general city expenses were multiplying each year by the rule of geometrical progression and the assessed valuation of property in Plainfield increased from $2,939,475 to $4,476,240, or more than 50 per cent.

When we consider that the city in addition to being imprisoned in this cast-iron straight-jacket of a money limitation by its charter, must bear and defray the burdens of all the other governmental agencies out of its limited fund it becomes little less than a miracle that the city has maintained its existence and been able to eke out anything for its own public necessities.

In the first place out of this limited fund the city is obliged to pay the salaries and expenses of the officers who administer the entire local tax system for the joint benefit of the state, the county, the school board and the city. These all participate in the results of the labors of the assessor and collector of the city, but the assessor and collector are paid solely from the city fund—limited to $10,000 annually.

In the second place, by a peculiar provision of New Jersey law the state and county are entitled to their full proportion or quota of the moneys assessed against Plainfield each year before the city is allowed to take and apply any moneys of the tax levy to its own wants and necessities. Of course there is a certain amount of the tax levy each year that is not collectable and still more that is delayed in collection. This all comes out of the city fund.

WILLIAM THOMPSON,

To The Public.

In reference to the accusation of cruelty or neglect towards Henry Bossewaldt as appearing in a paper of the city last Saturday, and in the communication of Mr. E. W. VanVoorhis in Monday's issue of the same paper, I feel compelled to contradict the statements made in reference to the treatment of the boy. I do not intend to deny where I am wrong, but at the same time I cannot allow my character to be slandered in the way it has been done, and without any foundation whatever.

When it was first told me that the boy did not feel well I sent him to bed myself and inquired more than a dozen times if he felt cold and wanted more covering. He was not in bed for a week as stated, but was up every day on his own account, even on the day of his removal, and has been cared for every day. It is true he had to sleep in a shed for the last two weeks, the same place he slept in all last summer, and the place is neither damp nor unhealthy, not unhealthier than any barn where a coachman has to sleep, and I have never heard a complaint about it. It is not true as Mr. E. W. VanVoorhis stated that the boy slept without sheets or quilts, as he had both, and I am not to blame when he kicked them on the floor where they were found next morning. It is not true that I had the shed cleaned to give it a favorable impression. I had the mattress emptied and the quilts put in the air. Neither is it true when the boy denies that I wanted a doctor to attend to him, as I told my workman, Mr. John Gabel to tell him to get ready for the doctor, and the boy's answer was to go and mind his own business as he don't want a doctor. The same he said to my oldest daughter.

During his sickness he has been attended to, and as long as he has been well he has been eating with the family at the same time and on the same table and had the same food as I had. Where I am to blame and where I blame myself very much is for not having sent for a doctor without the boy's knowledge; but thinking it was only a cold that he caught by running to the Washington Rock fire. I took it lightly.

The shed where he slept has since been examined by a committee of Warren Engine Co., and not found damp and unhealthy.

Below I give sworn statements of Mr. J. H. Sayers, my next neighbor, who could not help but see and hear everything that was going on, also of Mr. John Pabel, my workman, and of Miss Christina Ruth, my servant, as to the truth of the above.

HUGO WAGEMANN.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY, County of Union—ss. Personally appeared before me Hugo Wagemann, John Gabel, Christina Ruth, and John H. Sayers, who being sworn according to law say that the above statements and each of them are true to the best of their knowledge and belief.

POSTSCRIPT!

The Philadelphia train leaving this city at 8:31, was run into by a Lehigh Valley R. R. Engine at the crossing between Bound Brook and Weston this (Thursday) morning and a serious accident resulted. The Valley engine struck the passenger train just between the last two cars, and threw the rear one over, entirely wrecking it and somewhat damaging the other. To add to the seriousness of the affair the car caught fire from the overturned stoves and ten minutes after the rear car was completely consumed.

Everybody aboard was able to crawl out, and although 13 were more or less seriously injured, none were killed outright. The fireman of the Valley engine, which was a special one used by the road's officials, is probably injured fatally and his engine wrecked. A number of Plainfielders were aboard but with the exception of Mr. Chas. Zimmerman, of North Plainfield, none were seriously hurt so far as could be learned as we go to press. Mrs. H. B. Kaufman, Mrs. Davis, Messrs. Morgan Taylor, Gideon Barnes and A. B. Reynell are said to have been on the train, but they are not named among the victims. Mr. Reynell was slightly hurt in the right arm.

Mr. Zimmerman was one of the worst, but his pluck and the skill of Dr. C. M. Field, who was telegraphed for, will bring the sufferer through all right. His head was terribly cut above the left eye, his nose was almost split open and his left hand burnt to a blister. In room 5 of the Bound Brook Hotel his wounds were sewed and bandaged, during which operation the patient proved himself a man of phenomenal courage.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

A Conscientious Man's Testimony. Rev. Isaac Aiken, Pittsburgh, Pa., writes: I take great pleasure in stating that, after having suffered with Dyspepsia for about fifteen years, I have been entirely cured by the use of Coe's Dyspepsia Cure. For years I knew not what it was to pass five hours without intense pain. My case was considered so marvelous that, for a time, it was feared it might be fictitious, but I am now so well convinced that I have been not simply relieved, but permanently cured, that I can conscientiously recommend Coe's Dyspepsia Cure to all victims of Dyspepsia.

In the Summer time, Elyphus Lyon, of Nelson, Madison Co., N. Y., says: I was afflicted with Diarrhœa three years ago, which resisted all the remedies of several physicians, and continued to wear me down for three or four months, when I applied to Dr. Foord for advice. He gave me a bottle of his Tonic Cordial, and in a week I was cured and have had no return to that complaint since.

A Chicago Merchant's Experience: After I had become almost skin and bone, with neither strength, appetite nor ambition left, and the doctors couldn't help me, two bottles Parker's Ginger Tonic cured me completely.—M. B. Wescott, Lamp Manufacturer, Chicago.

Shiloh's Consumption Cure. This is the best question the most successful Cough Medicine we have ever sold, a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup and Bronchitis, while it's wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

This entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore gray hair to its original color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead, and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. SMITH, KLINE & CO., Wholesale Agents, Philadelphia, and HALL & RUCKEL, New York. 1y

THE BAD BOY.

HIS PA PLAYS JOKES.

"Say, do you think a little practical joke does any hurt?" asked the bad boy of the grocery man, as he came in with his Sunday suit on, and a bouquet in his button hole, and pried off a couple of figs from a new box that had just been opened.

"No, sir," said the grocery man, as he licked off the syrup that dripped from a quart measure, from which he had been filling a jug. "I hold that a man that gets mad at a practical joke, that is, one that does not injure him, is a fool and ought to be shunned by all decent people. That's a nice bouquet you have in your coat. What is it, pansies? Let me smell of it," and the grocery man bent over in front of the boy to take a whiff at the bouquet. As he did so a stream shot out of the innocent looking bouquet and struck him full in the face, and ran down over his shirt, and the grocery man yelled murder, and fell over a barrel of axe helves and scythe snaths, and then groped around for a towel to wipe his face.

"You condem skunk," said the grocery man to the boy, as he took up an axe helve and started for him, "what kind of a golblasted squirt gun you got there? I will maul you by thunder," and he rolled up his shirt sleeves.

"There, keep your temper. I took a test vote of you on the subject of practical jokes, before the machine began to play upon the conflagration that was raging on your whiskey nose, and you said a man that would get mad at a joke was a fool, and now I know it. Here, let me show it to you. There is a rubber hose runs from the bouquet inside my coat to my pants pocket, and there is a bulb of rubber that holds about half a pint, and when a feller smells of the posy, I squeeze the bulb, and you see the result. It's fun, where you don't squirt it on a person that gets mad."

The grocery man said he would give the boy half a pound of figs if he would lend the bouquet to him for half an hour to play it on a customer, and the boy fixed it on the grocery man, and turned the nozzle so it would squirt right back into the grocery man's face. He tried it on the first customer that came in, and got it right in his own face, and then the bulb in his pants pocket got to leaking and the rest of the water ran down the grocery man's trousers leg, and he gave it up in disgust, and handed it back to the boy. "How was it that your pa had to be carried home from the sociable in a hack the other night?" asked the grocery man as he stood close to the stove so his pants leg would dry. "He has not got to drinking again, has he?"

"O, no," said the boy, as he filled the bulb with vinegar, to practice on his chum, "it was this bouquet that got pa into the trouble. You see I got pa to smell of it, and I just filled him chuck full of water. He got mad and called me all kinds of names, and said I was no good on earth, and I would fetch up in State prison, and then he wanted to borrow it to wear to a sociable. He said he would have more fun than you could shake a stick at, and I asked him if he didn't think he would fetch up in State's prison, and he said it was different with a man. He said when a man played a joke there was a certain dignity about it that was lacking in a boy. So I lent it to him, and we all went to the sociable in the basement of the church. I never see pa more kitteny than he was that night. He filled the bulb with ice water, and the first one he got to smell of his button-hole bouquet was an old maid who thinks pa is a heathen, but she likes to be made something of by anybody that wears pants, and when pa sidled up to her and began talking about what a great work the Christian women of the land were doing in educating the heathen, she felt real good, and then she noticed pa's posy in his button-hole and she touched it, and then reached over her beak to smell of it. Pa he squeezed the bulb, and about half a tea-cup of water struck her right on the nose, and some of it went into her strange place, and, O, my, didn't she yell. The sisters gathered around her, and they said her face was all perspiration, and the paint was coming off, and they took her in the kitchen, and she told them pa had slapped her with a dish of ice cream, and the wimmin told the minister and the deacons, and they went to pa for an explanation, and pa told them it was not so, and the minister got interested and got near pa, and pa let the water go at him, and hit him in the eye, and then a deacon got a dose, and pa laughed and then the minister, who used to go to college and be a hazer, and box, he got mad and squared off and hit pa three times right by the eye, and one of the deacons he kicked pa, and pa got mad and said he could clean out the whole shebang, and began to pull off his coat, when they bundled him out of doors, and ma got mad to see pa abused, and she left the sociable, and I had to stay and eat ice cream and things for the whole family. Pa says that settles it with him. He says they haven't got any more Christian charity in that church than they have got in a tannery. His eyes was just getting over being black from the sparring lessons, and now he has got to go through the oyster and beefsteak cure again. He says it is all owing to me."

"Well, what has all this got to do with your putting up signs in front of my store, 'Rotten Eggs and Frowy Butter a specialty,'" said the grocery man, as he got the boy by the ear and pulled him around. "You have got an idea you are smart, and I want you to keep away from here. The next time I catch you in here I shall call the police and have you pulled. Now git!"

The boy pushed his ear back on the side of his head where it belonged, took out a cigarette and lit it, and after puffing smoke in the face of the grocery cat that was sleeping on the cover to the sugar barrel, he said: "If I was a provision pirate, that never sold anything but what was spoiled so it couldn't be sold in a first-class store, who cheated in weights and measures, who bought only wormy figs and decayed codfish, who got his butter from a fat rendering establishment, his cider from a vinegar factory, and his sugar from a glucose factory, I would not insult the son of one of the first families. Why, sir, I could go out on the corner, and when I saw customers coming here I could tell a story that would turn their stomachs, and send them to the grocery on the next corner. Suppose I should tell them that the cat sleeps in the dried apple barrel, that the mice made nests in the prune box, and rats run riot through the raisins, and that you never wash your hands except on Decoration Day and Christmas, that you wipe your nose on your shirt sleeves, and that you have the itch, do you think your business would be improved? Suppose I should tell the customers that you buy sourkraut of a wooden-shoe Polacker, who makes it out of pieces of cabbage that he gets by gathering swill, and you sell that stuff to respectable people, could you pay your rent? If I should tell them you put lozengers in the collection plate at church, and charge the minister forty cents a pound for oleomargarine, you would have to close up. Old man, I am onto you, and now you apologize for pulling my ear."

The grocery man turned pale during the recital, and finally said the bad boy was one of the best little fellows in the town, and the boy went out and hung up a sign in front, "Girl wanted to cook."—Peck's Sun.

MORALITIES.

Every man can boast of one admirer.

The tongue is the worst part of a bad servant.

Obstinacy and heat in argument are surest proofs of folly.

Worth begets in base minds envy; in great souls, emulation.

As every thread of gold is valuable so is every minute of time.

Chance is a word void of sense; nothing can exist without a cause.

Ill fortune never crushed that man whom good fortune deceived not.

Truth is as impossible to be soiled by any outward touch as the sunbeam.

One pound of learning requires ten pounds of common sense to apply it.

We should believe only in works, words are sold for nothing everywhere.

Girls we love for what they are; young men for what they promise to be.

Talking and eloquence are not the same; to speak, and to speak well are two things.

In character, in manners, in style, in all things the supreme excellence is simplicity.

Zeal without humility is like a ship without a rudder, liable to be stranded at any moment.

Don't judge a man by his failure in life, for many a man fails because he is too honest to succeed.

He who does a base thing in zeal for his friend, burns the golden thread that ties their hearts together.

Nature has written a letter of credit upon some men's faces, which is honored almost wherever presented.

Political parties cannot forever live on reminiscences, any more than a tramp can be prosperous on the fact he has 'seen better days.'

Feelings come and go like light troops following victory of the present; but principals, like troops of the line, are undisturbed and stand fast.

Better the chance of shipwreck on a voyage of high purpose than expend life in paddling hither and thither on a shallow stream to no purpose at all.

DRINK TO MY SUCCESS.

It was real funny to see him brace up as he turned the corner, button his threadbare black coat, adjust his hat, shoved a pencil behind his ear, and try to disguise himself. When he had fixed himself he passed down the street, entered a saloon, and walking straight up to the bar he asked:

'Is your name Blank?'

'I expect it is,' was the reply.

'John Blank?'

'Vhell, der poys call me Shon.'

'Can I speak to you in private, Mr. Blank?'

'You can speak right oudt here. Nopody is aroundt except my poy, und he dosn' hear us.'

'I thought it would be better to sit down at the table and talk over our glasses of beer.'

'I guess not. I can shtand oop und hear all vat you say.'

'Well, Mr. Blank, I have been deputized to ask you if you would be a candidate for Mayor next year.'

'Me?'

'Yes. You are said to be one of the most popular men in Detroit. You are rich, popular, liberal and could be elected by a large majority.'

The saloonist looked at him for a long minute and then asked:

'Are you dry?'

'Never was so dry in my life.'

With a perfectly placid countenance Mr. Blank filled a 'schooner' with water, placed it on the bar, and looked the man square in the eye as he said:

'I vhas a tousand times ableeged to der poys, but I can't except dot office.'

'You can't? Don't you want to be Mayor of Detroit?'

'No, my friendt. I haf sometings better ash dot. I vhas going to run for Governor next time! Come in real often und dhrink to my success!'

HONOR BRIGHT.

He was about to take a Woodward avenue car in Detroit, when he changed his mind and waited for a man coming up the street. He looked stern and solemn and unrelenting and there was ice in his mouth as he replied:

'Yes, fine day enough, Mr. Jones, do you remember that you met me one day two years ago and asked for the loan of $10?'

'Two years ago—$10—asked for a loan? Let's see. No, I do not remember, but I do not wish to dispute your word.'

'Well, sir, you asked for a loan.'

'And did I get it?'

'Of course you did.'

'Is that so? Well, if I did, it was the only time in my life, and I ought to remember it. Did you want to lend me ten more?'

'No, sir!' I want you to return that loan!'

'Sorry—very sorry, but I can't do it this month.'

'I want that money before Saturday or I'll take steps!'

'Ah!'

'I'll post you as the meanest man in Detroit!'

'Honor bright?'

'Yes, sir.'

'Say,' said Jones, as he looked greatly relieved, 'I've no commercial rating, no social standing, and am continually struggling in a half-way position, being able to get credit and dodge old creditors. If you'll only post me I'll know just where I stand and what to look out for, and it'll save me working half an hour to get a peanut vender good-natured enough to trust me five cents worth. Ah! Smith, I knew you'd do me a good turn if it ever came handy.'

A good way to remove dust from a carpet is to fasten a damp cloth over the broom; with this the dust may be literally taken up. This will be found useful in the sick room, and also in any room where there are many small articles to catch dust. It brightens a carpet to wipe it off in this way even after the usual sweeping has been done.

USEFUL HINTS.

For a fever blister on the lip, moisten it with camphor.

Mallard duck or any kind of game should be served with grape jelly.

Powdered borax scattered in their haunts will disperse cockroaches.

A good side dish can be made of carrots by boiling them until they are soft, and then mashing them.

One pound of green copperas dissolved in one quart of boiling water will destroy foul smells.

To clean metal plates, key-holes, etc., of doors, also stair rods, use sapolio; or, if brass, rotten-stone.

Raw starch, applied with a little water, as a paste, will generally remove all stains from bed ticking.

Beets and carrots, boiled separately, but sliced and served in the same dish, make a good combination and a pretty one.

Silver in constant use is kept nice and bright by washing it every day in warm soapsuds and drying it with old linen.

To clean and polish tortoise shell, use a drop or two of sweet oil, and rub it thoroughly with the ball of the thumb.

To remove spots from furniture, take four ounces of vinegar, two ounces of turpentine. Mix and apply with a flannel cloth.

Burns and scalds are immediately relieved by an application of dry soda covered with a wet cloth, moist enough to dissolve it.

To clean irons use a lump of beeswax tied in a rag; rub the irons with it when hot, and then scour with a paper or cloth, sprinkling with salt.

Spirits of ammonia, diluted with water, if applied with a sponge or flannel to discolored spots of the carpets or garments will often restore the color.

Soot falling on the carpet from open chimneys or carelessly handled stove-pipes, if thickly covered with salt, can be brushed up without injury to the carpet.

A starch that will make linen look as good as new, is made of one quart of well boiled corn starch, three ounces of gum arabic, and two ounces of loaf sugar.

To clean oil cloth, wash with warm milk. Once in six months scour with hot soap suds; dry thoroughly and apply a coat of varnish. They will last as long again.

To give glass great brilliancy, wash with a damp sponge dipped in spirits, then dust with powdered blue or whiting (tied in a muslin bag,) and polish with a chamois skin.

When carpet is well cleaned sprinkle with salt and fold. When laid, strew with slightly moistened bran before sweeping. This with salt will freshen up wonderfully.

A paste made of whiting and benzine will clean marble; and one made of whiting and chloride of soda, spread and left to dry (in the sun if possible) on the marble, will remove spots.

Silk handkerchiefs washed in clear water with pure castile soap look like new. Do not iron, but snap between the fingers until almost dry and then press under a weight.

THINGS NOT TO DO.

Do not tattle.

Do not stare around the room.

Do not linger at the dinner hour.

Do not speak ill of your neighbors.

Do not fidget with your cane, hat or parasol.

Do not lay aside the bonnet at a formal call.

Do not touch the piano unless invited to do so.

Do not make a call of ceremony on a wet day.

Do not turn your back to one seated near you.

Do not carry gossip from one family to another.

Do not make a display of consulting your watch.

Do not handle ornaments of furniture in the room.

Do not go to the room of an invalid unless invited.

Do not remove the glove when making a formal call.

Do not continue to stay longer when conversation begins to lag.

Do not remain when you find the lady on the point of going out.

Do not make the first call if you are a new comer in the neighborhood.

Do not walk around the room examining pictures, while waiting for the hostess.

Do not resume your seat after having arisen to go unless for important reasons.

Do not enter a room without first knocking and receiving an invitation to come in.

Do not open or shut the doors or windows or alter the arrangements of the room.

Do not introduce politics, religion, or weighty topics for conversation, when making calls.

Do not prolong the call if the room is crowded. It is better to call a day or two afterwards.

Do not call upon a person in reduced circumstances with a display of wealth, dress and equipage.

Do not, if a lady, call upon a gentleman, except officially, or professionally, unless he may be a confirmed invalid.

Do not, if a gentleman, seat yourself upon the sofa beside the hostess, or near proximity, unless invited to do so.

Do not take a strange gentleman with you unless positively certain that his introduction will be received with favor.

Do not, if a gentleman, leave the hat in the hall when making merely a formal call. If the call is extended into a visit it may be set aside. Whether sitting or standing the hat may be gracefully held in the hand.

CONVERSATION has been carried on by telephone between New York and Chicago, a distance of 1050 miles as the wires run, and the electrician of the Postal Telegraph Company, over whose wires this feat has been accomplished, expresses confidence that conversation will soon be had between New York and San Francisco.

THE NEW SENATE.

THE DEFEAT OF SENATOR FERRY IN MICHIGAN COMPLETES THE SENATORIAL ELECTION OF 1883.

By the election of a Senator from Michigan the roll of the next Senate is now complete, with the exception of the successor to Hon. E. H. Rollins, of New Hampshire, who will not be elected until June next. The roll is, Republicans, 37; Democrats, 36; Readjusters, 2; vacancy, 1, as follows:

AN ACRE.

From a Western paper we extract the following practical remarks; they will be useful to every one on a farm.:

How many of the boys who read this paper could lay off an acre of ground exactly, providing one of the dimensions was given them? Now "Hoe Handle" likes to be useful, and I have taken some pains to make out a table, and I would like to have every one of the farm boys learn it. There are 160 square yards in an acre, and there are 30¼ square yards in one rod. This gives 4,840 square yards in one acre.

10 yards wide by 484 yards long is 1 acre.

20 yards wide by 242 yards long is 1 acre.

40 yards wide by 121 yards long is 1 acre.

80 yards wide by 60½ yards long is 1 acre.

70 yards wide by 69¼ yards long is 1 acre.

60 yards wide by 80⅔ yards long is 1 acre.

Again, allowing nine square feet to the yard, 272¼ square feet to the rod, 43,560 square feet to the acre, and we have another table:

110 feet by 369 feet—1 acre.
120 feet by 363 feet—1 acre.
220 feet by 198 feet—1 acre.
240 feet by 181½ feet—1 acre.
440 feet by 99 feet—1 acre.

A GOOD REASON.

'Look here,' said the Governor to a high State official, 'when are you going to pay me that ten dollars?'

'Upon my honor, Governor I don't know.'

'Why, sir, the other day when I mentioned the fact of your indebtedness, you asked me where I would be Tuesday.'

'Yes, sir.'

'Well wasn't that a promise that you would pay me the indebtedness on Tuesday?'

'No, sir.'

'Why then, sir, did you want to know where I would be on Tuesday?'

'Because I wanted to know where you would be so I could make arrangements to be somewhere else on that day.'

Spring fever will soon be the general complaint.

A little fellow who had never eaten frosted cake, asked at the table for a piece of that "cake with plastering on it."

"This insurance policy is a queer thing," said Dobbs, reflectively. "If I can't sell it, I cancel it; and if I cancel it, I can't sell it."

To cure earache take a pinch of black pepper, put it on a piece of cotton batting dipped in sweet oil, and place it in the ear, and tie a bandage around the head, and it will give almost instant relief.

"Jane," said a father, "I thought you hated stingy people, and yet your young man—"

"Why, pa, who said he was stingy?"

"Oh, nobody," replied pa, "only I could see he was a little close as I passed through the room."

Essex county pays its clerk to the Board of Freeholders $500 per year. This is almost double the amount paid by Passaic and Union counties which pay the next highest salaries, $300. Bergen and Hudson each pay $250; Morris and Salem, $200 each; Mercer and Hunterdon, $175; Monmouth, $150; Somerset, $124; Warren and Atlantic, $100; Burlington, $75, and Cumberland, Gloucester, Ocean and Sussex, $50. Camden pays $10 a day for each meeting of the Board and Cape May $4 a day.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

Several seals have made their appearance in the Raritan River and are driving out the small fish.

Prosecutor Richard J. Jenkins, of Camden, received his commission Tuesday as State Fish Commissioner.

Belvidere sportsmen have ordered the shipment of nine dozen quail from Tennessee, to be set free near Belvidere.

Two million young shad are to be put in the Delaware river about June 1st by the Fish Commissioners of Delaware.

A striped bass weighing 23½ pounds was caught in the Raritan river Tuesday morning last by Mr. J. Davison, a fisherman.

A lot of quails have been received from Tennessee by Thomas W. Ryall, of Freehold, and they will be turned loose in Atlantic township as soon as the weather is suitable.

Mount Pleasant, N. J., March 29.—Ex-Judge Thomas Graham, of Jackson, on Saturday last, received 200 strong and healthy quail from his brother, T. E. Graham, of Indian Territory, which he will set free in early April for stocking purposes under the guidance of the County Fish and Game Protective Association.

SPEER'S
PORT GRAPE WINE
Used in the principal Churches for Communion purposes.
Excellent for Ladies and Weakly Persons and the Aged.

Excellent for Females and Weakly Persons.

Speer's Port Grape Wine
FOUR YEARS OLD.

THIS CELEBRATED NATIVE WINE is made from the juice of the Oporto Grape, raised in this country. Its invaluable are unsurpassed by any other Native Wine. Being the pure juice of the Grape, produced under Mr. Speer's own personal supervision, its purity and genuineness are guaranteed. The youngest child may partake of its generous qualities, and the weakest invalid use it to advantage. It is particularly beneficial to the aged and debilitated, and suited to the various ailments that affect the weaker sex. It is in every respect A WINE TO BE RELIED ON.

Tonic and Strengthening Properties

SPEER'S
P. J. Sherry.

The P. J. SHERRY is a wine of Superior Character, and partakes of the rich qualities of the grape from which it is made. For Purity, Richness, Flavor and Medicinal Properties, it will be found unexcelled.

SPEER'S
P. J. Brandy.

This BRANDY stands unrivalled in this country being far superior for medicinal purposes.

IT IS A PURE distillation from the grape, and contains valuable medicinal properties.

It has a delicate flavor, similar to that of the grapes, from which it is distilled, and is in great favor among first-class families.

See that the signature of ALFRED SPEER, Passaic, N. J., is over the cork of each bottle.

POETRY.

ALL.

[The Forest and Stream has the following beautiful poem by the late F. A. Durivage, a tribute to his son, who fell in the service of his country:]

There hangs a sabre and there a rein,
With a rusty buckle and green curb-chain,
A pair of spurs on the old gray wall
And a mouldy saddle—well, that is all!

Come out to the stable, it is not far—
The moss-grown door is hanging ajar,
Look within! There's an empty stall
Where once stood a charger—well, that is all!

The good black horse came riderless home,
Flecked with blood-drops as well as foam;
See yonder hillock where dead leaves fall,
The good black horse pined to death—that's all!

All? Oh God! It is all I can speak;
Question me not! I am old and weak!
His sabre and saddle hang on the wall
And his horse pined to death! I have told you all.

DRAWING FOR A PRIZE.

'But you must admit she is very pretty, Miss Mercy,' said her visitor, smiling quizzically, as she once more endeavored to draw out her hostess upon the party under discussion.

'No, I am sorry to say I cannot see it. Handsome is that handsome does, and for my part I fail to understand why a young woman, if she is a widow, should be running around the country getting up concerts and theatrical performances, fleecing people out of their money and making herself generally ridiculous, if she has a mother and a home to stay in. Why don't she settle down and take in sewing, or teach school, like a respectable person, instead of flitting about from place to place making herself a laughing stock and a nuisance generally?' and Miss Mercy's black eyes snapped indignantly as she stroked down her soft, dark hair with her plump little hands, and settled herself in her chair with a decisive movement, as though to put an end, at once and forever, to the discussion.

Miss Mercy Proctor, though naturally the cheeriest and brightest of women, and one not addicted to making ill-natured speeches, had been so unusually tried during the past few months that her sweet temper had become sadly ruffled, and she only needed the match applied in the shape of a praise to her rival to make her break into a sudden flame of bitterness and censure.

For Miss Mercy loved John Lockwood, and had loved him for years, and on his return from the West he had treated her with such gentleness and apparent devotion that her tender heart had fluttered with expectation, and she almost felt sure she was loved in return.

But then the widow, the brilliant Miss Hazelton, had appeared upon the scene, drawing him from his allegiance to her and diverting his attentions until she grew weary and heartsick, and almost despaired of ever winning him back. No wonder the little woman failed to discover beauty in the gay and dashing widow, for who ever knew a fellow [illegible] eyes of an opponent.

Still, there was a good deal to be said after all on the other side, for Mrs. Hazelton, though indisputably gay, was far from being frivolous, while her beauty, in spite of Miss Mercy's opinion, was certainly of a high order. Married at the age of eighteen and widowed at twenty, she was now, at twenty-four, a still young and charming woman.

Fair and winsome, she made friends wherever she went, supporting herself by giving music and dancing lessons, with occasionally a concert or an amateur dramatic performance thrown in.

And John Lockwood? John was a handsome, careless fellow, not worth half the laurels with which he was usually crowned.

Some ten years before he had left his native village and gone West to seek his fortune—had been fairly successful, not so much from energy or application to business, as from good luck, which somehow or other always followed him.

But six months ago he had returned from his journeyings—returned to find everything changed. 'Everything but Miss Mercy,' as he remarked, half fondly, to that patient little woman, his sweetheart of former days, and she had blushed and smiled down into her heart, thinking to herself that that at least was unchanged.

John had come back to get him a wife, he laughingly announced on his arrival, and many a maid had smiled up into his eyes, and many a heart had beat at his advance, for John was thoughtless and distributed his attentions with remarkable evenness until the advent of the widow.

But now all was changed, and Mrs. Hazelton, with her blue eyes, golden hair and infantile ways, had apparently taken possession of him.

It had been an unusually lively winter, for Mrs. Hazelton's dancing school had been well patronized by both old and young, and the Tuesday and Thursday night "sociables," as she termed the throwing open of her doors to the general public of those two evenings each week, between the hours of 9 and 11, had insured the success and popularity of her school—for the public is always fond of dancing if some one else will pay the fiddler.

Miss Mercy was a regular attendant, not so much because she was fond of dancing as because John was sure to be there, and he was invariably attentive and kind.

Not more to her than to the sprightly little instructress, who laughed and chatted gaily and seemed to take his attentions quite as a matter of course.

But sometimes he would invite Miss Mercy to dance, and then request her to sit in some quite corner and talk to him, and the blushes would mount to her cheeks and her heart would throb with delight, which would suddenly deepen to pain when he would leave her afterward and walked off with the widow hanging on his arm.

Ah, John, capricious John! Do you not know there is cruelty in such kindness?

St. Valentine's day was approaching, and it was generally understood that the young man was to start for his Western home the following day. The little village was in a constant state of half subdued excitement, for Mr. and Mrs. Turner, old friends of John's father, were to have a large party on that night in order to give the young fellow a good send off, and no end of conjectures arose as to whether it might not be a wedding after all.

Nobody was prepared to say that a trousseau was actually in course of preparation, although it was hinted that Mrs. Hazelton was having a lovely new dress made, purchased with the proceeds of her last quarter's salary.

It was understood he was to bring the widow to the party, however, and the other women thought ruefully of the long five mile drive. What a chance for him to propose on the way.

The long looked for night at length arrived, and at an early hour the great old house was ablaze with light from garret to cellar, while the merry twinkle of bells without announced the arrival of the first of the guests, for in good old-fashioned towns and with old-fashioned country people, parties assembled as soon after supper, or early candle light, as convenient.

Miss Mercy, an especial friend and favorite of the hostess, came in time to assist with the arrangements of the table, making herself useful in such a variety of ways, but in so unobtrusive a manner, that Mrs. Turner, who at this crisis was in a highly nervous and distraught state, declared she could never have got along without her.

The little woman looked unusually pretty in her black silk dress, with a bunch of straw colored chrysanthems at her throat and another in her glossy hair.

Mrs. Hazelton and John were the last to arrive, the former flushed and radiant from the long drive in the frosty evening air, and looked like an old fashioned picture just stepped out of its frame, in her pale blue silk dress cut square in the neck, her fair hair done high on the top of her head in a mass of bewildering curls, and her plump white arms but partially concealed by a fall of flimsy lace.

John was in high spirits, escorting her out to supper, and after returning to the parlor for Miss Mercy. He finished the evening with old Mrs. Turner, sitting by her side and waiting upon her with ready good humor.

After supper 'the mirth and fun grew fast and furious,' and John became the target for many a lively sally.

'Why don't you get married, John, my boy?' said jolly Captain McAllister, giving him a sly poke in the ribs; 'I thought you'd come home for a wife.'

'That is exactly what I should like to know, captain,' echoed a lady standing near. 'I have to come the conclusion that Mr. Lockwood is an unmitigated swindle. He made us believe we should dance at his wedding, but has never given us a chance.'

'What's the matter, John? Won't the party or parties whichever it is (for on my soul I can't make out,) have you—or are you in a strait betwix the two? Can't you determine which one you want?'

The young man laughed good naturedly as he replied:

'I expect you've hit the nail on the head this time, captain. I fear I am somewhat in the position of the party who originated the lines beginning—

'How happy I could be with either,
Were t'other dear charmer away.'

The captain roared vociferously:

'Bless my heart, is that the case?—And so you can't decide? Why, hang it man, if I were you I'd find a way out of it, even if I had to draw cuts.'

'The very thing,' exclaimed a chorus of voices. 'Draw cuts, John—do draw cuts, it will be such fun, and see which it shall be—the old love or the new.'

The young man raised his eyes with imperturbable coolness as he replied in his usual careless tone:

'If the ladies have no objections I am sure I have none.'

'And will you abide by the decision and marry which ever falls to your lot?'

'Unquestionably, if she will have me.'

The two ladies were sought for and found; one in the library, the other in the dancing room.

'Oh, Mrs. Hazelton, Miss Mercer,' the young ladies exclaimed as they led them to the room where a little crowd had collected, 'Mr. Lockwood is going to draw cuts for a wife, and the choice lies between you too. Oh, won't it be fun?'

'Fun for the one who gets him,' said the widow, laughing lightly. While Miss Mercy exclaimed impetuously; 'Draw cuts—John Lockwood draw cuts for a wife—how dare he do it?'

'I think it would be pretty, perhaps to have the ladies draw,' said captain McAllister, searching in his pockets for paper to cut into slips; 'then they couldn't accuse him of unfairness or partiality. What do you say John, have you any objections?'

'Not the least in the world,' said the young man, unconcernedly—'any way to suit yourselves.'

The slips were cut and the captain arranged them in his hand. One long one marked 'prize,' and the others short and blanks.

'Now, ladies,' said the captain, 'are you ready?'

Miss Mercy had a severe struggle with her heart before she could bring herself to consent. Mrs. Hazelton had not thought of refusing, and why should she hold back? Must she resign John now and forever, or should she make one last effort to retain him? Her face burned with excitement, and her hand trembled so she could scarcely put it out.

'Ready,' said the captain once again, smiling benignly at the two ladies as their hands were extended.

The crowd held their breath while the choice was being made, then—'Miss Mercy has got it! Miss Mercy has got it!' was shouted on all sides.

Mrs. Hazelton turned away with heightened color. 'What nonsense,' she exclaimed, leading the way from the room. 'Surely, Mr. Lockwood will not be expected to abide by the terms of such an adventure.'

Miss Mercy sank in a chair near by, unable to stand and hardly daring to raise her eyes. Had she, indeed, won him, and was it really true? or was it only an idle jest and a cruel one at that?

Her heart beat wildly, and she took no notice that the party was breaking up, and the people going home.

When she rose she found herself alone in the parlor, and John, with a smile on his handsome face, was advancing toward her. She tried to pass him without looking at him, but he stopped her, and taking her burning face between his hands, raised it slowly till her eyes met his.

For a moment he studied the quivering face, then whispered softly:

'Be ready to-morrow dear, at 10 o'clock.'

And the next instant he was gone, gone to tuck the widow snugly in the sleigh preparatory to their homeward drive.

Little Miss Mercy passed the night in a state of feverish excitement, weeping and laughing at intervals.

'Was John really in earnest in what he said, or was it but a continuation of an idle jest?' He had called her dear, and his whisper was fond, nay, almost tender.

Did he mean it seriously and would it be that he loved her? or was he bent on making a martyr of himself to a mistaken sense of honor? If such was the case she would never marry him—no, never, even though her heart should break.

When morning came she was already up, putting the house in order and packing her trunk in case anything should happen.

She dressed herself with care in a soft, dark cashmere dress that might answer for a traveling dress, and after gathering a fresh cluster of her favorite chrysanthems, seated herself in the shadow of the curtained window to watch the passers by.

She wouldn't be silly enough to dress up in flowers in the morning unless— But then something might happen.

About a quarter to ten the jingle of sleigh bells arrested her attention, and leaning forward she caught a glimpse of a lively procession approaching the house, headed by John and the clergyman.

Her heart leaped to her throat and she wanted to run away, but just then the voice of Mrs. Turner was heard exclaiming, 'We've come to the wedding—but where is the bride?'

Her friend found her, but she refused to appear, so John himself came for her.

'Not wanting to back out at this late hour,' he cried, extending his arms and drawing her to him. 'Ah, little woman, I should be heart broken, indeed.'

She looked into his face incredulously.

'But, do you love me, John?' she whispered softly.

'Always and forever.'

'Why then did you hazard your chance of happiness so recklessly?' she asked. 'It might have gone the other way.'

'It might, indeed,' said the young man, penitently, 'in which case I fear I should have been constrained to cry, God help me for my folly.'

And so it came about that the wedding really did come off, and John really made his word good by carrying to his western home his old sweetheart and new wife.

It was hinted that there was a lively scene between him and the widow the night of the party; but as the former never mentioned it, and the latter was not a woman to wear her heart on her sleeve, the facts were never fully known.

However it was, she consoled herself shortly afterward by marrying a young physician, and it is to be hoped that under his skillful hand the wound was thoroughly and effectually healed.

A SQUIRREL PROBLEM.

Suppose there is a squirrel up a tree, and there is a man, with a gun on the ground, trying to shoot the squirrel. Just as the man takes aim to fire, the squirrel moves further around, and the man walks around the tree until he reaches the place of starting. Now, the problem is: "Has the man been around the squirrel? He has been around the tree with the squirrel on it, but has he been around the squirrel?"

A Buffalo paper once invited its readers to send in answers to this problem. Twenty-seven answers were received. Of the twenty-seven persons who thus attempted to solve the problem, fifteen said "yes" and twelve said "no." A few sent their reasons. Here are some of the reasons:

"Of course the man goes around the squirrel, simply because he goes around the tree and everything on it."

"No, sir; the hunter goes around the tree, but the squirrel keeps ahead of him."

"Should the squirrel have the start, I am of the opinion that the man goes around it."

[illegible] I have tried it, and had I got around the squirrel, I would have shot it."

"If there was no tree there, and the squirrel was running around in a circle on the ground, and the man was going in a larger circle, I should say the man went around the squirrel. But when you put a tree there it is different."

"The man does not go around the squirrel on the tree. The man doesn't go around the squirrel any more than the squirrel goes around the man."

"Of course the man doesn't go around the squirrel. If I am standing on the nigh side of a horse, and start to walk around him, and the horse keeps turning as I go, I am on the nigh side of him all the time, am I not? And I don't go around him if I am on the nigh side all the time, do I?"

THAT FRECKLED-FACED GIRL.

The freckled faced little girl was sent to Sabbath school last Sunday to counteract the effect of her remarks to the parson and show that the family was not quite so wicked as she had made it appear. The teacher told the class about Jonah, and offered to answer any questions the children wanted to ask about the surprising adventures of the man who was thrown overboard for luck and swallowed for a sprat. The little girl stopped making faces at the boy with big ears in the next class and wanted to know if the whale in the story was in the Common Council. The lady smiled at the question, and taking special pride in her peculiar knack of 'drawing out' children and analyzing the operations of their immature minds, she inquired the reason of the question.

'I didn't know,' said the freckled-faced girl, 'Your husband is in the Common Council 'n my pa says he's got a nap'tite like the whale what et up Mr. Jones. Pa says he seen a bill for a lunch over at Parker's 'n it said your husband ate twenty dollars' worth at one sitting. Pa said it was 'sprisin' what appetites some whales 'n most politishuns did have.'

'Well, it's high time your mother sent you to Sabbath school,' replied the teacher severely. 'The influences around you at home are perfectly awful for a child of your age and naturally wicked disposition. Where do you suppose you will go to if you learn to talk such scandle about your neighbors?'

'I dunno. Over to Miss Sliderback's, I guess. Ma says that's where you and Miss Magruder go to talk about the neighbors, 'n I s'pose I can go, too, when I get big 'nuff. I'd rather go to dancing school though, 'n ma says I can when pa gets the money Deacon Sliderback cheated him out of that time they swapped horses.'

The teacher told the freckled-face girl to stop talking and learn two verses, and the little heathen hid her face behind a book and whispered to the next little girl, whose father is the superintendent, 'Say, don't your pa talk through his nose funny. My pa says if your pa would stay at home from prayer meetin' to mix a little more sand with the sugar he sells fourteen cents a pound, p'raps he might not need a fire-proof coffin when he dies.'

Then she devoted herself to making faces at the boy with the large ears and giggling at the way the teacher twisted her mouth trying to sing a hymn.

Really great men are rarely conscious of their fame. Life to them is much like the lives of other wayfarers. The famous Balzac was once dining with some friends at an inn in Poland, when a young girl entered the room to pour out the tea. She was advancing toward the group with a cup in her hand, when some one remarked, "You were saying, M. Balzac—" At that moment the cup which the young girl was holding dropped to the floor, and she clasped her hands exclaiming, "Can it be the great M. de Balzac?" "For that one instant," wrote Balzac, "I tasted the sweetness of fame."

WOULD, BUT AFRAID.

Senator John Sherman is urged by many of his political friends to accept the Republican nomination for Governor of Ohio.

Mr. Sherman would no doubt like to be Governor, but there is an ugly looking thing in the way.

If he should be elected Governor, the probability is a Democrat would take his place in the Senate.

If defeated for the Governorship, as not unlikely, then his chance for the Republican Presidential nomination in 1884 would be gone.

Report says he declines.

The rotary office-holding process is very nice, except when a cog breaks and sends the rotating patriot unexpectedly into private life, as ex-Senator Conkling might graphically explain.

Possibly the two statesmen have mused together, when John said unto Roscoe—"Although a mighty man, you know there's danger in the best machine?"

PIG IRON.

Congressman Kelley, of Pennsylvania, in a speech delivered to his Philadelphia friends the other evening, eulogistic of the war tariff of 1861, hazarded the assertion that it did away with former "free trade tariffs." Does the gentleman suppose this is the fifteenth century and that we are a nation of fools? He certainly must be sufficiently intelligent to know, if not politically honest enough to admit, that there never was such a thing in the United States as a free trade tariff, the very term being an absurdity. When the war for the preservation of the Union commenced, there was in operation the tariff drafted by Robert J. Walker, Secretary of the Treasury under President Polk, which was the best revenue measure ever enacted, because based on strict equity and practical business principles, and which afforded ample and durable encouragement to every industrial interest. Had it not been for the war, the Walker tariff would have remained in existence a salutary law of the land. The war closed nearly twenty years ago. Is it not time to end the civil contest for bounties?

JEFFERSONIAN.

Last Friday was the anniversary of the birth of Thomas Jefferson, the illustrious author of American Independence and founder of the Democratic Party.

At a banquet given in Chicago, among other addresses was one by Colonel Breckenridge, of Kentucky, from which we make the following eloquent and truthful extracts—

"We celebrate the natal day of one who was neither soldier, orator, poet, artist nor divine.

No graves or blood-stains sanctify his triumphs.

No listening crowds were driven into acts of heroism by the wondrous power of his speech.

No songs of his cheer the cottage of the humble or illuminate the closet of the cultured, nor did his genius add picture or bust or monumental pile to the treasures of mankind.

Yet he wears a deathless name. [illegible] whose eloquence was never surpassed, by the very side of the matchless Patrick Henry, the freeman of orators and orator of freemen, this silent man stands conspicuous.

For a hundred years the songs of the free have been sweeter and happier because of him.

All who love religious liberty do just honor to this prophet of universal toleration.

He, more than any man of his day, foresaw the manifest destiny of his country, and he, more than any other one, so shaped the policy of the country as to realize that destiny."

To honor the memory of Jefferson is to obey the command of patriotism, for next to Washington he was the greatest of the Founders of the Republic.

And it is profitable for the people to keep vividly in mind the openly avowed political principles of Thomas Jefferson when President of the United States. They read thus—

"Equal and exact justice to all men, of whatever state or persuasion, religious or political.

Peace, commerce, and honest friendship with all nations—entangling alliances with none.

The support of the State Governments in all their rights, as the most competent administrations for our domestic concerns, and the surest bulwarks against anti-republican tendencies.

The preservation of the General Government in its whole constitutional vigor, as the sheet-anchor of our peace at home and safety abroad.

A jealous care of the right of election by the people.

A mild and safe corrective of abuses which are lopped off by the sword of revolution, when peaceable remedies are unprovided.

Absolute acquiescence in the decisions of the majority—the vital principle of republics, from which there is no appeal but to force, the vital principle and immediate parent of despotism.

A well-disciplined militia—our best reliance in peace, and for the first moments of war, till regulars may relieve them.

The supremacy of the civil over the military authority.

Economy in the public expense, that labor may be lightly burdened.

An honest payment of our debts, and sacred preservation of the public faith.

Encouragement of agriculture, and of commerce, as its handmaid.

The diffusion of information, and the arraignment of all abuses at the bar of public reason.

Freedom of religion.

Freedom of the press.

Freedom of person under the protection of the habeas corpus.

Trials by juries impartially selected."

Such were the written official words of President Jefferson eighty-two years ago, and such he consistently upheld throughout his whole life.

To-day they constitute the soundest of political doctrine, and, as at the first, they are the governing principles of the Democratic party.

Democrats!

Honor the memory of Jefferson, and advance the welfare of all the people, by unflinchingly defending the cause of liberty he so bravely espoused and made the enduring creed of your party!

The fundamental belief of Democracy is faith in the people.

The Democratic party contends that taxation of every kind shall be only for legitimate public wants.

The new Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county meet for organization the first week in May. Plainfield will be represented by two Republicans, J. F. Hubbard and Andrew Vanderbeek. The Board is Democratic by one majority and will therefore have the appointment of county officers. There is no doubt but that the present Collector, Mr. P. Sheridan, will be his own successor, as he should be. In him the county has had a capable and most efficient official during his term of office. No man that we know of could more ably fill the position so satisfactorily to the people as he has. The present Clerk, Mr. John L. Crowell, should also be reappointed, as we doubt not he will be. He has made a good Clerk.

A Federal Government supreme in its sphere of delegated powers, and State Governments sovereign in theirs of reserved authority, is the true meaning of the American Constitution. Preserve that system pure and intact, and a hundred brilliant stars can revolve harmoniously and safely around the central sun of Union.

The City Council of Minneapolis, Minnesota, has raised the license upon saloons, which has heretofore been $100, to $1,500.

Union County, Surrogate's Office, April 6th, 1883.

Joseph Charlet the Executor of Adele Lelapie deceased.

On application of the above named Executor it is ordered that said Executor give public notice to the creditors of the estate of said decedent to bring in their debts, demands or claims against the same, under oath, within nine months from this date, by setting up a copy of this Order within twenty days hereafter, in five of the most public places in the county of Union, for two months, and also within the said twenty days, by advertising the same in THE CONSTITUTIONALIST for the same space of time; and if any creditor shall neglect to exhibit his or her debt, demand or claim, within the said period of nine months, publication being given as aforesaid, such Creditor shall be forever barred of his or her action therefor against the said Executor.
By JAMES J. GERBER, Surrogate.

SHERIFF'S SALE.—In Chancery of New Jersey —Between Charles S. Boyle, complainant, and Charles Zimmer, et ux. et al., defendants. Fi. fa. for sale of mortgaged premises.

By virtue of the above stated writ of fieri facias to me directed, I shall expose for sale by public vendue, at the Court House, in the City of Elizabeth, N. J., on

WEDNESDAY, THE TWENTY-THIRD DAY OF MAY, A. D. 1883,

At two o'clock p. m. of said day, all that tract or parcel of land and premises hereinafter particularly described, situate, lying and being in the city of Plainfield, in the County of Union, and State of New Jersey.

Beginning at a point in the established side line of Front street, and in line of lot now owned by William H. Voorhees and in line of the party wall in the brick building as it now stands, erected by William H. Voorhees, which said party wall is the division line between said Voorhees and the heirs of the Williamson estate; thence south forty-six degrees and fifteen minutes east, along the centre line of said party wall and in continuation thereof eighty-six and one tenth (86.1 ft.) feet to a point in line of lands formerly owned by J. D. Titsworth, now said Voorhees' corner; thence north forty-four degrees and thirty-eight minutes east along said Voorhees' line thirty and three-tenths (30.3 ft.) to another corner of said Voorhees' land; thence south forty-six degrees and twenty-one minutes east, seventy-seven and six-tenths (77.6 ft.) feet, still along said Voorhees' and others' line to a post, being a corner of the Congregational church lot and of Wooden Brothers' lot; thence north forty-one degrees and forty-five minutes east, [illegible] along said Wooden Brothers' land, to a point and corner of lot now owned by Adam Fritz (formerly J. S. Gerbrandt); thence in a northwesterly direction and following line of land of said Fritz, one hundred and sixty-three and eight-tenths (163.8 ft.) feet to a point in the established side line of Front street aforesaid; thence along said side line of Front street south forty-six degrees [illegible] minutes west thirty (30 ft.) feet to a point and place of beginning, excepting and reserving, nevertheless, a strip of land ten feet in width heretofore conveyed by said Zimmer and wife to Adam Fritz, from the front of the above described premises, by deed dated September 2, 1876, which said strip is to be used as a driveway by said Zimmer and wife and Fritz and their heirs and assigns forever, in connection with a driveway of ten feet in width over land of said Fritz (formerly Manning), extending from the premises above described to Exchange Alley, the right to use which, said last named driveway, having been conveyed to said Zimmer and wife by deed of said Fritz and wife, dated September 2, 1876 and granting also the right to use said driveway its entire length, from premises of said Fritz (formerly Garretson), to Exchange Alley, as fully as the same was received and granted, respectively, in the deeds to and from said Fritz, above mentioned.

NEUTRALIZED!

In what way a prevalent evil may be shorn of its power to harm.

Malaria is a broad name for many diseases—all originating in blood poisoning. Bilious fever, the typhus and typhoid fevers and chills and fever are prominent members of the family. Malaria defies alike the builders, the plumbers and the physicians. Despairing of ordinary treatment the latter almost unanimously recommend BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER as the greatest anti-malarial specific of the age. These plasters act upon the liver, spleen, bowels and kidneys.

Worn over the region of the liver, and upon the back over the kidneys, they ward off malaria like an armor. No other plasters do this.

[illegible] word CAPCINE is cut in the center of the plaster. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, N. Y. Highest awards at International Expositions. [illegible]

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER IN UNION COUNTY.

To Our Advertisers.

Regular advertisers entitled to a "change of advertisement," must hand in the same not later than Wednesday noon of each week, to insure insertion in the coming issue.

The above regulation is peremptory, and if so understood will be fully as convenient to advertisers, and immeasurably more so to

Their Obedient Servants,

THE PUBLISHERS.

RAH for the Opera House.

FULL moon to-morrow night.

AFTER June 4th the Asbury Park Journal will be issued as a daily.

H. BROGNAHAN was elected Chief of the Elizabeth Fire Department Monday night last.

TELEPHONIC communication is now an assured fact between this city and New Brunswick.

THERE will be no State tax this year, which means a decrease of $1 per thousand on each tax bill.

AT the last meeting of the township committee John N. Jackson was appointed counsel for North Plainfield township for the ensuing year.

MR. WM. H. BROWER gave a special exhibition of pansies and choice roses at his establishments on Broadway and Fifth avenue, yesterday.

THE new Grammar School building at Fourth and Union street is rapidly approaching completion, and will be ready to roof by the first of May.

"THAT BORROWED AXE" will be the subject of a special discourse to young men, in the Crescent avenue church, next Sunday evening, by the Rev. Dr. Bliss.

NEW delivery wagon, large ice box and other improvements have just been made by Lutkins & Hummer, meat and produce merchants, corner Park avenue and Second street.

THE Alliance Music and Dramatic Association of St. Patrick's parish, Elizabethport, will give an entertainment at Van Deventer Hall, next Thursday evening, for the benefit of St. Mary's church.

IF we may be permitted to observe, even at the risk of seeming impertinent, we would murmur that young ladies of North Plainfield cannot catch young bachelor doctors of this city by dropping bouquets in their hats.

THOSE "smart" parties who go about mutilating posters on the bill boards, will find their smartness costing them about $50 some day. The law imposes such a fine for such practice.

EX-COMPTROLLER T. B. Leggett, of Elizabeth, who was sentenced to State Prison in 1880 for seven years for misdemeanor in office, was on Monday last released by the Court of Pardons.

J. W. MORRIS, at his New Brunswick sales stables can furnish you with a farm horse, a cart horse, a roadster, a carriage team, a mule or any other kind of a draught animal you want, and at your own price.

IN calling the attention of our readers to the advertisement of McGregor & Co., the Newark clothiers, we meant if they turned in that direction they would go right, but on leaving the Broad street depot they should turn to the left.

IT is about time that the Crescent Base Ball Association organized its nine for the season. Many who are willing to play, naturally object to a postponement of organization until the weather is too hot and the time for practice past.

THE Opera House is assured. Only three thousands remain to be subscribed, and that will be made up at once. A meeting of those financially interested will soon be called and action taken towards deciding upon plans, contracts, etc.

IN the Union Medical Society the following officers were recently elected: President, Dr. Victor Marvlag; Vice President, Dr. T. N. McLean; Secretary, Dr. W. A. M. Mack; Treasurer, Dr. J. A. Coles, of Scotch Plains; Reporter, M. B. Long, of Plainfield.

ELIZABETH'S new weekly, the Sunday Leader, under the experienced management of J. Madison Drake, appears to be reaching an established footing among the journals of the State. It looks bright, and its many departments seem to be full of news that's new.

THE greatest of all circuses, Forepaugh's the celebrated, will put up its tents, dig its three rings and give two performances in this city, Friday, May 4th. This is the most extensive of all shows that travel, surpassing even Barnum (when "on the road") and is about the only one that does half what it advertises.

THE Ladies of the Grace Church Guild have been very successful in their efforts in behalf of the church, and already the net profits of the entertainment given in the Stewart mansion have reached the sum of $500. The affair which is a novel one in many particulars, closes this (Thursday) evening.

THE Ladies of the congregation of the German church, intend to hold a fair in the latter part of next month, for the purpose of gathering a fund for starting anew the lately postponed German Services. Extensive preparations are being made to make the fair as great a success as the cause deserves.

MR. J. NEWTON JENKINS has just secured the contract for moving a large dwelling at Bethlehem, Pa., the property of Charles Broadhead, Esq. He will leave this week, and on the way back move buildings at Clinton, Annandale and Nebanic, N. J. Mr. Jenkins' success in this kind of business is the reward of his satisfactory work and fair dealing.

THE young man arrested in this city recently for indecent exposure, appeared before Judge McCormack and associates, Wednesday, for sentence. His counsel, John H. Jackson, Esq., made a strong appeal for mercy and the Court sentenced the accused to two months in the County Jail without costs. The full penalty of the law is $500 fine and nine years in State Prison.

THE trial of P. Day of this city for violation of the ordinance regulating the sale of liquor, took place as we noticed in our last issue, on Friday the 13th inst. The charge of selling on Sunday was not sustained by any evidence, and the accused was declared not guilty. Under the charge of selling to minors, the Judge reserved his decision until Wednesday of this week, and then fined the defendant $50 and costs.

THE German who was brought to the Muhlenberg Hospital last Thursday in an unconscious state from injuries received in the railroad accident near Bound Brook, is doing remarkably well and strong hopes of his recovery are entertained. The doctors have been able to arouse the patient and get an intelligent answer from him, but he has no recollection of the circumstances that brought about his condition.

A TAX-PAYER (?) writes to a Plainfield paper stating that "the Board of Education have [have, is good] given no notice to the public" of its intention to order by resolution the annual assessment and collection of taxes. The Board has passed such a resolution and ordered it published in the paper having the largest circulation. "Tax-payer" will consequently find the required notice in THE CONSTITUTIONALIST of last week, next week and this week.

COLEMAN'S Business College, Newark, N. J., admits pupils every week day in the year, it being run on business principles and observes only legal holidays. New students are arriving daily from all sections of the country. During the present week young men have entered from Vermont, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Georgia and North Carolina, also several from this city and state. Thirty-one have entered from Pennsylvania since September first, six of whom were from Lewistown. This institution claims a larger local and national patronage combined than any other business college in America.—Daily Advertiser.

Railroad Accommodation.

A petition is circulating requesting the C. R. R. officials to run an express train from New York to Plainfield, leaving the former city at 5:15 p. m., and stopping only at Elizabeth. There is already a train at that time which reaches this city in less than an hour, which the C. R. R. will probably think is sufficient. The proper petition to circulate is one asking that all Philadelphia express trains stop at Plainfield, then our citizens would be suited at all hours of the day and not merely a few that travel at one particular time. The Reading officials express their willingness to do this if the C. R. R. agrees.

Drama and Music.

Saturday evening, May 5th, at Van Deventer Hall, Miss Mamie B. Kunkel, the young American prima donna, assisted by a company of first-class artists, will give an entertainment that promises to be entirely novel and thoroughly enjoyable. Miss Kunkel who is but 17 years of age has already achieved an enviable reputation as a composer, vocalist and actor, and the part of Gertrude in "Borrowing a Beau" which she will portray, affords a fine field for her abilities. The entertainment will not be a concert, but will include two musical farces that call for the combined talent that has been brought together; and the well-known artists whose names appear in the advertisement on our second page, assure a most commendable rendition of all the parts.

Relieved from Persecution.

About two months ago a complaint was made before Justice McLaughlin by the agent of the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of N. Y., against James Philpit and his wife and son for removing timber off premises upon which that company held a mortgage after foreclosure had commenced, with intent to wrong, cheat, and defraud the mortgagee. Corporation counsel Craig A. Marsh acted as attorney for the company. A warrant was issued and the defendants brought into custody. They retained Messrs John H. Jackson and William B. Coddington to defend them, who appeared before the justice on the day fixed for the examination and demanded a dismissal of the complaint on the ground that there was no intent whatever on the part of any of the defendants to cheat, wrong or defraud the mortgagee or any one else, and because of legal inconsistencies in the complaint. The matter was adjourned from time to time, and on Saturday last the complaint was dismissed with costs and all the defendants discharged. In view of the fact that the company have taken away the farm of Mr. Philpit under the law and he is a man of very moderate means and the corporation boasts a capital of $100,000,000 it seems to savor of persecution to make this as it is the first case brought under the law passed three years ago, and the vindication and release of Mr. Philpit under the circumstances is a source of popular satisfaction.

Personals.

Mr. Lew. Bullard, of Wellsboro, Tioga county, Pennsylvania, is visiting friends in North Plainfield.

The recently widowed mother of the Rev. J. P. Morris, late pastor of the St. Mary's church of this city, died last week.

At the annual meeting of the American Jersey Cattle Club, held in New York city Wednesday, John I. Holly, Esq., of Plainfield, was elected President.

Mr. Joseph Perine, an old resident of this city, died of typhoid pneumonia, Tuesday, in the 68th year of his age. His wife died of the same disease, last week.

Mr. Frank Carle, of Millington, Morris County, met with a deplorable loss in the sudden decease of his wife, from heart disease, last week. He has the sympathy of numerous friends in his bereavement.

Dr. Chauncey M. Field entertained at dinner, Thursday evening of last week, at his residence at Peace and Fourth streets, Gen. Viele, Commissioner of Public Parks, New York city, Gen. Wm. H. Sterling, Mayor Wm. B. Maxson and City Judge P. P. Good.

Another daughter of Mr. Lawrence O'Neil died after a short illness since our last issue. This is the third daughter of the family who has died suddenly within three weeks, from typhoid pneumonia, it is supposed. On Monday morning last, Mr. James O'Neil, brother to deceased, feeling unwell, determined to put himself under medical treatment at Muhlenberg Hospital. At present writing he is improving, although he has been seriously ill.

Grove Street Bridge.

Pursuant to adjournment, the Somerset Board of Freeholders met on Thursday last at the site of the Grove Street bridge, in this city. The Board adjourned to Blatz's Hotel, the roll was called and the members responded, except Mr. Baird. Mr. Whitlock offered a resolution to the effect that the bridge be completed according to the original plans and specifications adopted by the Union County Board and submitted to the Somerset Board for their approval, unless the Union Freeholders take the present bridge off the hands of the Somerset Board. This was lost, after some discussion. Yeas—Van Nuys, Whitlock and Owen. Nays—Gaston, Dow, Staats, Schenck and Voorhees.

Mr. Schenck then offered the following:

WHEREAS, the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county, through their Director, did submit to this Board at a special meeting called at Plainfield, on the 25th day of October last, a certain plan and specifications for an iron bridge to be built on Grove street of 32 feet roadway and 7 feet sidewalk each side, it being a county line bridge; and Whereas, said Union county board had previously met there to take the matter under their consideration, and had decided upon the said plan and specifications submitted to this board through their representative; and whereas, this board, after considering said plans and specifications, did adopt the same and appointed a committee to carry out their wishes, supposing it was satisfactory to the citizens, inasmuch as the Union board, which numbers 17 persons, had adopted and presented the same to us for our adoption; and Whereas, it now appears that said bridge, although unfinished, does not meet the wishes of the citizens, and some of them living in North Plainfield township having come before this board in a most respectful manner and asked us to acquiesce with the Union county board in removing said bridge to Water street and give them a different structure that compares with the width of the street; therefore,

Resolved, That we adopt this suggestion provided the expenses to this county of removal does not exceed $250 and the expense of the new structure do no exceed $1,400.

Lost, as follows: Yeas—Dow and Schenck; nays—VanNuys, Whitlock, Gaston and Owen. Messrs Staats and Voorhees desired to be recorded for the affirmative if there were sufficient funds on hand to pay the extra expense.

Mr. Gaston then offered the following, which was adopted:

Resolved, That while we respect the wishes of those who are dissatisfied with the present structure, yet we cannot feel ourselves warranted at present, on account of the condition of our finances, in adopting the suggestions of the Union county board, and we hereby instruct our committee to meet with the committee of the other board and confer with them to see what can be done with the present structure to the best interests of the counties, and report at the next meeting of the board.

Mr. Schenck having asked for a committee of five, the Director, on motion added Messrs Staats and Gaston to the Committee.

Of Interest to School Trustees.

The following new law may be of interest to North Plainfield authorities:

CHAPTER LXXVII.

An act regulating the number of school trustees to be elected in the respective school districts of this State, being a supplement to an act entitled "An act to establish a system of public instruction," approved March seventeenth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That whenever it shall appear by the annual school census that there are five hundred (500) or more children of legal school age in any school district having but three trustees, then it shall be lawful for the legal voters of the said district at their next annual meeting for the election of school trustees, to determine by a majority vote of those present whether the number of school trustees shall or shall not be increased to six (6).

2. And be it enacted, That in case it be decided to increase the number of school trustees in any such school district to six, then the said legal voters shall proceed to elect in the manner in which school trustees are now elected, three additional trustees, one to hold office for one year, one for two years and one for three years, and annually thereafter trustees shall be elected for the terms of three years to fill the places of those whose terms expire.

3. And be it enacted, That in case it be decided not to increase the number of school trustees, the vote shall be binding upon the district for that year only.

4. And be it enacted, That it shall be the duty of the district clerk in districts coming within the provisions of the first section of this act, in his notices of the annual meetings for the election of school trustees, to insert a notice that there are within the district five hundred (500) or more children of legal school age, and that it will be determined at said annual meeting whether the board of school trustees shall consist of three or six; provided, that in case it shall be determined at any such meeting not to increase the number to six, then the clerk of said district shall not again insert such notice unless directed so to do by a vote of the trustees; provided further, that no vote shall be taken upon this subject unless public notice shall have been given as herein provided for.

5. And be it enacted, That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed.

6. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 10, 1883.

MR. Samuel E. Mooney has moved to this city from Plainfield, and engaged in the real estate, insurance and brokerage business with Mr. E. Mooney.—Rahway [illegible]

After Many Years.

About eight years ago when Mr. Bartlett kept the American House at Trenton, Mr. Frank Bartlett sent a pie to Miss Kalzenbach, afterwards his wife. A diamond ring which was laying on the table was missed, and the colored man who brought the pie, named Charles J. Sims, was arrested and searched, but there being no proof against him, and the stolen property not being found upon his person, he was released. Last week, while Mathew Madden was cleaning the sinks of the American House he found the ring, and subsequently returned the ring to Mrs. Bartlett, who rewarded him for his honesty by presenting him with a sum of money.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

Patrons of the Library can obtain a list of the new books now by applying to the Librarian. The new books are ready for distribution and may be had now at any time. The catalogues will be out soon.

Although the weather was very inclement last Monday night, nevertheless the attendance at the young men's meeting was quite large and the meeting was one of the best held this year.

Mrs. J. C. Bliss will talk to the boys of the boy's branch on Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Every member is earnestly requested to be present. This work for the boys is growing rapidly and has been richly blessed.

The amusement room is becoming quite a popular place for the young men to pass an evening hour. The committee who have this branch of work in charge are very faithful. One or more of its members is on duty each night. The room is open from 6 to 10 p. m. The Bible study for next Saturday evening will be on the 11th Chapter of Acts. This study is very interesting, as all are allowed to participate in it, and make it a very informal meeting.

The next reception for young men will be held on next Tuesday evening, April 24th, and to it are invited all young men. Young men, residents or strangers, may feel free to attend and they will be heartily welcome. The ladies' auxiliary will have charge and something interesting may be expected. Let the rooms be filled. But one more reception will be held this season after the above date.

The work at the outposts is in a very encouraging condition at present, and has been blessed in rich results.

The conference of association workers will convene at Milwaukee, Wis., May 16 to 20. Associations through the United States and Canada will be represented.

The New License Law.

Below we give in full the new license law passed at the close of the Legislature, and which has been since the subject of much comment with those directly interested. Its provisions undoubtedly intend to frighten property owners from signing an application for license on account of the publicity demanded. As will be seen by a careful perusal of the law, it does not affect Plainfield, or any city having power to grant licenses and regulate the sale of liquor:

An Act to further regulate the licensing of inns and taverns, and places for the sale of malt, vinous, spirituous and other intoxicating liquors or drinks.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That in every application which shall be hereinafter made to any court of common pleas or any of the judges thereof, for license to keep an inn or tavern or to sell malt, vinous, spirituous or other intoxicating liquors or drinks, the applicant shall clearly designate in the written application the locality and building in which it is proposed to keep such inn or tavern, or place for the sale of such malt, vinous, spirituous or other intoxicating liquors or drinks; and every freeholder recommending the granting of such license shall, in the written recommendation to be presented to the court or judges thereof, clearly designate his place of residence, naming the road, street or other public way, and the part thereof on or nearest to which such residence is situate; and each freeholder shall also clearly designate in such recommendation the location and nature of the real property by virtue of the ownership of which he shall sign such recommendation; and any license which shall be granted upon any application and recommendation which does not comply with the requirements of this act shall be void.

2. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person not having a license to sell malt, vinous, spirituous or other intoxicating liquors or drinks, to put or keep up on or near his or her dwelling house, shop or other building or place, any sign or other device usually employed or appropriate to donate the sale of such liquors or drinks; and every person so offending shall forfeit and pay five dollars for every month that the same shall be kept up, to be recovered by action of debt, with costs, by any person who shall sue for the same, before any justice of the peace in the county where the offence shall be committed.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March —, 1883.

The Oil Cloth Factory Reopened.

The firm of Newell & Wight manufacturers of stair and table oil cloth, whose factory in this city has for some time past been a great source of objection to adjacent property owners and residents, has become financially embarrassed in a way that will possibly result in the closing of the works. Upon the formation of the firm and the beginning of its business intentions, it borrowed of James A. Skilton, Esq., the sum of $50,500 giving as security for the same a judgment note. The factory here was then built and the manufacture of goods commenced with every prospect of success. The management of the work of production having been placed in hands since discovered to be incompetent, resulted in much loss during the first year in many ways. The goods not being kept up to the proper grade lowered the standard of the firm's productions among the jobbers, and a change was then made by the securing of an experienced and practical superintendent in Mr. Wm. H. Haines. Many alterations in the works were then found necessary, and the firm to retrieve its reputation at once commenced the making of the very best goods that was possible. All this cost money of which there was no return. Then the popular feeling of the public against the factory, and the efforts of our citizens to have it indicted as a nuisance became known throughout the country, and dealers in the supplies used contracted the line of credit they had previously granted the firm—fearing the outcome of the steps that were being taken to close the works. These and other drawbacks were, however, being overcome by patience and perseverance, and the firm had for the past two months been doing an increased business and was daily in receipt of orders that would keep the factory at work producing all in its power for some time to come.

Mr. Wight, however, was desirous of withdrawing from the business and a friendly suit seemed the best way of closing the matter up with the least loss. The firm thereupon confessed judgment last Friday to Mr. Skilton for $50,500 and 34 costs, and Sheriff Forsyth's deputy, Mr. William Reynolds, posted a five days notice on the premises to the effect that the entire property of the firm would be sold Wednesday morning, April 18th, at 10 o'clock, to satisfy the same. Notice was then sent by Messrs. Newell & Wight to the creditors of the firm, of the sale and at the hour advertised a number of the same, or their legal representatives, assembled in the "trimming-room" of the factory to look after their several interests. Before the Sheriff proceeded to sell, Mr. Cross, of Cross, Bergen & Nan, representing Mr. C. Stewart Hoffman, of Somerville, a creditor of some $2,000 for coal, asked for a postponement because of the short notice given, and the legal representatives of other creditors endorsed the request. This the Sheriff refused, stating that it was impossible to complete the sale that morning and before the second day opportunity would be given for all the creditors to look around. Mr. Cross then served papers on the Sheriff requiring him to procure an indemnity bond of $25,000, which action rather altered that officer's view of the matter and the sale was postponed until Thursday of next week at 10:30 a. m. A keeper was deputized to take charge of the property night and day, and upon consultation together and with the advice of Mr. Newell, the creditors present agreed to permitting the works to "start up" and complete such unfinished goods as were in process of manufacture. These will be all finished before the day of sale, and after this coming week it seems probable the much sorrowed Oil Cloth Factory will finally cease work.

There will be nothing left for others after the claim of Mr. Skilton is satisfied, and it is unlikely that enough will be obtained to satisfy that. Messrs. H. N. Gaskin & Co. are creditors to the amount of $25,000 loaned without security. Messrs. Ward & Hall, Curtiss & Griffen, Berry & Thorp and French Bros. of this city, with others are claimants of small amounts, while the suppliers of varnishes, oils and other manufacturing materials figure as the larger creditors. Most of these have expressed much sympathy with Mr. Newell in the unfortunate turn affairs have taken, and no blame is attached to him in any way. Help has been offered, but whether it is better just now to re-establish the business with new capital, is as yet undecided.

A REPORT ON TAXATION IN THE CITY OF PLAINFIELD TO THE UNION CLUB.

Faults and Remedies.

SECOND PAPER.

The State of New Jersey needs, and has always needed, a well-defined system of tax laws. Perhaps this fact is not peculiar to our State. It appears to apply to many States in which ordinary taxes as well as special assessments are often levied under such loosely-drawn laws, or by such incomplete or irregular proceedings on the part of local boards and officers, as to invite the attacks of the unpatriotic property holder. In New York, this resistance to taxation is in a measure becoming a special department of law practice, and has been pursued with great success and pecuniary profit by the lawyers devoting themselves to it.

The tax laws themselves in New Jersey and the judicial decisions in relation to the same, are complex, if not inconsistent—for example, the courts seemed to have held in some cases, that tax deficiencies of one year could not be held to supply deficiencies arising in another year as between town and county, and in other cases decisions have been rendered in contravention of this doctrine. The singular provision adopted by the legislature in 1866, to the effect that county assessments must take the priority of, and if it need be, must be filled up from, moneys levied and collected for other tax funds, involves results at once complicated and inequitable.

In cities especially, there has been great difficulty at times in carrying on the ordinary and necessary functions of local administration, because of a want of power to enforce the collection of taxes. In the large cities the uncollected taxes aggregate many hundreds of thousands of dollars. A leading officer of Jersey City recently expressed the opinion that the existing laws were quite inadequate for the enforcement of the taxes past due in that city—neither in the charter itself nor among the general laws in respect to taxes, is there the requisite virtue.

On the principle that "misery loves company," there may be some consolation in the fact that other and bigger cities have trouble with taxes; but in this respect, as well as some others, Plainfield has rather outdone its rivals, big and little, for in tax matters there has surely been more misery to the square foot here than elsewhere.

A few facts serve to illustrate this:—Whilst the public taxes in Plainfield have in general gone through the hands of one tax receiver, it has been for account of several departments:

First, the State and County Tax Fund; for which the uncompromising demand has been made of the "first fruits" of all collections, and yet, until 1882, there was in Plainfield no means whatever of obliging delinquents to pay their state and county tax, nor even to issue a magistrate's warrant in respect to it.

Second, the old Township Tax, continuing to 1878, irregular in its levies and in its applications—no serious attempt made to enforce it; the township committee, without the shadow of authority, practically forgiving delinquents the amount of their delinquencies.

Third, the School Tax, levied by the school board, without any power on the part of the board to collect the same,—that power resting, or presumed to rest, with the municipal authorities.

Fourth, Fire Tax, including in its district of taxable property a portion of the neighboring county; thus constituting by itself another independent department not responsible to the municipality, nor even depending on it for the enforcement of this fire tax, which, indeed, has not been enforced, except so far as to have a justice's warrant issued to a constable, who, thus armed, dunned delinquents as best he could.

Fifth, the City and Poor Taxes,—the only taxes which the Charter of the City of Plainfield provides for specifically, it being really understood when the charter was obtained that authority already existed with the other departments just mentioned for the raising of their respective taxes.

Under a system (or lack of system) so complex has the tax business of Plainfield been transacted. The wonder is, perhaps, that taxes have been paid as well as they have been in years gone by. The fact that three-fourths of the taxes levied were promptly paid, is evidence of the general honesty of the property-holding class in our city. This becomes even more apparent when it is considered that in some years the tax liens have been subject to the mortgage liens; that is, indeed, if there existed any tax liens whatever; for, so far as can be ascertained, up to 1882, there was no tax lien on real estate in the city of Plainfield. Even at the present time (whilst under an amendment last year obtained to a existing law, there is a lien on real estate for three years) there probably is still no process provided under which that lien is to be enforced. A bill providing such a process was passed by the legislature, but was not signed by the governor.*

One difficulty that has been met in obtaining remedial legislation is, that under the Constitution of 1875, such remedial laws are apt to be held "unconstitutional"; thus a technical objection has, on various occasions, prevented the application of the only remedy otherwise available, and we have yet to deal with our "patch-work" tax system. Progress was, however, made last year to such an extent as justified the issue of the magistrate's warrant, and proceedings thereunder to make out of personal property the county, school, and city taxes then delinquent. A good measure of success was thereupon met in the collection of taxes long delinquent, and the consequent payment of the city's indebtedness except $5,000 due bank, but the new administration of 1882 has, for the time being at least, seemed to relax efforts in this direction, and at present no energetic measures are being taken to sell even personal property for delinquent taxes. A test case, however, is understood to be before the court, as to the validity of the law of 1882, and it is to be hoped, that the rights and powers of the city under this law will be ably defended and will be sustained.

We still need in the way of new legislation an adequate process provided for the sale of Plainfield real estate on which taxes may be found delinquent; and we should have our whole system of taxation consolidated in better form than now, and placed in one responsible management, so far, at least, as the levying and collection of the taxes are concerned. The appropriation of the moneys in detail may be left to the separate departments under reasonable restrictions and accountability.

It has been doubted by some whether remedial legislation, looking to the collection of taxes already delinquent, can be maintained; but the judicial reports from many State Courts, as well as from the United States Courts, go to show that legislation of this general character has been held valid. We quote some of these cases. In Rogers vs. Stephen 86 N. Y. 623, it was held that bonds already in existence could be validated by act of the legislature—"Legislation may validate and make effective the defective action." Horton vs. Town of Thompson 71 N. Y. 513—"Laws passed to remedy defective executive powers of public corporations or other officers are valid." Bridgeport vs. Railroad Company 15 Conn. 475, 497—State vs. Newark 3 Dutch N. J.—"It is competent for the legislature to validate a city ordinance which had become null and void for the want of being recorded," etc. Schenley vs. Commonwealth 36 Pa. St. 29—59—"Such curative acts are said to be valid when contracts are not impaired or the rights of third persons injuriously affected." New Orleans vs. Clarke 95—U. S. 644, 1877—"Where the original purpose, for which the power of taxation is invoked, is one of the ordinary purposes of municipal government and within the powers granted, and where there is no fraud or oppression in the creation of the debt and no inequality or injustice in the apportionment of the tax, the legislature may, by subsequent enactment, cure any defect in the proceedings to collect the tax which it could in the first instance, by prior enactment, have made material."

The partially successful effort made within the past two years to procure remedial legislation ought not to be given up, but should be carried on to a more complete success. Another legislature, (that of 1883), has met and adjourned, without any further effort on the part of the present municipal administration, or of the people generally, to finish the work. The want of attention to this subject arises in part, doubtless, from want of information. Conscientious people pay their taxes, without stopping to inquire if there is a law which can and will compel them to do so. Others, knowing that there are doubts or difficulties on the subject, wait to be forced to pay, and when no attempt is made to force them to pay, they defiantly omit payment. There is no reason why more than $1,000 a year out of the $7,000 per year, assessed for the fire tax, should remain unpaid. There is no reason why $40,000 or $50,000 of State and County Taxes should remain unpaid, except the reason to be found in the known inadequacy of the law or in the palpable negligence of the public officers. It is not right that the people who pay their taxes should also have to pay the taxes of the delinquents.

Mention has been made of the desirableness of having one management in charge of the levying and collection of the taxes. It ought not to be necessary that the school department should have to employ counsel in such matter, as well as the city government, and that the fire board should also have to employ counsel for itself in tax matters, or go without. This matter is too much at loose ends; there are too many incomplete laws, too many officials having to do with the matter, none of whom seem to be held directly accountable to the people. The errors made in assessing taxes should not have crept into the work of the different boards and officers, some of these errors having been carried on for terms of years, showing too clearly the necessity for a system better devised and more thoroughly consolidated and homogeneous.

The effort to perfect our remedial legislation may properly start from any one of several sources. It is an important subject for discussion in the common council, or by the mayor in his messages, or by a committee of citizens, or by citizens in mass meeting, or it may proceed from either one of the local boards, whose functions are now so ill-defined or imperfectly understood. Or the subject may be taken up by this Union Club in an active and efficient manner, so that another Legislature shall not dissolve until legislative remedies are obtained, or at least are in the way of further progress.

Before finishing our remarks upon the subject of remedies, your committee desire to call attention to certain excrescences that have grown out of the abnormal condition of municipal taxation described in our last report.

The city is involved in most unfortunate complications in the matter of liquor licenses and the regulation of the liquor traffic. The question of license or of liquor traffic regulation should be determined on its own merits. Such a question presents difficulties and perplexion enough when considered by itself. There is no need of complicating it with revenue considerations. In Plainfield it is unfortunately regarded as a question of how much money can be made out of the liquor traffic to help defray municipal expenses. The city cannot really regulate the traffic so long as it stands in the attitude of securing all the revenue it can from that line of business. On the other hand, many citizens resist all attempts to relieve the city from the unfortunate rigid limitation of $10,000 annually for city purposes, contained in the charter—some because under the existing regime they enjoy the luxury of having a portion of their taxes paid for them by the liquor interest, and others, who are interested in the traffic, because they find in the existing regime the surest guarantee that the city government will grant licenses.

The city is in the condition of the fabled boy digging for the wood chuck. With him it was "starvation" or "woodchuck." With the city it is starvation or license. The liquor interest fully appreciates the hold it has on this community under the present charter and it wont easily give up its grip. In maintaining such a position it will have vassals and allies to sustain it as long as every such community is, in part, made up of "dead heads," "tax dodgers" and purchasable voters.

Your committee, therefore, say this question of license or no license should be independent of revenue considerations in Plainfield. If we desire to either prohibit or regulate the traffic, we must not be dependent upon it for our life and breath.

The following sums have been collected from licenses in Plainfield, in the years named:

Year	Amount
1874	Nothing.
1875	$4,000 00
1876	3,360 50
1877 (hotels only)	1,056 00
1878	4,600 00
1879	3,916 00
1880	3,362 55
1881	3,109 75
1882	3,584 25
1883 over	5,000 00

Again, there has necessarily been great lack of steadiness and regularity in local administration. One year we would have money for street repairs and lights on a moderate scale, and the next year each citizen would be his own street commissioner, and private enterprise would furnish our only lights. One year we would have a police force of 5 men, and the next year only a "chief of police." One council would have the funds to meet the current expenses of the city, and the next would have to devote all its energies to catching up with arrears and paying old judgments and claims. Thus we have been living in alternate years in a state of suspended animation ever since the city was chartered.

Once more, taxes have not, in general, been rigidly or promptly collected in Plainfield. The city officers have not felt any interest or responsibility in reference to the collection of school and fire department taxes, and the representatives of the city have felt that they were unjustly burdened with the expense of assessing and collecting taxes that were not within the jurisdiction or control of the city as a corporate entity. The city does not feel like paying these officers from their limited fund for work done for other corporate entities who controlled a more liberal fund. The taxes in Plainfield are not collected; they are simply "received." Under this system every citizen pays his taxes when he pleases and as he pleases, and no fault is found, and any attempt to interfere with the right of a Plainfield "shirk" in this respect is regarded in the light of an assault upon personal liberty.

Plainfield grows every year in property value. Its necessities also grow. $10,000 a year is not enough to meet its necessities. Still less will it be enough a few years hence. The tax ought to be levied upon a small percentage basis, so that, whilst the tax of each property holder will not be greatly increased, the whole city tax, raised from year to year, will be enlarged to meet our growing needs.

To sum up:

First. We want for Plainfield remedial legislation, providing for an enforcible tax lien against real estate, and we want an honest, intelligent, determined and concentrated management to make personal property and real estate pay their respective proportions of taxes and to curtail in a vigorous way the delinquent roll of the past, and see that no new delinquencies are permitted.

Second. We want the liquor license question separated from the tax question.

Third. We want a wise and equitable adjustment of the functions and obligations of the several departments.

Fourth. We want taxes kept low, but not too low for real prosperity, and those who take this view are the tax-payers—those who pay most of the taxes that are paid.

Fifth. We want the assessments equitable.

Sixth. We want the collector's books periodically examined.

Seventh. It is necessary that every good citizen shall at and before election day take an interest in the election of the best men, and see that the polities of the city are not controlled for the benefit of individuals or "rings," or mere political parties as such.

Respectfully submitted,

MASON W. TYLER,
L. V. F. RANDOLPH, } Com.
WILLIAM THOMPSON,

*Note.—It is held by some of our legal friends that the curative legislation obtained in 1882 is of more efficiency than we have credited to it in this paper—that under it real estate can be sold for taxes. If this be so, then we are so much further in advance. The sooner the question is settled, the better.

Amateur Theatricals.

Manager Haines has great cause for congratulation and the members have every reason to feel proud of the talent and dramatic ability that has been brought together in the Home Dramatic Club of this city. This combination at Van Deventer Hall, during Thursday evening of last week, rendered "The Lost Loaf" and "Toodles" in a manner that would have been greatly to the credit of many more experienced companies. It would not be fair to particularly mention a few as worthy of special praise, among so many deserving of approval, so we will only commend the entire company in general.

The banjo performance of Mr. Wilgus was simply wonderful, and we feel safe in saying that no one present had heard more artistic execution, skillful fingering and perfection of harmony than was there given. Mr. F. W. Sanders as a xylophonist and pianist, also displayed much talent.

Church Consecration.

The Church of the Heavenly Rest, at Evona, N. J., was consecrated Thursday of last week by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Scarborough, upon which occasion was present Rev's Rodman of Plainfield, Backus of New York, Goodwin of Governor's Island, Gulce of Asbury Park and Scott of Roselle. The church was handsomely decorated, and its full seating capacity of about 150 was, in spite of the rain, entirely occupied. Vocal music by a volunteer choir was a feature of the services, while the organ was presided over by Mr. Edward Embury of North Plainfield. In the evening confirmation services were held, and the Rev. E. M. Rodman preached to a large gathering. Mr. Lewis H. Moore of Plainfield acted as organist. The building which is free of debt, is now publicly consecrated to the worship of God and services will be held hereafter, every Sunday. Mr. Chas. E. Lewis, the lay reader, to whom the organization and completion of the church is largely due, will continue to officiate until the congregation is able to engage a regular pastor.

Systematic Beneficence.

The Crescent Ave. Presbyterian church has adopted a plan of making annual offerings on the second Sabbaths of certain months for special purposes, and on every other Sabbath free-will offerings to be divided amongst other worthy objects of beneficence. The year ending March 31st, 1883, shows the following division of the proceeds of such collections:

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Overseer of Road District No. 2 has just completed a much needed improvement upon the southerly side of Broad street, by laying a plank walk from Woodruff's Market to Elm street.

Mr. Anthony, residing on Central Ave., had his watch stolen from him on the 12 o'clock train from New York last Friday evening. He recollects having it at Elizabeth when the train stopped, and took it out of his pocket and looked at the time. It was a stem-winder, hunting-case gold watch.

On Sunday evening last Mrs. Amanda M. Foster, widow of Samuel M. Foster, was married to Milton Frazee. The marriage ceremony was performed by the Rev. Warren Hoagland of the M. E church. Mr. and Mrs. Frazee left on Wednesday morning for Ocean Beach, where they expect to reside the coming year.

Mrs. Emma Pierson, wife of John Pierson, died of pneumonia on Sunday last at the residence of Jacob D. French. Mr. Pierson has been very sick himself of the same disease. He rented his house on Prospect street on the first of April last to Mr. Charles Conant, and sold his personal property at auction. His wife and daughter had made arrangements to start the present month on a visit to her son Edwin, in the State of California.

Again the Westfield Dramatic Club (Amateur) comes to the front in support of the street lamps and fire department, for whose joint benefit they are to make their second appearance at the Lyceum Hall on the evening of May 2d. The programme is to consist of "A Regular Fix," a farce by Morton. "The Wooing of Wun Long," a shadow pantomime, written by a member of the club for the occasion, and the ever popular "I've written to Browne." The club in its spirit of progress toward the support of popular objects, is pre-eminently deserving of the patronage of the people of Westfield and vicinity. It ought to and no doubt will receive it. Make no engagements for May 2d. Buy your tickets early.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

HIS MA DECEIVES HIM.

"Give me ten cents worth of saffron, quick," said the bad boy to the grocery man, as he came in the grocery on a gallop, early one morning, with no collar on and no vest. He looked as though he had been routed out of bed in a hurry, and had jumped into his pants and boots, and put on his coat and hat on the run.

"I don't keep saffron," said the grocery man, as he picked up a barrel of axe handles the boy had tipped over in his hurry. "You want to go over to the drug store on the corner, if you want saffron. But what on earth is the mat—"

At this point the boy shot out of the door, tipping over a basket of white beans, and disappeared in the drug store. The grocery man got down on his knees on the sidewalk and scooped up the beans, occasionally looking over to the drug store, and just as he got them picked up the boy came out of the drug store and walked deliberately towards his home, as though there was no particular hurry. The grocery man looked after him, took up an axe handle, spit on his hands and shouted to the boy to come over pretty soon, as he wanted to talk with him. The boy did not come to the grocery till towards night, but the grocery man had seen him running down town a dozen times during the day, and once he rode up to the house with the doctor, and the grocer surmised what was the trouble. Along towards night the boy came in in a dejected sort of a tired way, sat down on a barrel of sugar and never spoke.

"What is it, a boy or girl," said the grocery man, winking at an old lady with a shawl over her head, who was trying to hold a paper over a pitcher of yeast with her thumb.

"How in blazes did you know anything about it?" said the boy, as he looked around in astonishment and with some indignation. "Well, it's a girl, if you must know, and that's enough," and he looked down at the cat playing on the floor with a potato, his face a picture of dejection.

"O, don't feel bad about it," said the grocery man, as he opened the door for the old lady. "Such things are bound to occur. But you take my word for it, that young one is going to have a hard life, unless you mend your ways. You will be using it for a cork to a jug, or to wad a gun with, the first thing your ma knows."

"I wouldn't touch the darn thing with the tongs," said the boy, as he rallied enough to eat some crackers and cheese. "Gosh, this cheese tastes good. I haint had nothing to eat since morning. I have been all over this town trolling for nurses. They think a boy hasn't got any feelings. But I wouldn't care a gol darn, if ma hadn't been sending me for neuralgia medicine and hay fever snuff all winter, when she wanted to get rid of me. I have come in the room lots of times when ma and the sewing girl were at work on some flannel things, and ma would hide them in a basket and send me off after medicine. I was deceived up to about four o'clock this morning, when pa come to my room and pulled me out of bed to go over on the West Side after some old women that knew ma, and they have kept me whooping ever since. What does a boy want of a sister, unless it is a big sister. I don't want no sister that I have got to hold, and rock, and hold a bottle for. This affair breaks me all up," and the boy picked the cheese out of his teeth with a sliver he cut off the counter.

"Well, how does your pa take it," said the grocery man, as he charged the boy's pa with cheese and saffron, and a number of such things.

"O, pa will pull through. He wanted to boss the whole concern until ma's chum, an old woman that takes snuff, fired him out into the hall. Pa sat there on my hand-sled, a perfect picture of despair, and I thought it would be a kindness to play it on him. I found the cat asleep in the bath-room, and I rolled the cat up in a shawl and brought it out to pa and told him the nurse wanted him to hold the baby. It seemed to do pa good to feel that he was indispensable around the house, and he took the cat on his lap as tenderly as you ever saw a mother hold an infant. Well, I got in the back hall where he couldn't see me, and pretty soon the cat began to wake up and stretch himself and pa said, 's-h-tootsy, go to sleep now, and let its pa hold it,' and pa he rocked back and forth on the hand-sled and began to sing, 'by, low, baby.' That settled it with the cat. Well, some cats can't stand music anyway, and the more the cat wanted to get out of the shawl, the louder pa sung, and bimeby I heard something rip, and pa yelled, 'scat, you brute,' and when I looked around the corner of the hall the cat was bracing hisself against pa's vest with his toe nails, and yowling, and pa fell over the sled and began to talk about the hereafter like the minister does when he gets excited in church, and then pa picked up the sled and seemed to be looking for me or the cat, but both of us was offul scarce. Don't you think there are times when boys and cats are kind of few around their accustomed haunts? Pa don't look as though he was very smart, but he can hold a cat about as well as the next man. But I am sorry for ma. She was just getting ready to go to Florida for her neuralgia, and this will put a stop to it, cause she has to stay and take care of that young one. Pa says I will have a nice time this summer pushing the baby wagon. By the great horn spoons, there has got to be a dividing line somewhere, between business and pleasure, and I strike the line at wheeling a baby. I had rather catch a string of perch than to wheel all the babies ever was. They needn't procure no baby on my account, if it is to amuse me. I don't see why babies can't be saddled off onto people that need them in their business. Our folks don't need a baby any more than you need a safe, and there are people just suffering for babies. Say, how would it be to take the baby some night and leave it on some old bachelor's door step. If it had been a bicycle, or a breech-loading shot-gun, I wouldn't have cared, but a baby! Bah! It makes me tired. I'd druther have a prize package. Well, I am sorry pa allowed me to come home, after he drove me away last week. I guess all he wanted me to come back for was to humiliate me, and send me on errands. Well, I must go and see if he and the cat have made up."

And the boy went out and put up a paper sign in front of the store, "Leave your measure for saffron tea."—Peck's Sun.

GLEANINGS.

The Morris canal was re-opened for the season last Monday week.

Judge Walter Q. Gresham, of Indiana, has been appointed Postmaster-General by the President.

The annual muster and inspection of the Sixth Regiment, National Guard, of New Jersey, will take place at Camden, on the 14th of May.

William H. Riker, of Washington, Warren county, was married a few days ago by the same clergyman who married his father and grandfather.

George Washington is lecturing in Somerset county; David Davis teaches school at Middle Valley, Cornelius Vanderbilt is a miner in Jefferson township and Andrew Jackson is assessor of Roxbury township, Morris county.

The New Brunswick Fredonian printing and publishing establishment is offered at private sale, on account of ill health of the proprietor, John F. Babcock. The Fredonian has been established over seventy years and has been conducted by Mr. Babcock for over thirty years.

Owen Donohue, of Dover, Morris county, sat down in a chair some time ago and ran into the thigh of his leg a large needle two inches in length, which was extracted from the calf of his leg a few days ago by a physician, it having traveled a distance of twenty-one inches in seven weeks.

The attempt to obtain a water supply at Ocean Grove by means of an artesian well, and which at first gave such good promise, has been abandoned. After sinking the well 100 feet a blue strata of clay, or soft rock, was met. The shaft was driven 75 feet deeper without getting through the clay, and, there being no prospect of water, the work was stopped.

Under the new law dividing the counties of the State into classes for the purpose of legislation, Hudson and Essex counties are in the first-class; Burlington, Camden, Mercer, Middlesex, Monmouth, Morris, Passaic and Union in the second class; Bergen, Cumberland, Gloucester, Hunterdon, Salem, Somerset, Sussex and Warren in the third class; and Cape May, Atlantic and Ocean in the fourth class.

Probably the largest kite in the world was recently made near Rochester. The frame was of lumber two inches wide by half an inch in thickness, and was covered with manilla paper. The surface contained nearly 250 square feet. The string by which the kite was flown was of three-eighth inch rope, 5,000 feet in length. It shot into the air like a balloon, and after floating a mile high for two hours, was only brought down by means of a pulley and team.

The committee appointed at the recent session of the Legislature to examine the accounts in the State Comptroller's office have, through Speaker O'Connor, the Chairman, appointed James L. Yalden, the expert who unearthed the Newark frauds, to conduct the investigation. Mr. Yalden is now engaged in New York. As soon as he has balanced the books he is busy upon at present, he will begin his work in Trenton. The investigation is not expected to amount to anything.

Several years ago a lawyer by the name of House, living at Lawrence station, a few miles from Trenton, was shot and killed by his wife, Irene, for whipping their boy. Mrs. House was declared insane by the Court and confined in the insane asylum at Trenton for a year or so. Shortly after her release she married a man named Parker. Mrs. Parker has just ordered a New York lawyer to commence suit against Richard K. Fox, publisher of the Police Gazette, for damages on account of alleged libel. The libel is based upon what Mrs. Parker claims to be a fictitious narrative of her life in a volume published by Fox entitled "The Murderesses of America." The book has had a wide circulation throughout the country, although Mrs. Parker has tried to buy up all the copies as soon as they were put on the market.

WISE WORDS.

When a man speaks the truth you may count pretty surely that he possesses other virtues.

Whatever you win in life you must conquer by your own efforts, and then it is yours, a part of yourself.

Man wastes his mornings in anticipating his afternoons, and wastes his afternoons in regretting his mornings.

When there is love in the heart there are rainbows in the eyes, covering every black cloud with gorgeous hues.

We love much more warmly by cherishing the intention of giving pleasure than an hour afterward when we had given it.

Every man cherises in his heart some object, some shrine at which his adoration is paid, unknown to his fellow mortals.

We have seen a prudent, industrious wife retrieve the fortunes of a family when her husband pulled at the other end of the rope.

For the best results there needs be the longest waiting. The true harvest is the longest in being reached. The failures come first, the success last. The unsatisfactory is generally soonest seen.

Life is made up, not of great sacrifices or duties, but of little things, of which smiles, kindness and small obligations, given habitually, are what win and preserve the heart, and secure the comfort.

It is better in some respects to be admired by those with whom you live than to be loved by them. And this not on account of any gratification or vanity, but because admiration is so much more tolerant than love.

We have heretofore admitted to our columns the advertisement of Rutledge Publishing Company, so-called, of Easton, Pa. It usually is to the effect that a reward of $20 in gold will be paid for the correct answer to some plain and well-known Biblical question. No person can compete unless he forwards twenty cents. We learn that the revenue for these advertisements amounts to hundreds of dollars thus expended and that the usual response to a proper answer is that, so many have given the correct solution, the $20 must be divided among a certain number of first respondents, not including, of course, the party answered. We do not know that the $20 is not sent out to somebody. We make no accusation against the management on that score. But we disbelieve in the scheme as one not straight-forward and business-like, or strictly honest, and to protect our readers from imposition (which we always strive to do in the case of advertisements) we have rejected the last and shall reject any future propositions from this source. The above from the Hunterdon Gazette, we heartily endorse.

"Why does a kiss raise the spirits?" "Because it's the cream of ta-ta."

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

The writer killed an English snipe last Friday, which, when shot, had a live, wriggling worm in its bill. He uttered, too, the warning note, "s-c-a-p-e" when flushed from his feeding ground.

The Des Moines (Iowa) State Register says that the canvas-back duck, which until lately has been unknown in that State, is becoming comparatively plenty on its inland lakes. And for ducks generally, it says, the present is the best year known in Iowa since 1860. Prices in the city markets have consequently ruled low.

The Forest and Stream in an editorial comment on "sportsmen and farmers," truly says: "There is in reality no cause for quarrels between respectable sportsmen and respectable land-owners. When a farmer is churlish and refuses to admit a sportsman to his land, the very strong probabilities are that the farmer has at some time been imposed upon by a man with a rod or gun. There is nothing in the pursuit of agriculture to create an extraordinarily long suffering disposition; and without such a spirit a farmer cannot be expected to forgive the rowdyism from which he may have suffered, and to welcome with open arms the next gunning stranger. But if the sportsman be a gentleman, and disposed to display tact, he can generally succeed in convincing the land-owner of this, and so enjoy the coveted privileges."

LITERARY NOTES.

The Spring number of Ehrichs' Fashion Quarterly more than fulfills the promise of its predecessors. Within the compass of its one hundred and twenty pages, it sets before its readers an absolutely complete epitome of the fashions of the coming season in ladies wearing apparel and fabrics of every kind; and this, not in the shape of a series of vague generalities, such as the ordinary fashion journal too often contents itself with, but by means of a succession of clearly written descriptions of actual articles, each accompanied with an engraving of the thing described, and all arranged in so orderly and methodical a manner that any desired information can be referred to without difficulty. Over sixty new designs for ladies' and children's dresses are illustrated and described, together with a large number of trimmed hats, light spring wraps, and other articles for the adornment of the outer woman. A new feature of the Magazine is the introduction of fashions in men's clothing, a large variety of stylish looking and economical suits being illustrated and described. The literary features of the Magazine also deserve their meed of praise. Margaret Eytinge, Josephine Pollard, Eben E. Rexford, and other well-know writers are represented by tales, sketches, and poems. An interesting article on "Household Decoration" is contributed by Mrs. E. V. Battey of The New York Sun, and Hope Ledyarde's talk from the Easy Chair will be read with interest by mothers, far and near. Altogether we think the emphatic verdict pronounced by every lady reader on the present number of the Fashion Quarterly will be: "Worth its price and ten times more."

Published by Ehrich Bros., Eighth avenue, New York, at 50 cents a year, or 15 cents a copy.

SPEER'S

PORT GRAPE WINE

Used in the principal Churches for Communion purposes.

Excellent for Ladies and Weakly Persons and the Aged.

Excellent for Females and Weakly Persons.

Speer's Port Grape Wine

FOUR YEARS OLD.

THIS CELEBRATED NATIVE WINE is made from the juice of the Oporto Grape, raised in this country. Its invaluable are unsurpassed by any other Native Wine. Being the pure juice of the Grape, produced under Mr. Speer's own personal supervision, its purity and genuineness are guaranteed. The youngest child may partake of its generous qualities, and the weakest invalid use it to advantage. It is particularly beneficial to the aged and debilitated, and suited to the various ailments that affect the weaker sex. It is in every respect A WINE TO BE RELIED ON.

Tonic and Strengthening Properties

SPEER'S

P. J. Sherry.

The P. J. SHERRY is a wine of Superior Character, and partakes of the rich qualities of the grape from which it is made. For Purity, Richness, Flavor and Medicinal Properties, it will be found unexcelled.

SPEER'S

P. J. Brandy.

This BRANDY stands unrivalled in this country, being far superior for medicinal purposes.

IT IS A PURE distillation from the grape, and contains valuable medicinal properties.

It has a delicate flavor, similar to that of the grapes, from which it is distilled, and is in great favor among first-class families.

See that the signature of ALFRED SPEER, Passaic, N. J., is over the cork of each bottle.

Sold by all Druggists. 1y3-ly

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THAT BLESSED BABY.

THE BAD BOY TELLS WHAT TROUBLE IT HAS GIVEN HIS DEAR PA.

"Well, how is the baby?" asked the grocery man of the bad boy, as he came into the grocery smelling very "horsey," and sat down on the chair with the back gone, and looked very tired.

"Oh, darn the baby. Everybody asks me about the baby as though it was mine. I don't pay no attention to the darn thing, except to notice the foolishness going on around the house. Say, I guess that baby will grow up to be a fire engine. The nurse coupled the baby on to a section of rubber hose that runs down into a bottle of milk, and it began to get up steam and pretty soon the milk began to disappear, just like the water does when a fire engine couples on to a hydrant. Pa calls the baby 'Old Number Two.' I am 'Number One,' and if pa had a hook and ladder truck and a hose cart and a fire gong, he would imagine he was chief engineer of the fire department. But the baby kicks on this milk wagon milk, and howls like a dog that's got lost. The doctor told pa the best thing he could do was to get a goat, but pa said since we 'nisiated him into the Masons with the goat, he wouldn't have a goat around no how. The doctor told pa the other kind of a goat, I think it was a Samantha goat he said, wouldn't kick with its head, and pa sent me up into the Polack settlement to see if I could borrow a milk goat for a few weeks. I got a woman to lend us her goat till the baby got big enough to chew beef, for a dollar a week, and paid a dollar in advance, and pa went up with me in the evening to help me get the goat. Well, it was the darndest mistake you ever see. There was two goats so near alike you couldn't tell which was the goat we leased, and the other goat was the chum of our goat, but it belonged to a Nirish woman. We got a bed cord hitched against the Irish goat, and that goat didn,t recognize the lease, and when we tried to jerk it along it rared right up, and made things lively for pa. I don't know what there is about a goat that makes it get so spunky, but that goat seemed to have a grudge against pa from the first. If there were any places on pa's manly form that the goat didn't explore with its head, pa don't know where the places are. O, it lammed him, and when I laffed pa got mad. I told him every man ought to furnish his goats when he had a baby and I let go of the rope and started off, *and pa said he knew how it was, I want*ed him to get killed. It wasn't that, but I saw the Irish woman that owned the goat coming around the corner of the house with a cistern pole. Just as pa was getting the goat out of the gate the goat got crossways of the gate, and pa yanked and doubled the goat right up, and I thought he had broke the goat's neck, and the woman thought so too, for she jabbed pa with the cistern pole just below the belt, and she tried to get a hold on pa's hair, but he had her there. No woman can get the advantage of pa that way, 'cause ma has tried it. Well, pa explained it to the woman, and she let pa off if he would pay her two dollars for damages to her goat, and he paid it and then we took the nanny goat, and it went right along with us. The baby hasn't done anything but blat since the nurse coupled it onto the goat hydrant. I had to take all of my playthings out of the basement to keep the goat from eating them. I guess the milk will taste of powder and singed hair now. The goat got to eating some Roman candles me and my chum had laid away in the coal bin, and chewed them around the furnace, and the powder leaked out and a coal fell out of the furnace on the hearth, and you would a died to see pa and the hired girl and the goat. You see pa can't milk nothing but a milk wagon, and he got the hired girl to milk the goat, and they were just hunting around the basement for the goat, with a tin cup, when the fire works went off. Well, there was balls of green and red, and blue fire, and spilled powder blazed up, and the goat just looked astonished, and looked on as though it was sorry so much fodder was spoiled, and, when its hair began to burn the goat gave one snort and went between pa and the hired girl, like it was shot out of a cannon, and it knocked pa over a wash boiler into a coal bin, and the hired girl in amongst the kindling wood, and she crossed herself and repeated the catechism, and the goat jumped up on top of the brick furnace, and they couldn't get it down. I heard the celebration, and went down and took pa by the pants and pulled him out of the coal bin, and he said he would surrender, and plead guilty of being the biggest fool in Milwaukee. I pulled the kindling wood off the hired girl, and then she got mad, and said she would milk that goat or die. Oh, that girl has got sand. She used to work in the glass factory. Well, sir, it was a sight worth two shillings admission to see that hired girl get up on a step-ladder to milk that goat on top of the furnace, with pa sitting on a barrel of potatoes, bossing the job. They are going to fix a gang-plank to get the goat down off the furnace. The baby kicked on the milk last night. I guess besides tasting of powder and burnt hair, the milk was too warm on account of the furnace. Pa has got to grow a new lot of hair on that goat, or the woman won't take it back. She don't want no bald goat. Well, they can run the baby and goat to suit themselves, 'cause I have resigned. I have gone into business. Don't you smell anything that would lead you to surmise that I had gone into business? No drug store this time," and the boy got up and put his thumbs into the armholes of his vest and looked proud.

"O, I don't know as I smell anything, except the faint odor of a horse blanket. What you gone into, anyway," and the grocery man put the wrapping paper under the counter, and put the red chalk in his pocket, so the boy couldn't write any sign to hang up outside.

"You hit it the first time. I have accepted a situation as teller in a livery stable," said the boy, as he searched around for the barrel of cut sugar, which had been removed.

"Teller in a livery stable! Well, that is a new one on me. What is a teller in a livery stable?" and the grocery man looked pleased, and pointed the boy to a barrel of seven cent sugar.

"Don't you know what a teller is in a livery stable? It is the same as a teller in a bank. I have to grease the harnesses, oil the buggies, and curry off the horses, and when a man comes in to hire a horse I have to go down to the saloon and tell the livery man. That's what a teller is. I like the teller part of it, but greasing harnesses is a little too rich for my blood, but the liveryman says if I stick to it I will be Governor some day, cause most all the great men have begun life taking care of horses. It all depends on my girl whether I stick or not. If she likes the smell of horses I shall be a statesman, but if she objects to it, and sticks up her nose, I shall not yern to be Governor, at the expense of my gall. It beats all, don't it, that wimmen settle every great question. Everybody does everything to please wimmen, and if they kick on anything that settles it. But I must go and umpire the game between pa and the hired girl and the goat. Say, can't you come over and see the baby? 'Tain't bigger than a small satchel," and the boy waited till the grocery man went to draw some vinegar, when he slipped out and put up a sign written on a shingle with white chalk, "Yellow sand wanted for maple sugar."—Peck's Sun.

Driven Wells.

The following letter was presented at an informal meeting held in the town of Succasunna, Morris County, on the 31st day of March, and it was unanimously resolved that the Dover papers publish the same. We copy it from the Iron Era. How would the same plan apply in this section?

SUCCASUNNA, N. J., March 31st, 1883.

Mr. H W. Green, Sir:—By conversation had with Mr. James Purcell by yourself; and also by interviewing me at sundry times and in divers places; by deputies sent to interview me at other times; by letters (not patent); by postals, printed and written, and by various other means, you have not ceased to make demands upon me for Royalty on Driven Well, which you claim to exist on property or lands now, or formerly owned by me, in the town of Succasunna, Morris Co., N. J.

At the final conversation had with you on Saturday, the 31st of March, 1882, in the city of Newark, N. J. I asked, as a favor, that such, or any proofs that you might have become possessed of, that you were entitled to collect a Royalty on Driven Wells for the State of New Jersey, be shown to me; this information you declined to give, alleging, in answer, that you had lent such proofs, to certain parties, not named; and you made no effort to refer me to the aforesaid parties, who you said held such papers.

When I asked you how many wells had been located on my premises by the lame man of war at Dover, N. J. your answer was—Eight.

When you asked me how many I had, according to my knowledge I answered that I did not know.

Upon mature reflection, I now answer to the best of my knowledge and belief, I have none; as I gave no authority to any one, nor did I cause to be put down any wells; and as a learned writer has said, "A candid confession is good for the soul," so do I now make this confession, and it is the only one I have ever made to any man, and that is, I don't know what a driven well is, having never seen the point.

But, and if you will procure a search warrant, you are at liberty, if accompanied by your man from Dover, to take up any and all wells or pumps on any part of the premises owned by me, but my representative by courtesy, should be present.

After taking up any driven, or destroying other wells or cisterns, if any of the eight prove in the sequel to be driven wells, I will pay what you demand in your postal or printed notices, dated February 21, 1883, one of which is on a slip, and the other on a postal.

But at the same time that I am willing to do this—I must call your attention to the fact, that for reasons satisfactory to myself and my counsel, the notices are not sufficient to stand the test of the law.

Now as to my rights in the matter—should you, after taking up any or all wells or pumps on my premises, find that there are no driven wells, I shall be compelled to ask it, not as a favor, that you reinstate, and make good, all wells or pumps that you or your employees may have disturbed, and after that is done, to have an arbitration called to settle the amount to be paid me, for the annoyance, loss of valuable time, and damage that may have occurred to me, or for any loss of time of my employees; for you are no doubt aware that country places as well as brains cost something to produce and maintain.

Having thus delivered myself of a plain, unvarnished tale—I call upon you for the sequel, and as "Actions speak louder than words," I say: "Come on Macduff, &c."

Respectfully yours,
GEO. C. EYLAND,
Succasunna, N. J.

Connecticut is accused of stinginess in investigating crime. A man was recently found dead under some railroad ties, and there was reason to believe that they were piled on him by murderers; but he was only a tramp, it would cost a few dollars to search out the truth, and the matter quietly dropped. This is said to be a fairly illustrative case.

Some facts about the Young Men's Christian Association.

In the year 1841, Mr. George Williams, then a young man about twenty, sought and obtained employment in one of the then great mercantile houses of London. He found about 150 other young men employed by the same house. Almost all of these spent their unemployed hours at the "free-and-easies." Young Williams organized a prayer meeting in his own bed-room, with one other christian clerk. There were several clerks who occupied the same room. Mr. Williams says in speaking of the beginning of this work: "If our room-mates did not choose to remain during the time we had our meetings, they retired; but we made it a great privilege to attend. We got the room completely packed in answer to prayer. The Spirit of God came down, and we saw conversion after conversion. The band increased; a Bible class, a mutual improvement society was formed, and the good was so great that we naturally said to ourselves: 'If God has so blessed us by these simple means, why should He not give such blessings in other houses of London?' We wrote to a friend we knew—a christian—who came forward and we consulted with him about the formation of what has since become the Young Men's Christian Association of the present day. In my own bed-room the first consultation was held. Associations were soon organized in other houses and in other cities." It was not until Dec. 9th, 1851, that the first Association was organized in America, at Montreal. Twenty days later, by direct suggestion from London, and without the knowledge of the Montreal association, an association was organized in Boston. During 1852, ten other organizations were effected, from which time the organization has grown in numbers, definiteness of aim, plans of work, and power among the christian forces of the world. The first International Convention of the Associations in the United States and British Provinces was held at Buffalo, in June, 1854. There were 16 associations represented by 28 delegates. In 1860, thirty-nine associations were represented at the New Orleans convention. Thus steadily have the Associations grown in numbers and in influence, until now, as Rev. Dr. Theodore Cuyler has said: "The association has, for thirty-five years, vindicated its right to existence and cut a clear way for itself into every civilized land on the globe." The associations are located as follows: United States 824; Dominion of Canada 56; Bermuda 1; South America, (Chili), 1; England 198; Scotland 188; Ireland 18; France 65; Germany 422; Holland 450; Switzerland 209; Sweden and Norway 86; Belgium 24; Denmark 3; Spain and Portugal 19; Italy 20; Turkey 35; Austria 4; Russia 7; Syria, 5; India 2; China 2; Japan 2; Africa and Madagascar 16; Australia 25; Hawaiian Kingdom 1. Total 2,671. About 200,000 persons are found in the membership of the associations. The associations of the World hold a convention tri-ennially—the last, the ninth meeting in London, July 28th, 1881, over 400 delegates were present from thirteen countries; 80 of them from America. The associations of the United States and British Provinces hold a biennial convention. The next, the 25th, meets in Milwaukee on the 16th of May next. This convention appoints an International Committee who have headquarters in New York, by whose wisdom, supervision and constant work we have in America, the best organized, most perfectly developed and most efficient system of christian work in association history, or even in the Christian World. This committee employs seven Secretaries each in the superintendency of his own department. The result of the work of the International Committee is shown in the organization of a efficient christian work in some seventy railroad centres, and in securing the employment of nearly or quite sixty men in its prosecution. In the organization of definite christian work in nearly 200 colleges and institutions for higher education. In the prosecution of work among colored young men of the South. In the organization of associations among the Germans, which are so united to the English speaking associations, that they may be mutually helpful—and in organizing and perfecting the work in the several states, most of which are now organized under the direction of efficient state committees who employ state secretaries. The International Committee is composed of twenty-nine christian business men of as good intellectual and business capacity as any like number who can be selected. It is the special joy and crown of the association that the results of its work have proven that its life and aim is one with the christian church. The following associations own the valuable buildings they occupy in the prosecution of their work: New York city, valued at $500,000; Poughkeepsie, $50,000; Schenectady, $47,000; Rome, $15,000; Watertown, $50,000; Clifton Springs, $10,000; Buffalo, $75,000; Chicago, $100,000; Jacksonville, $11,000; Indianapolis, $45,000; Baltimore, $230,000; Boston, $200,000; Lynn, $60,000; St. Louis, $40,000; San Francisco, $140,000; Cincinnati, $50,000; Cleveland, $75,000; Dayton, $26,000; Toledo, $22,000; Philadelphia, $500,000; Germantown, $50,000; Harrisburg, $18,000; Lancaster, $8,000; Washington, D.C., $32,000; Meriden, Ct., $40,000; Newark, $25,000. The work in New Jersey one year ago was supporting but one general secretary, now there are seven at work and fields open for several more. Rev. E. R. Shadrix, DD.LL.D., president of Centran College, Mo., says: "I have ventured to call the Young Men's Christian Association, the religious movement of the nineteenth century. It has adjusted itself to the great existing churches as a co-worker, without claiming itself to be a church and has the confidence and sympathies of all the leading divines of all churches."

THE first installment of the five-cent nickel piece of the latest design received has been from the Philadelphia Mint. It amounted to only $500. More are expected soon, and they will be put into circulation when received. This issue of the nickel piece has the word "Cents" inscribed under the Roman numeral "V," and is intended as a substitute for the new nickel piece which bore no inscription to designate its value beyond the figure "V." There are already about five million pieces of this coin in circulation.

POSTMASTER-General Gresham has approved a design for the new two-cent postage stamp. It contains a tablet, upon which is a profile of Washington similar to that on the present three-cent stamp. Surrounding the profile is an oval band, in the upper part of the band the words "United States Postage," beneath the band a large "2" and at the extreme bottom of the tablet the words "Two Cents." The design will be returned to New York for engraving, after which the department will decide upon the color to be used. The color of the design which has been approved is green.

POLITICS.

It has been remarked that politics and fair dealing are opposites, because, as in war, whatever gains partisan success is allowable.

Judged by modern degeneracy that may so appear, but, viewed in the light of truth, it discredits real political character.

Politics means "the science of government," and in a country like this there cannot be a more dignified and useful study than that.

It is the duty of each American citizen, however humble, to acquaint himself thoroughly with the design of representative institutions and the detailed management of public affairs, and in such connection, the obligation to be a politician rests immovably upon him.

Every man ought to be a politician in the legitimate meaning of the term.

Not a spoilsman, bent on securing mercenary advantage at the expense of integrity and decency, but a patriot, earnest for the preservation of sound principles and the essentials of free government.

We need more genuine politicians, citizens of unblemished repute, actively and unselfishly interested in governmental affairs of every grade, National, State and Local, and who are willing to come forward and bestow, if necessary, a measure of individual service for the general public good.

The influence of such citizens in political matters would effectually drive plotters and corruptionists into the back ground, and confer upon politics its intended purpose of being a safeguard for the honor of country and the welfare of people.

SELF RELIANCE.

There once existed in the United States an interest of vast and lucrative extent, adding alike to national fame and personal fortune.

It was the nursery of hardy freemen, and its products supplied the wants of foreign lands to enrich our own.

It grew and prospered without a dollar of government bounty and in spite of heavy revenue taxation, continuing to flourish until the material whereupon it worked gave out, and new inventions came into practical use.

Emphatically an American enterprise, it was strong and robust because free, and free because entirely self reliant.

That great industrial interest was the Whale Fishery of New England.

It never asked for nor received a particle of tariff protection, yet, regardless of abundant capital, lower wages and cheaper outfits abroad, it furnished light and lubrication for the civilized world.

Bounties would have killed it—dead as its harpooned whales.

Manly independence and intelligent industry made it a living source of wealth, and caused even the icebergs of Artic seas to reflect the rainbow hues of the starry flag.

No instance can possibly be cited showing more clearly the conquering power of self reliance than the Whale Fishery of America, and the same grand spirit which made it victorious over every opposing circumstance still exists, and might, if properly employed, render various home industries, now ignobly begging for government aid, masters of the consuming world and an honor to the American name.

Edgar Pierson, formerly Sheriff of Union county, died Wednesday night of last week at the Morris Plains Lunatic Asylum from paralysis of the brain. Mr. Pierson was elected in 1866, when he was but twenty-six years old, and was probably the youngest Sheriff ever chosen in the State. The funeral took place at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon from his home at Springfield. The form of insanity from which deceased suffered during the last year or two of his life, was that resulting from progressive paralysis of the brain. He got so that he could hardly articulate, and talked with the greatest difficulty. He was very happy at the asylum, but found fault that they would not let him go to collect the many millions of dollars that were due him from the potentates of the earth.

WESSON, Miss., April 23.—A frightful cyclone passed over this place and over the town of Beauregard, one mile above, about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. People were seen on all sides sobbing, and the groans of the wounded beneath the ruins were appalling. Dwellings were torn to atoms, and a pine forest was blown out of existence. Calvin Reed died from excitement. The doctors did all in their power to relieve the sufferings. The number killed is about 100; two or three children are missing, and 150 or 200 dwellings have been blown down. The escapes from some of the dwellings were miraculous. The number of people with broken limbs is estimated by the physicians at seventy-five. One child was crushed under a chimney. Two bodies found were so mangled as to be unrecognizable. A little boy was found in the woods several hundred yards away unhurt.

THE TOBACCO REBATE.

All the tobacco and cigar dealers and others holding Government licenses have been furnished with blanks upon which to make their claims for rebate from the Government under the new tobacco law, which goes into effect on May 1, for tax on tobacco, cigars and cigarettes that has been paid in excess of what the new law requires.

The following are the special Government taxes now imposed by the new laws, to wit:

Rectifiers of less than 500 barrels........$200 00
Rectifiers of 500 barrels or more........200 00
Dealers retail liquor........25 00

"Any person who shall sell, loan, or give to any minor under sixteen years of age any dime novel or book of fiction, without first obtaining the written consent of the parent or guardian of such minor, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by imprisonment or by a fine not to exceed fifty dollars."

Supposing any person sells, loans, or gives to a minor a novel or book of fiction costing more or less than a dime, what then?

Pneumonia has been unusually prevalent this year, and a hint given by the Connecticut Board of Health may be timely, although the advance of the season renders the danger less imminent:

The connection between foul air and pneumonia has been shown repeatedly. Persons coming out of ill-ventilated rooms, after breathing polluted air, which has already induced some congestion of the lungs by its irritating qualities, readily take cold, and a congestion which induces inflammation is easily excited. It is well known that there is a type of pneumonia, induced by foul, polluted air, even without subsequent exposure to the colder air out of doors. Sewer gases from bad plumbing, or imperfect drains, contaminated air from polluted soil around the house, by heaps of decaying filth or saturation by kitchen and other refuse, if drawn into the house or habitually breathed, so depress the system and lower vitality, that disease is readily engrafted. During the prevalence of the present type of broncho-pneumonia a severe cold should receive attention at all sacrifices. Neglect to care for what at first was apparently a trifling ailment has caused the sacrifice of many valuable lives.

Forepaugh's Great Show.

In the arrangement and conducting of the races in Forepaugh's Hippodrome, which is to exhibit at Plainfield, May 4th, the manner in which the races will be run, the colors of the jockeys, the construction of the chariots etc., and the different animals put upon the half-mile track, all will be in exact keeping with the descriptions furnished from historical sources, of the hippodrome races of Rome and Greece, centuries ago. The Roman jockeys rode as ours now do, in different colors, particularly, the competing of charioteers, to distinguish themselves. There was generally four, viz: green, red, white and sky or sea color, especially under Caligula and Nero. History states that Domitian added two more colors, gold or yellow, and purple; but these were soon laid aside by the succeeding Emperors. Racing, indeed, appears to have been a soon favorite a diversion of the Romans, that they practiced it with other animals besides horses. Asses were made coursers; and ostriches were competitors for the goal. The tyrant Heliogabalus made racing matches with elephants; four being attached to each chariot. He also employed camels for the same purpose.

FREEHOLDER'S PROCEEDINGS.

[OFFICIAL.]

ELIZABETH, N. J., April 19th, 1883.

Pursuant to adjournment the Board met on Thursday, April 19th, 1883, at 2 o'clock p. m.

Present—Director Martine and Freeholders Briant, Clark, Doty, Ellor, Halliday, Hubbard, Husbands, Isemann, Mapes, Newbury, Oliver, Storer, Thompson, White—15.

Absent—Freeholder Smith.

The minutes of the last meeting were read (omitting list of bills ordered paid) and on motion, approved as read.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A communication from F. T. Wood, Esq., Township Clerk of New Providence, notifying the Board of the appointment, by the committee of said township, of Simeon P. Dobbie as member of the Board of Chosen Freeholders for the unexpired term, caused by the resignation of C. A. Runkle, Esq., was read by the Clerk.

On motion communication received and placed on file, and the oath of office, as a member of the Board, administered to Mr. Dobbie by the Clerk.

RESOLUTIONS.

By Freeholder Clark:

WHEREAS, It is found that the plan of Monroe street bridge, Rahway, as now contracted for, will only give a water way of 6½ feet below the iron work, and as it has been ascertained that by strengthening the beams and raising the bridge a water way of 7½ feet can be obtained at a cost of [illegible]; therefore be it

Resolved, That the com. on Rahway bridges be instructed to make a sub-contract with the Penn Bridge Works for the necessary changes to increase the water way to 7½ feet, said contract to be for the sum of [illegible] and the same be charged to the special emergency fund, 1883.

Freeholder Newbury moved the resolution lie upon the table.

Which was carried by the following vote:

Affirmative—Director Martine, Freeholders Ellor, Hubbard, Mapes, Newbury, Oliver, Dobbie, Storer, White—9.

Negative—Freeholders Briant, Clark, Doty, Halliday, Husbands, Isemann, Thompson—7.

Absent—Freeholder Smith.

By Freeholder Clark:

Resolved, That the Com. on Rahway bridges be and are hereby instructed to have the west abutment of the Irving avenue bridge, Rahway, moved 10.5 feet westerly and parallel with the present wall.

Resolved, That the Com. on Rahway bridges be instructed to make a sub-contract with the present contractor for such work as will be in excess of the present contract for masonry for said bridge, providing that the price for masonry shall not exceed the present contract price on said bridge.

Freeholder Briant moved the resolution lie upon the table.

Which was carried by the following vote:

Affirmative—Director Martine and Freeholders Briant, Doty, Ellor, Hubbard, Husbands, Isemann, Mapes, Newbury, Dobbie, Storer, Thompson, White—13.

Negative—Freeholders Clark, Halliday—2.

Absent—Freeholders Oliver, Smith.

Public buildings—[illegible]
Salary Account—[illegible]
Special Emergency 1883—[illegible]

The bill of A. V. Sherwood [illegible]

Freeholder Clark offered the following:

Resolved, That the resolution passed April 5th, in relation to [illegible], be rescinded.

Freeholder Newbury moved that the resolution offered by Freeholder Clark lie upon the table. Carried.

On motion the Board adjourned.

F. L. CROWELL, Clerk.

Of Interest to Firemen.

The following is the law passed by the late Legislature of this State, exempting firemen from a certain amount of taxation:

CHAPTER CXVII.

Supplement to an act exempting firemen from taxation, approved March twenty-fourth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the first section of the act to which this is amendatory, be and the same is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That all active members of any organized volunteer fire department of any town, city, borough or township of this state, under the control of any town committee, common council, or municipal corporation, which is now, or may hereafter be established, shall be exempt from the payment of any taxes to said town, township, city and borough, to the extent and in the manner following, to wit: if the sum at any one time assessed by any assessor upon any active member of said fire department shall not exceed the sum of five dollars, then such member shall be exempt from the payment of taxes upon such assessment; if the sum at any time exceeds the sum of five dollars assessed against such member, then such member shall have credit for the sum of five dollars on the amount assessed against such member, and the amount over and above said five dollars shall be paid by said member, or collected in the same way and manner as directed for the collection of taxes.

2. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 22, 1883.

NEUTRALIZED!

In what way a prevalent evil may be shorn of its power to harm.

Malaria is a broad name for many diseases—all originating in blood poisoning. Bilious fever, the typhus and typhoid fevers and chills and fever are prominent members of the family. Malaria defeats alike the builders, the plumbers and the physicians. Despairing of ordinary treatment the latter almost unanimously recommend BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER as the greatest anti-malarial specific of the age. These plasters act upon the liver, spleen, bowels and kidneys.

Worn over the region of the liver, and upon the back over the kidneys, they ward off malaria like an armor. No other plasters do this.

When you purchase, satisfy yourself that the word CAPCINE is cut in the center of the plaster. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, N. Y. Highest awards at International Expositions. no-4-y-1

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER IN UNION COUNTY.

To Our Advertisers.

Regular advertisers entitled to a "change of advertisement," must hand in the same not later than Wednesday noon of each week, to insure insertion in the coming issue.

The above regulation is peremptory, and if so understood will be fully as convenient to advertisers, and immeasurably more so to

Their Obedient Servants,

'RAH for the Opera House.

RARITAN shad are now plentiful in our markets.

SNOW, rain and hail on the 23d day of April, 1883.

THE repainting of the street lamp posts is the accomplishment of a public desire.

IN less than a year from now many cities in this State will envy Plainfield its Stillman Music Hall.

THE profits of the Entertainment given by the Ladies' Guild of Grace church recently, reached the satisfying sum of $684.

IN three days will close one of the most unsatisfactory oyster seasons we can remember. The fruit was, as a general thing, watery and flavorless.

ON our first page this week will be found an interesting article on the beginning of Young Men's Christian Associations and their growth to the present day.

ALREADY the choir of the Crescent avenue church has begun the rehearsing of some particularly pleasing music to be rendered at the church sociable in May.

AT the saloon of Mr. Chas. Bock, formerly Caspar's, on East Second street, customers will find Trefz's celebrated Bock-beer on draught and a tempting lunch.

THE soloists who will take part in the concert at the Park avenue Baptist church, next Thursday evening, have been selected from the St. Cecilia Society of New York.

THE Crescent Base Ball Association "talks of" organizing a nine this month. We hear of games throughout the country, but our home team has not even had a practice day.

STREET COMMISSIONER Meeker has repaired the holes in the rotten wooden pavement of Park avenue by filling them in with stones. This pavement must come up soon, nevertheless.

THE victim of the Bound Brook Route and Lehigh Valley disaster, who was removed to the Muhlenberg Hospital, is doing remarkably well under the care and attendance there given him.

THE store at No. 10 Park avenue, formerly occupied by Jules Boutes, is now rented by W. F. Adams who has placed therein a complete stock of artist's materials and painter's supplies.

THE new Postmaster General has decided that postmasters who fail to notify publishers when subscribers remove, or fail to take papers from the post office, shall be responsible for their subscription.

IN the school house on the turnpike near the Raritan landing, Sunday afternoon next at 4 o'clock, Peter S. Bergen will lecture on "How to keep the body a fit temple for the indwelling of the right spirit."

THE Director of the Union Co. Board of Freeholders, in another column, says a word or two in relation to who is responsible for the Grove street bridge—its objectionable features and its present unfinished condition.

THE many friends of Mr. Jacob Blimm proprietor of the Farmer's Hotel on Somerset street, are cordially invited to visit his establishment to-day and to-morrow for the enjoyment of Bock-beer, Bock-wurst and Sauerkraut.

THE proceedings of the Union County Board of Freeholders published on the last page of this issue, are (strange to say) quite interesting by reason of their record of action taking regarding matters of local importance.

IT will pay our readers to call at the clothing store of S. C. Lillienstern, on Front street, and be convinced that he has a large stock of men's, boys' and children's clothing at prices as low as the same goods can be purchased elsewhere.

THIS (Thursday) evening, The Alliance Musical and Dramatic Association of St. Patrick's parish, Elizabethport, will give an entertainment at Van Deventer Hall for the benefit of St. Mary's church of this city. "Kathleen Mavourneen" and a farce, will be presented.

IT is quite probable as a result of the meeting of Tuesday, that a loan will readily be effected on the unincumbered assets of the C. R. R. of N. J., and there is little doubt that as soon as this shall have been accomplished the long talked of lease to the Reading Road will take definite shape.

TRENTON has made the first official move towards electric lights, by appointing a committee of Common Council to ascertain the cost of lighting the city with electricity. Our Council might do the same. It wouldn't cost anything to obtain estimates, and a way to get more light for the same money, might be discovered.

WEEKS of gratuitous labor, earnest solicitation of donations and united effort for the accomplishment of desired results on the part of the young ladies of the L. L., will assuredly achieve financial success for the fair to be given during the latter part of May for the benefit of the Children's Home. We will give further particulars in a future issue.

NOT satisfied with what he has already done for the comfort of his patrons, Mr. Charles Smith at some expense has rented the building adjoining his saloon at the corner of Front and Somerset streets and converted it into a large refrigerator. He is offering Bock-beer, Bock-wurst and Sauerkraut to-day and to-morrow as announced in his advertisement elsewhere.

THE entertainment to be given in Van Deventer Hall, Saturday evening, May 5th, by Miss Mamie R. Kunkel and a selected support of some of the most talented and able artists on the stage of to-day, will undoubtedly surpass any affair of the kind ever given in this city. Our public seldom has an opportunity of hearing so young and accomplished an actress and vocalist as Miss Kunkel, nor so capable a company.

THREE monuments of great significance are given in Puck. One is Vanderbilt's Fifth avenue Palace, the second Stewart's Garden City Cathedral, and the third Peter Cooper's Institute. Near the first of these is a hog reclining on a bed of roses. But Peter Cooper was a Theist, who did not believe in a Christ, and according to our teaching he cannot inherit the kingdom. The Elizabeth Journal probably refers to such a condition of things when it says the cartoon reminds it of the pregnant passage: "And beside all this, between us and you there is a great gulf fixed."

THE Law and Order League closed the barber shops of Somerville last Sunday, and also prohibited the sale of cigars.

A FOUR-YEAR-OLD of East Fifth street has decided he doesn't want to go to Heaven, "'cos dare noboddy but dead folks dare."

THE poet asks, "what is so rare as a day in June?" We are impelled to imagine that Tuesday last was about as raw as they make them.

MR. Joseph Blatz of North Plainfield, was granted a hotel license at the opening of the April term of the Somerset County Courts, at Somerville last week.

MRS. Smith: "And you are really going to marry the widow after all, and, I hear, give up smoking?" Languid swell: "Yaas. Mutual 'rangement. She gives up her weeds—I give up mine."

IT is thought that ice will be high this Summer. Last Winter was so cold that the men engaged in cutting ice had to be furnished with mittens by the companies, and mittens are expensive.

AT his saloon on the corner of Front and Somerset streets, Charley Smith will entertain his host of friends to-morrow and Saturday, with the Season's delicacies—Bock-beer, Bock-wurst and Sauerkraut.

NEXT Wednesday, May 2d, Mrs. L. Adams, of No. 42 West Front street, invites her many patrons and the Plainfield ladies in general to attend the Spring opening of her unusually varied stock of fine millinery.

WIGGINS and Venor are taking a rest, but we will keep up the weather furore notwithstanding. We hereby predict a snow storm, accompanied with whirlwinds, on the afternoon of July 3d, at two o'clock sharp.—Elizabeth Herald.

THE Trenton Times proposed to publish love stories written by Trenton school girls, which terrible affliction will probably drive away even the few readers it now has that are able to stand the humbug reforms that stuff its columns and its subscribers.

PROF. Gumprich of the New York School of Languages has become a resident of this city and intends organizing a class in German. His method of tuition is the well-known Meisterschaft's system, which has come to be considered one of the most efficient.

MR. Henry A. Thorne of Fifth street, on trial for conspiracy to defraud the Government while acting as an appraiser in the New York Custom House, was acquitted last Friday. Corporation Counsel Marsh assisted in the conducting of the case for the accused.

THE Directors of the Somerset County Agricultural Society met Wednesday of last week and decided to erect a new building for the exhibition of ladies' work. It is to be 100 feet long by 40 feet wide, and will be somewhat on the plan of the one at our own grounds.

As a nation we pride ourselves on our intelligence and civilization in the face of the fact that at this time of the year those who can afford such "delicacies" eat strawberries and trout that have lost all their flavor by the ice-packing necessary to transport them out of season.

A COMMUNICATION in a recent issue of this paper may have had nothing to do with the matter, but since its just condemnation of the owners of North Plainfield's dilapidated board-walks, many of the latter have been put in good condition.

HERE'S a bit of news all the way from Carlisle, Pa.: "Commodore Porter, Plainfield's well-known auctioneer, intends visiting his father, Elisha Porter, this week, in Huntingdon county. The old gentleman was born in 1790, and is 93 years old. Mr. Porter has not seen his father for 10 years, and anticipates much pleasure from his visit."

AT the Park avenue Baptist church next Thursday evening, the Young Apollo Club of New York city will give a grand concert under the auspices of the Young People's Association of the church. This combination of vocal talent is too well known in this city to need any commendation from us, and the public will, as in the past, favor it with the general patronage it deserves.

THE Sheriff's sale of the oil-cloth works, manufactured goods and materials belonging to Messrs Newell & Wight of this city and New York, was again adjourned yesterday to Wednesday next, May 2d, at 10 o'clock a. m. A number of the principal creditors of the firm having every confidence in the ability and integrity of Mr. Newell, will undoubtedly arrange to continue the business.

Personals.

Counselman Gardner is seriously indisposed.

Mr. James O'Neill at the Muhlenberg Hospital, is rapidly recovering his usual health.

To Senator Wm. J. Sewell our thanks are extended for Parts 1 and 2 of the Compendium of the Tenth Census of the United States.

Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City, is now ably managed by Mr. Geo. B. DeRevere, for several years the popular landlord of the City Hotel and Park House, this city.

The Plainfield Police "Force" has been increased by the addition of another member, and Captain Chase and his wife are doing as well as could be expected.

Ex-Mayor L. V. F. Randolph was last week visiting Pike's Peak and other wonders of nature's handiwork thereabouts. He left that section on Friday for Southern Colorado and New Mexico.

Mr. Jerome Hopkins whose opera of "Taffy" failed to incite interest or invite patronage in this city, repeated the same with a cast of Ward School children at the Star Theatre, New York, Tuesday.

At the Crescent avenue church Sociable of Friday evening last, the singing of Mrs. Butler was greatly admired, as was also, the instrumental duetts of the Misses Lilian Newman and Alice Holmes.

The lad Henry Bonewaldt, who while in the employ of Mr. Hugo Weigmann of Front street was taken sick and removed to the Muhlenberg Hospital, left that institution Wednesday morning, entirely recovered.

Mrs. Barzilla Randolph, a member of the Seventh Day Baptist church and a lady greatly admired by a host of friends and acquaintances in this city, died at her residence, corner of Sixth and New streets, Monday.

Mr. Charles Potter and daughters left for San Francisco, Tuesday evening, intending to remain about six weeks. Mrs. Potter accompanied them as far as Edgerton, Wis., where she will visit during the coming month.

Rev. James Riggs, just returned from Constantinople, will deliver a lecture in the Chapel of the Crescent avenue church, next Tuesday evening, on the late war in Egypt. The lecturer was an eye witness of many of the scenes he speaks of.

In the absence of the Rev. Dr. Bliss during the month of May, his congregation will be effectively interested and instructed by such able divines as J. L. Hurlbut, J. H. Vincent and others. Dr. Bliss will spend about four weeks with his parents in Alabama.

Mr. Sidney E. Flower the crayon artist, who has so successfully portrayed the faces of most of our prominent citizens, finds his stay in this city drawing near an end. Those desiring to avail themselves of his talent, should, in consequence, send in their orders at once.

The new General Passenger Agent of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific Railroad is Howard E. Laing, a former resident of Rahway, and who for a number of years past has acted as City Passenger Agent, at Chicago. Mr. Laing is a brother-in-law to Mr. Frank Green, of the firm of Green & Co., this city.

Ho, for an Opera House!

A meeting of the subscribers to the Stillman Hall Fund will be held at the rooms of Jerusalem Lodge, F. & A. M., over VanDeventer Hall on Monday evening, April 30, 1883, at 8 o'clock, to transact business and appoint committees, all the funds having been subscribed.

JOHN W. MURRAY.

Plainfield, April 25th, 1883.

Plainfield Hospital.

This institution located at No. 80 Somerset street, North Plainfield, is designed as a private Hospital for the treatment of Medical and Surgical cases and its service is open to any legally qualified physician who may place a patient within its wards. The Hospital is capable of accommodating twenty patients—the male ward being on the first floor, and the second floor contains the female ward and three private rooms. Any information or particulars may be obtained by addressing the managing committee—Drs. T. H. Tomlinson, J. B. Probasco and C. M. Field.

Send in the Names.

We have heard it stated that an unknown party, evidently a non-resident of the State, was seen to shoot several robins along Green Brook one day last week. The penalty for killing a robin or any insectivorous bird is $10, while any non-resident of the State is liable to a fine of $50 for shooting or fishing within the State, without first complying with the By-laws of a Game Protective Association. If the name of any such persons caught violating the State laws, with necessary proof, will be sent to the officers of "The New Jersey Game & Fish Protective Society," in this city, the guilty ones will be promptly prosecuted.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

Bible class as usual, Saturday evening.

Regular monthly Board meeting next Thursday, May 3d, at 8 o'clock p. m.

The Boys' prayer meeting Friday at 4 o'clock, will be conducted by Master Frank Newman. All the boys are expected to attend.

The Reception held Tuesday evening was largely attended and enjoyed by all present. The spelling school was a novel feature of the evening, and created much merriment. The last reception of the season will be held on the last Tuesday evening of May. The committee promise something pretty fine in the way of entertainment.

Preparing to Have a President.

The Directors of the C. R. R. of N. J. met at the company's office, in Liberty street, Tuesday, and passed a resolution to pledge such unincumbered assets as are available and raise a sufficient sum of money to take the road out of the hands of the Receiver. It is said that there are about $4,500,000 of unincumbered assets. Some of the Directors allege that the chances are good for getting the road out of Receiver Little's control in a few weeks. Provision was made for the election of the members of the present Board of Directors, as Directors of branch roads which have been acquired. Among those at the meeting were Receiver Little, Samuel Sloan, Robert Garrett, Franklin Gowen, ex-Gov. Randolph, S. E. Sheppard, E. C. Knight, and John Kane.

Resolutions of Regret.

The following memorial was adopted by the Howell Division S. of T. on Tuesday evening, April 24th, 1883:

WHEREAS, It having pleased Almighty God to remove from this life our valued brother, Joseph Perine, duty bids us, while bowing submissively to a decree which has severed long cherished associations, and deprived our Division of one of its oldest and most zealous members, to appropriately acknowledge the loss we have sustained; therefore,

Resolved, That, mourning the death of our brother, we hold in sweet remembrance the pleasant fellowship enjoyed with him, and feel that we cannot honor his memory more fittingly than through increased devotion to the great and humane cause of Sobriety he so nobly upheld when with us.

Resolved, That the Division Room be draped in black, and that these resolution be spread at length on the minutes, and furnished to the press for publication.

Wanted, an Architect.

Now that the money is all subscribed and the Stillman Music Hall is to be built, the most important point of the whole affair is reached—the selection of an architect. Not only must the building be erected according to plans drawn by a man of experience, but there must be no "question" of its safety when completed. Let a rumor once gain the slightest credence against the thorough reliability of the building in every particular, and a thousand tongues cannot overcome its effect no matter how baseless the report. The reputation of E. L. Roberts as an architect of some of the handsomest, most convenient, comfortable, completely ventilated and entirely satisfactory buildings in the country, is universally acknowledged. Let him be selected as its architect and no one will ever doubt the safety of the Stillman Music Hall.

Literary Note.

The Art Amateur for May contains some excellent sample designs for wood carving from the Cincinnati School of Design, together with the first of a series of articles on "Practical Wood Carving for Amateurs," by Calista Halsey Patchin; a seasonable design of dog-tooth violets for a dessert plate, some attractive South Kensington embroidery designs, a page of monograms in "R," and a profusion of designs for jewelers' use. There are illustrated articles of much interest on the decorations of the Cornelius Vanderbilt house, on the costumes and jewelry worn at the Vanderbilt ball, on charcoal drawing, on Japanesque china decoration, and on a remarkable embroidered mitre. The exhibitions of the National Academy and the Society of American Artists are reviewed at length and some of the best pictures in both are illustrated, the frontispiece being a particularly charming drawing of Carl L. Brandt's "Portrait of a Lady" in the Academy exhibition.

Uncut Books and Magazines.

A recent number of the Publishers' Weekly has some sensible remarks on the desirable abandonment of the old-fashioned practice, so ill-adapted to the wants of readers, of issuing the books and magazines of the day uncut. The Weekly concedes that there may be a demand for uncut copies of exceptionally valuable editions on the part of that minority of book-buyers—the bibliocuriosity hunters, and worshippers of margin rather than matter, but this demand can be met without interfering with the comfort of the majority. The publisher of books or magazines intended for a wide circulation should consult the wants of the ordinary reader, who buys them for their contents and their immediate use. The Weekly draws this picture of everyday life among the readers of the magazines:

"Who has not witnessed in the parlor, or on the piazza, or in the railroad car, those painful massacres, and those onslaughts with jack-knives, rulers, lead-pencils, scissors, knitting-needles, hair-pins, and, in want of tools, with fingers and whole hands. Yet this damage by massacre and mutilation is nothing compared with the actual loss of good reading. How many pages remain closed forever, simply because they do not disclose themselves conveniently and at the right moment which so rarely returns."

Neither the picture nor the conclusion can be regarded as exaggerated.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

Baked Shad.

Reduce to crumbs the inside of a loaf of bread, heat in a saucepan some fresh butter the size of an egg, chop the quarter of a large onion and add to the butter when it begins to bubble. When this begins to brown add the bread and stir well, till thoroughly hot through. Season rather highly with pepper and salt. Stir through it a tablespoonful of finely chopped parsley; remove from the fire, and add immediately two well beaten eggs. Stuff the shad with this dressing and sew it up. Sprinkle pepper, salt and flour, and a little water; put a few thin slices of breakfast bacon in the baking pan and lay the fish upon them. Pour a little hot water in the pan and put into a hot oven, laying a few more slices of bacon over the top of the fish. Baste very often, and when done remove the bacon, sprinkle with a little melted butter in which chopped parsley is mixed and serve in a platter on which the fried shad roe is arranged about the fish in a nest of parsley.

Legislative Bills.

Governor Ludlow on Saturday last concluded his consideration of the bills of the last session.

During the session there have been presented to him 117 Senate bills and Joint Resolutions, and 138 House bills and Joint Resolutions. Total, 255.

Of the Senate bills he has approved 97 bills and 2 Joint Resolutions, vetoed 2 bills, filed 1 without approval, and rejected 15 bills. Of the House bills he has approved 108 bills and 4 Joint Resolutions, vetoed 2 bills and rejected 23 bills and 1 Joint Resolution.

WESTFIELD WHIPS.

Chas. W. Hanson has gone and done it. Got married last Thursday, April 19th. He is living on Park street.

The Rev. Wm. H. Gill and wife arrived in our town on last Tuesday. They are the guests of James T. Pierson.

John Darsh is still making improvements in front of his stores on Broad street, by laying good substantial flag pavements.

Walter Baird of Rahway, N. J., has rented and moved into the house of Robert French, corner of Central avenue and Pictor street.

John Pierson who has been seriously sick with pneumonia for the past two weeks, at the residence of Jacob D. French, is slowly convalescing.

J. W. Ross of N. Y., has rented the house corner of Mountain avenue and Orchard street, and moved into the same the past week. It was formerly occupied by E. W. Boyden.

"Sam," and a surveyor stopping at the hotel, went out for a walk a few days ago and got lost in the woods, about two miles from the village. They finally found their way out and arrived home very late. Considerable anxiety was manifested at the hotel by their prolonged absence.

Louis Theise has been engaged the past week in negotiating for the purchase of the celebrated horse "Tuscarora," from its present owner, but the figures at which he was held by the owner was thought too high by Mr. Theise. He wishes him to match another horse he contemplates purchasing.

Mrs. Cornelia Ripley, by her last will, recently proved in the Surrogates court, at Elizabeth, left by will, the sum of one thousand dollars to Fairview Cemetery to be invested by the Trustees. The interest to be used in beautifying and grading the lots in the cemetery belonging to the Ross and Ripley families.

The Town Committee met at the Town Rooms on Wednesday evening, April 25th inst., at 7.30 p. m. Present—David Sayres, Robert R. Sinclair, Oliver M. Pierson, Luther M. Whitaker, Clerk. Minutes of last meeting read and approved. The bonds of Wm. W. Connoly, Collector, Oliver M. Pierson, Treasurer, and Samuel E. Young, Overseer of Poor, were received and on motion approved. The following road districts having failed to elect overseers, the committee appointed the following persons as overseers: Road District No. 5, Joseph Cory; No. 13, James H. Woodruff; No. 19, Chas. G. Brown. The bill of John M. C. Marsh for returns the past year to the Secretary of State of the certificates of births, deaths and marriages, amounting to $11.60, and that of W. L. Force and Bro., for printing, amounting to $25, were on motion ordered paid. Mr. W. G. Peckham on behalf of the subscribers to the stone crusher fund, appeared before the committee and stated that they had more money pledged than was necessary for the purchase of a stone crusher and wished the committee to take some action in the matter, and the money would be ready as soon as called for by the Town Committee. On motion adjourned subject to call of the chair.

In the examination at Westfield Public School No. 10, closed April 20, 1883. The following results were obtained.

For "The Constitutionalist."

Grove Street Bridge.

MESSRS. EDITORS—As there seems to be a doubt in the minds of some as to the responsibility that led to the present unfinished structure in Grove street, I desire a word or two: I think the responsibility is primarily with the joint committee of the counties, for I think that every vote was unanimous. After that, if your people are the reading public I take them for, they must take their share, for all the papers of the county published the conclusions of the committee—"to build a leaning end, low truss, iron bridge with 22 feet roadway and two sidewalks of 7 feet each capacity 80 lbs with a factor of 5, to cost not over $2,000." This is dated October 9th, 1882, and the contract was made the latter part of that month. Now I wish to take my whole share (or more) of the blame, for it was on my motion that the style, size and strength was determined, and I think at that time our action would have been (or was) justified by a large majority of the taxpayers of the counties for the following reasons: 1st, we had just met with a great loss supposed to be much over $100,000—an amount equal to our whole tax levy. 2d, the people were impatient and wanted the new bridge at once. They would hardly wait to have the old one cleared out of the stream. 3d, as the law then stood the amount expended on this account would all have to be added to the next tax levy (there were eight iron bridges to be built and Grove street was the shortest span) and it was no certain thing that the law could be changed. It was, however, but not without opposition; and now the situation is materially changed. 1st, those most interested have made known their wishes. 2d, the loss is much less than supposed, —to this county it will not exceed sixty-five thousand dollars. 3d, as the law now stands, the expenses can be funded and made payable gradually without perceptibly increasing the taxes. Therefore our board by a vote unanimous decided, if agreeable to Somerset, to move the present structure to Water street where it would almost reach the side lines, and then (although Grove street is almost wholly out of our county) build such a bridge in its place as the inhabitants of each county who are most interested, desire. This appears to be the only way out of the dilemma, for we have no place inside of our county where we can make use of this bridge. I will only add that every member of the committee at the time appeared to act freely, willingly and openly for the best interests of the tax-payers in all parts of the two counties, and I have never been with a committee more of one opinion, even to stopping the work in deference to the desire of the citizens of the vicinity.

Very Respectfully,

C. W. L. MARTINE.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

New Jersey's Educational Interests.

From the report of Prof. Ellis A. Apgar to the State Board of Education, presented at the meeting held on Thursday last, we glean the following facts referring to the school system of New Jersey:

The School Census of the State for the present year shows that there are 343,897 persons between the school ages, being 6,366 more than that of last year. The percentage of increase is two and four-tenths. The State School tax based on the census at the rate of four dollars per child is $1,385,588.00, an increase of $33,064 over that of last year. The percentage of increase is one and four-tenths. By dividing the total school tax by the total ratables, the rate of school taxation is obtained. It is .00257. The total tax has been apportioned as a tax amongst the several counties of the State Comptroller, on the basis of the ratables thereof. Ten per cent. of the aggregate sum is $137,358 80, and it is known as the Revenue Fund and is the amount which the Board of Education is empowered to apportion amongst the several counties as in the judgment of the members may be considered most equitable and just. The apportionment of the Revenue Fund was based upon the following considerations: 1. The history of the apportionment under the old law. 2. Comparison of this year's ratables with those of last year. 3. Comparison of this year's census with that of last year. 4. The number of districts entitled to fixed apportionments, viz: The $350 and $200 districts. 5. Amount received per child for the entire county, and 6. Amount remaining for the per capita districts.

The following is the percentage of difference from the year 1881 of the State ratables and the increase in the State census. The per cent. of increase of ratables in the State over 1881 is .014, of the census, .024:

County.	Census.	Ratables
Atlantic	.018 decrease.	[illegible] above.
Bergen	.001 "	[illegible] below.
Burlington	[illegible] increase.	[illegible] "
Camden	.005 decrease.	[illegible] "
Cape May	.027 increase.	[illegible] above.
Cumberland	[illegible] "	[illegible] below.
Essex	.004 decrease.	[illegible] "
Gloucester	.020 increase.	[illegible] above.
Hudson	.007 "	.017—.000 "
Hunterdon	.001 decrease.	.011—[illegible] below
Mercer	.006 increase.	[illegible] above.
Middlesex	.012 "	[illegible] below.
Monmouth	.006 decrease.	[illegible] above.
Morris	.007 increase.	.001—.018 below.
Ocean	[illegible] decrease.	.004—[illegible] above.
Passaic	.07 increase.	[illegible] "
Salem		.011—.003 below.
Somerset	.043 decrease.	[illegible] above.
Sussex	.02 "	.013—[illegible] below.
Union	.021 "	[illegible] "
Warren	.015 "	[illegible] "

There are nine receiving counties, four medium and eight paying. They are arranged as follows: Receiving counties (range from $3 28 to $3 90 per child) Camden, Middlesex, Cumberland, Sussex, Atlantic, Ocean, Hudson, Passaic and Cape May. Medium counties (range from $3 99 to $4.33 per child)—Morris, Bergen, Union and Warren. Paying counties (range from $4 40 to $5 54 per child—Burlington, Monmouth, Gloucester, Essex, Mercer, Salem, Hunterdon and Somerset. It will be observed by this that the lowest medium county is above the highest receiving county, and the lowest paying county above the highest medium county.

The report concludes: "We have reason to be gratified with the favorable comparison this year's per capita amounts make with those of last year. In thirteen of the counties this year, the per capita shows an increase, in four of them it remains unchanged, leaving but four in which there is a reduction. These four are Bergen, Burlington, Hudson and Morris. This reduction in Burlington and Bergen is due to the large decrease in their ratables, while every other county shows an increase. In Hudson the decrease is also unavoidable so far as the action of this Board is concerned, in consequence of the unprecedented increase in her school census. The decrease in Morris is so slight as to be insignificant.

The total State tax to be raised in the State for school purposes is $1,375,588.00. The amount appropriated from the State School Fund is $100,000, from the Surplus Revenue Fund is $33,202.08. The total amount appropriated by the State for school purposes for the year beginning September 1st, 1883, is $1,508,790.08.

The Empire State.

New York has a tenth of all the American people, an eighth of all the whites, and nearly a fourth of all the city or suburban people. It is the second agricultural State or only second to Illinois in farm products, leading Ohio $20,000,000. New York farms yield $10 an acre, Illinois $8. It is the second barley State, the third oats and rye State, the first buckwheat and hay State, and it raises one-fifth of all the potatoes and four-fifths of all the hops. It raises one-sixth of all the fruit, one-third of all the cheese, one-seventh of all the butter. It is the manufacturing State in the Union, paying more than a fifth of the total wages. Its manufactures aggregate nearly $1,100,000,000. It still leads in ship-building, and owns a third of our marine. It holds a third of the registered national bonds. It produces a sixth of the agricultural instruments, one-third of all the bakery products, one-half of the men's clothing and two-thirds of the women's clothing, one-fifth of the foundry and machine-shop products, one-fifth of the furniture, one-third of the hosiery and knit goods, a quarter of the jewelry, one-third of the beer and ale, half of the millinery and lace goods, two-thirds of the pianos, one-half of the paints, half the perfumery and cosmetics, one-third of the books and periodicals, one quarter of the soap and candles, one-half of the refined sugar and molasses, one-sixth of the chewing and smoking tobacco and snuff, and one-half of the cigars. It has the worst city governments, the meanest Legislatures, and the worst courts of justice in the Union.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

To check the centralization of mercenary power, and to bring back the honesty, economy and equity of former years, is present political duty.

The following from the Trenton True American, shows the necessity of every member of the Legislature to carefully scrutinize a bill before voting upon it:

"For many years past the Legislature has fallen into the bad practice of taking the titles of bills for their first and second, and sometimes their third reading, notwithstanding the Constitution provides that every bill shall be read in each house three times. The constitutional provision is a good one, and was designed to be literally carried out, and the consequence of a failure to do this is just now strikingly illustrated by the representation made to the Governor that an important tax bill now before him for consideration is not such in its provisions, as the House believed it to have been when they passed it. More than two-thirds of the members of the House sign a statement that they voted for the bill under the assurance that the Senate had made an amendment, which the bill is now found not to contain. The bill was not read a third time, but its title was taken for the reading, and the consequence was that the House took the thing on trust and did not know for what it was voting. One such case as this ought to put a stop to the passing of bills by their titles forever. It is one of too many evasions of provisions and requirements of the Constitution having the protection of public and private rights for their purpose, and upon a strict compliance with which by their representatives the people should insist."

POETRY.

NOTE THE BRIGHT HOURS ONLY.

A lesson in itself sublime,
A lesson worth enshrining,
Is this: "I take no heed of time,
Save when the sun is shining;"
These motto words a dial bore,
And wisdom never preaches
To human hearts a better lore
Than this short sentence teaches.
As life is sometimes bright and fair,
And sometimes dark and lonely,
Let us forget its toil and care
And "Note bright hours only."

There is no grave on earth's broad chart,
But has some bird to cheer it;
So hope sings on in every breast,
Although we may not hear it;
And if to-day the heavy wing
Of sorrow is oppressing,
Perchance to-morrow's sun may bring
The weary heart a blessing.

We bid the joyous moments haste,
And then forget their glitter;
We take the cup of life and taste
No portion but the bitter.
But should we teach our hearts to deem
Its sweetest drops the strongest,
And pleasant hours should ever seem
To linger with us longest.

The darkest shadows of the night
Are just before the morning;
Then let us wait the coming light,
All boding phantoms scorning.
And while we're passing on the tide
Of Time's fast ebbing river,
Let's pluck the blossoms by its side
And bless the gracious Giver.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

MAKING UP HER MIND.

Pretty Hester Earlscourt was in such a quandary. Only the day before, weary with care and her monotonous labor, she had sighed, "Oh, dear! I wish something would happen!" And now something had happened with a vengeance.

For four terms she had taught the district school at Oldville. The pay was not large, but enough to support her and her sister Cordelia—little Cuddy. It was Hester's first school, and she had been so glad to get it—after her father died, and it was discovered that there was really no property for the children.

Hester was young—only eighteen—even now when she began to feel so weary and careworn as a "school ma'am."

Was her life to go on forever so—long days of "readin', spellin' an' geogafry," twilight rides in the horse-cars back to town, frugal suppers with Cuddy, and nights that did not seem long enough to rest in—just that, and nothing more? It did seem a little hard, she had been such a dreamer—so hopeful of a bright future.

'But, oh, Cuddy, I'm growing worldwise!' she said one night, to her mystified little sister.

But that summer the days had been so long and the nights so short, that Hester cried out:

'Oh, dear, I cannot bear it! Anything for a change.'

'I believe you are sick, Hessie,' said womanly little Cuddy, who, though ten years old, wasn't much larger than a fairy and was obliged to stand on a footstool, beside Hessie's old easy chair, to smooth back the nut-brown hair from the blue-veined temples.

'No, Cuddy; only tired—so tired!'

'But you are!' persisted the child. 'Your temples beat, and your head is hot and eyes heavy. I'll bathe your forehead with ammonia. Oh, it's all gone out of the bottle! I'll run out to the druggist's and get some. May I?'

'Yes, dear!'

Yet Hessie hardly realized what the child said or where she had gone. She sat alone in the plain, but comfortable, little sitting room, the light fading around her, when there was a knock at the door.

'Come!' she called, without raising, thinking it was the landlady with clean towels.

The door—which stood ajar—was pushed open, and a gentleman entered. He had a pleasant, florid countenance and very blue eyes, and might have been about thirty-five years old.

'I beg your pardon Miss Earlscourt, but your landlady told me to come right up.'

'Excuse me!' said Hessie, instantly on her feet and recognizing Doctor Pell, one of the school committee. 'Pray be seated. I am very glad to see you. The committee have decided about the change of spelling-books, I presume?'

'N-o-o-o!' said Doctor Pell, with an unusual air of hesitation. 'My call is not one of business, Miss Earlscourt.'

Hessie may be pardoned for faintly showing her surprise. Dr. Arthur Pell had always seemed to her the business and most practical of men. How, then, should she suspect his errand.

'No?' she said, in a half-interrogatory tone, and paused.

'I—' and Dr. Pell paused.

Hessie grew a little pale.

'Your errand is not agreeable, I am afraid, Dr. Pell. Do I not give satisfaction—'

'In the school—to the committee?' he answered. 'Most assuredly you do!'

'Thank you!' said Hessie, greatly relieved.

'I am very awkward! I am afraid I shall startle you,' said Dr. Pell, very gently, after a moment; 'but the truth is I have come to-day to ask you to be my wife.'

Hessie's brown eyes opened, indeed startled.

'You are not offended?'

'N-o!' said Hessie.

'The way of it is this,' said Dr. Pell. 'Ten years ago I had a sweet wife, whom I loved very dearly. She died and left me with one child. My child fell to my mother's care, who has made the only home for me I have had since. But she is very aged, and has often urged me to marry again. However, this I found impossible. It has only been since I have known you, Miss Earlscourt, that marriage again has seemed possible. Pardon me! I know you have little expected this. But you are not offended, though I am no youthful hero. Try to believe me—I think I could make you happy!'

He bent forward and took one of Hessie's small hands gently between his. He looked very good and manly.

'I—I must have time to think, Dr. Pell,' faltered Hessie.

'Certainly. I have made my proposal. You shall decide at your leisure. But while you are thinking about it I would like to see you once in a while, Hessie. Will you let me take you to ride—call upon you of an evening.'

'I have no objection,' answered Hessie, quietly, but she felt quite dizzy.

In a few moments Doctor Pell had gone away.

Before she had in the least righted herself there was another knock at the half-open door, and Mr. Deslonde walked in.

Mr. Paul Deslonde was the most elegant man of Hessie's acquaintance. He was very handsome; his manner was faultless.

She had always stood a little in awe of him. Judge, then, of her surprise, when, having seated himself in her little sitting room, and chatted easily for half an hour, he very gracefully made a proposal of marriage.

'My father wants me to marry, and being unusually arbitrary, I am exceedingly grateful to him that he does not insist upon making a choice for me, but leaves me free to please myself. And this is no sudden fancy. I have known you long and admiration has ripened into personal esteem. Will you take my proposal into consideration.

Hessie caught her breath. She looked very pretty with the maidenly reserve mantling her features, the long, dark lashes shading the pure cheek; but these words brought such a bewildering vista of the elegant Deslonde mansion, where a home was offered her, that she was all in a whirl.

'I—I will take your offer into consideration, Mr. Deslonde,' she syllabled, mechanically.

She felt entirely incapable of saying any more. And then Cuddy came in with the ammonia bottle, and Mr. Deslonde's conversation turned to generalisms and then he took his leave.

Nobody will wonder, I think, that Hessie was very much excited. It was not unpleasant excitement. She was flattered, she has encouraged.

Doctor Arthur Pell was very much respected, though he was not rich. Paul Deslonde was very wealthy. Such a proposal from either was very reassuring to a poor girl whose face was her only fortune.

Not that Hessie was a bit in love with either. How could she be when she never had before dreamed of marrying either of these gentlemen? It was all so very sudden and unexpected!

The days and weeks went on. It was a very pleasant change which had come to Hessie—drives and visits, and flowers sent up to her little modest room.

The new order of things brightened even the tedious school hours. Yet, even when a month had gone by, Hessie had not even approached her decision. She possessed, in her two suitors, an embarrassment of riches.

They were very different. Paul Deslonde was brilliant, captivating, so apt with arts and grace of the highest social life, she could not help wondering that he should have chosen so unassuming a little maid as herself.

In truth, it was Hessie's peculiar air of docility and modesty which had attracted Mr. Deslonde. He liked to rule.

Doctor Pell was practical, with an air of reliability about him which spoke loudly for him to Hessie's lonely heart.

She had needed just such a friend so long! Yet, the frank, dark-blue eyes which were Dr. Pell's only beauty were often eclipsed in the young girl's mind by Paul Deslonde's elegant form and face.

She tried to be wise; so much depended on this decision of hers—all her life's happiness. Which did she like better? She could not for the life of her tell. Both strove to please her and were often very agreeable.

She wished sometimes that she could see them from a different standpoint than as her lovers. She tried to look into the future, imagining either her husband, but all was vague.

But at last came the point when Hessie was able to decide.

She was shopping one leisure Saturday and went into a stationer's store to make some purchases. When the goods she had ordered were put up, she sat down in the back of the store to wait for her car, which would not be due for half an hour. She was glad to rest too, and entertained herself with a stereoscope.

Suddenly she heard Paul Deslonde's voice. For the first time it struck her that there was something sharp and cutting in it: or, rather, she remembered that she had recognized that quality before without criticising it.

She observed Mr. Deslonde now attentively. He purchased a little steel impliment—an ink-eraser. The salesman wrapped and handed it to him. Mr. Deslonde overlooked the proffer.

'Send it up to the house at once. I am going directly home, and shall want to use it,' he said, curtly.

'Certainly, certainly,' answered the clerk, with an air of apology. 'I thought perhaps—it is so small—'

'I never take my purchases; the delivery is your business.'

'Yes—yes, of course, Mr. Deslonde.'

That gentleman went out, and the salesman muttered something to a fellow-clerk about 'pie-crust.'

But another customer came in. It was a broad-shouldered, florid man, with pleasant blue eyes. He seemed to know the salesman, and chatted with him as he carefully selected a nice stereoscope with several dozen views and a tasteful carved rack for holding them. When the purchase was completed and paid for the gentleman held out his hand for the package.

'This is quite a large parcel, Dr. Pell, I will send it up,' said the clerk.

'No: I will take it!' cheerfully.

'Better let me send it up, sir.'

'No; the things are for my little Nellie. She has been confined to her room for a fortnight with sickness. I promised them to her, and it would take away half the satisfaction not to give them to her myself. Perhaps you'll feel so, Charlie, when you have a little girl!'

And with a laugh and cheery nod Dr. Pell went out with the bulky parcel.

A warm color spread over Hessie's face. The tears came into her eyes; and then and there Hester Earlscourt made the decision which influenced her whole after life.

When Dr. Pell came into her sitting-room that night with a bunch of English violets, she took them with a radiant smile, held them and inhaled their fragrance all the evening, though a vase of Mr. Deslonde's finer green-house roses stood on the table.

And when at parting, the grave, tender, middle-aged lover took violets and both little hands gently in his and kissed them, she put a slender arm about the strong neck.

'Yes, good-bye now; but some time you will stay with me always; for I love you; you are so good!'

And in all her life Hessie never for a moment regretted her decision.

THE NEW HAT.

He bought a new hat,
A high, glossy hat,
And the rain it came down the next day;
And the day after that,
And the day after that
The rain it had managed to stay;
And the day after that,
And the day after that
Did the wintry element play;
And the day after that,
And the day after that
The skies were yet gloomy and gray;
So the day after that
He got his new hat,
And he tearfully gave it away.

BRIEF INFORMATION.

SOME FACTS WORTH KNOWING.

That salt fish are quickest and best freshened by soaking in sour milk.

That cold rain water and soap will remove machine grease from washable fabrics.

That fish may be scaled much easier by first dipping them into boiling water for a minute.

That fresh meat beginning to sour, will sweeten if placed out of doors in the cool air over night.

The milk which has changed may be sweetened or rendered fit for use again by stirring in a little soda.

That boiling starch is much improved by the addition of sperm or salt, or both, or a little gum arabic, dissolved.

That a tablespoonful of turpentine, boiled with your white clothes, will greatly add to the whitening process.

That kerosene will soften boots and shoes that have been hardened by water, and will render them pliable as new.

That clear boiling water will remove tea stains. Pour the water through the stain, and thus prevent its spreading over the fabric.

That salt will curdle new milk, hence, in preparing milk porridge, gravies, etc., the salt should not be added until the dish is prepared.

That kerosene will make your tea-kettle as bright as new. Saturate a woolen rag and rub with it. It will also remove stains from the clean varnished furniture.

That blue ointment and kerosene, mixed in equal proportions and applied to bedsteads, is an unfailing bug remedy, and that a coat of whitewash is ditto for a log house.

That beeswax and salt will make your rusty flat-irons as clean and as smooth as glass. Tie a lump of wax in a rag and keep it for that purpose. When the irons are hot rub them first with the wax rag, then scour them with a paper or cloth sprinkled with salt.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

It is better to wear out than to rust out.

What shadows we are, and what shadows we pursue.

It is living twice to be able to enjoy the past portion of life.

Be a lamp in the chamber if you cannot be a star in the sky.

True wisdom in general, consists in energetic determination.

There is a certain dignity to be kept up in pleasure as in business.

The one prudence in life is concentration; the one evil is dissipation.

There is one art of which every man should be master—the art of reflection.

Character is higher than intellect. A great soul will be strong to live as well as to think.

Justice is the beginning of political equality, but brotherly love is the completion of it.

Instruction does not prevent waste of time or mistakes; and mistakes themselves are often the best teachers of all.

Men who think for themselves do not believe quite so much as those who take what they have from hearsay; but it is very apt to be a better quality of faith.

Keep your promise to the letter, be prompt and exact, and it will save you much trouble and care through life, and win you the respect and trust of your friends.

Fretting is a perpetual profession of weakness. It says, "I wan't to and I can't. Fretting is like a little dog pawing and whining at a door because he can't get in."

Never be cast down by trifles. If a spider breaks his thread twenty times, twenty times will he mend it again. Make up your mind to do a thing and you will surely do it.

THE BOLD ROBBER AND THE EDITOR.

'Listen, my children,' said a venerable man, 'and I will tell you a story, beautiful and true.'

'Once upon a time there was a bad, bold robber, who had his haunt in the wild of the mountain. At the foot of the mountain, in the valley, was a village. It was not a very large village, yet in it a newspaper was printed. The robber looked upon the editor of the newspaper as being the chief man of the village, and thought he must be very rich. So one dark night he came down from his den in the mountain and stole into the dwelling of the editor and then into the room where he slept. The editor being a good man, slept as soundly and as sweetly as a child. The robber straightway searched all the places, but could not find the casket of gold and diamonds he had supposed to be stored up in the room. He then put his hands into all the pockets of the clothes of the editor, but found no money in any of them. The robber then stood for a time as in a stupor. He was like one awakened from a dream. He listened for some moments to the deep, regular breathing of the sleeping editor, and as he so stood he began to feel sad. The heart of the bold, bad man was touched. Quietly he took from his purse $4.75, placed the money in the pantaloon pocket of the editor and softly stole from the house. In the morning, when the editor got up and put on his pantaloons, there was a jingle as of money. A look of astonishment came into the face of the editor. He put his hand into his pocket and drew out the money. When he saw this great wealth the knees of the editor smote together; he turned pale, fainted and fell to the floor and there lay as one who is dead.'

'Oh! ho! grandfather, did they catch the bad robber man and hang him on a tree?'

'No, my dears, they did not catch the bad, bold robber. He is still living. From that day he reformed and got a place as cashier in a bank, where you will be glad to hear that he is doing well.'

'And the poor editor man, grandfather! what became of him?'

'Ah, yes, my darlings! I had almost forgotten him. Well, when he came out of his faint and his eyes again saw all the money lying around the room where it had fallen, he was sorely perplexed. At last he felt sure it had been quietly placed in his pocket in the night by a great and rich neighbor, who owned a tanyard, and was running for the legislature. So for days and days he printed in his paper whole columns of praise to the rich neighbor, who was elected to the office, and ever after the two men were the greatest friends. Thus my dears, do good actions always meet with their reward.'

'Law, father, you do not always tell us about such good and dear people!'

'To my husband?'

'Yes. Please fill out a blank.'

She filled out three different ones before the writing suited her, and tried four different pens before she found a holder of the right build and color.

'This order is for $5,' she said as she stood at the window.

'Yes'm.'

'He went there to secure work, but he can't find any.'

'Yes'm.'

'And he wants to come home.'

'No doubt of it.'

'But $5 seems like an awful price to bring any one from Saginaw.'

'So it does.'

'He might not find work if he came home?'

'No, ma'am.'

'And so he might as well be there as here.'

'Yes'm.'

'Well, I guess I'll wait a day or two, anyhow. If he finds work he won't want it, and if he gets tired and comes on foot he'll be so worn out that he can't more than half jaw around. Five dollars is quite a sum. I can buy a nice pair of shoes for that.'

The Constitutionalist.

EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

IRELAND.

The National Convention of Irish-Americans held in Philadelphia last week deserves approving comment, both as regards the orderly and dignified manner it transacted business and the purpose for which it assembled. It was emphatically American in style and unquestionably patriotic in intent. It boldly, yet truthfully, denounced the infamy of England towards Ireland and invoked public sympathy for the oppressed.

The Convention happily declared the proper functions of government to be—

"To preserve the lives of the governed.

To defend their liberty.

To protect their prosperity.

To maintain peace and order.

To allow each portion of the people an equitable and efficient voice in the Legislature.

To promote the general welfare by wise, just and humane laws."

That briefly, but forcibly presents the attainable objects for which all governments should exist, and to it every true-hearted American citizen must and will earnestly avow allegiance.

It is the everlasting truth.

Then, in language bravely aggressive and of marked power and correctness of expression, the Convention at great length recited the flagrant acts of injustice inflicted by England upon the people of Ireland. Space will not permit our giving the document entire, but the following extracts will suffice to show its character:

"The English government has existed in Ireland not to preserve the lives of the governed, but to destroy them.

Its gold has been folded in the hand of the assassin and has rewarded the infamy of the perjured traitor.

Its treacherous falsehood has lured patriots to unsuspected death.

As if the sword, the cannon, the torch, the scaffold, the dagger and the explosive were not enough, it enjoys the unique infamy of being the only government known to ancient or modern times which has employed famine for the destruction of those from whom it claimed allegiance.

Forcibly robbing the Irish people of the fruits of their own toil, produced by their own labor, it has buried not a hundred, not a thousand, but more than a million of the Irish race, unshrouded, uncoffined, in the grave of hunger.

It has mercilessly compelled other millions in compulsory poverty to seek in alien lands the bread they were entitled to in their own.

There is no form of cruelty known to the lowest savage which it has not practised on the Irish people in the name of the highest civilization.

There is no device of fiendish ingenuity it has not adopted to reduce their numbers.

There is no species of destructive attack, however insidious or violent, ancient or modern, rude or scientific, whether directed against life or matter, in any portion of the globe, for which its barbarities in Ireland have not furnished the example."

The foregoing is a terrible bill of indictment against England, and to the shame of Albion be it said, facts, ghastly and long continued, fully sustain the charges therein set forth.

It faithfully echoes similar truth-founded accusations preferred against the same hoary-headed oppressor by the American Colonies over a hundred years ago, when, in Congress convened, their representatives, among other things, boldly declared:—

"The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having, in direct object, the establishment of an absolute tyranny over these States.

He has refused his assent to laws the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has refused to pass laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of representation in the legislature, a right inestimable to them, and formidable to tyrants only.

He has made judges dependent on his will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of new offices, and sent hither swarms of officers to harass our people, and eat out their substance.

He has plundered our seas, ravaged our coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people.

He is, at this time, transporting large armies of foreign mercenaries to complete the works of death, desolation, and tyranny, already begun, with circumstances of cruelty and perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the head of a civilized nation.

He has constrained our fellow-citizens, taken captive on the high seas, to bear arms against their country, to become the executioners of their friends and brethren, or to fall themselves by their hands.

He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavored to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers, the merciless Indian savages, whose known rule of warfare is an undistinguished destruction, of all ages, sexes, and conditions.

In every stage of these oppressions, we have petitioned for redress, in the most humble terms; our repeated petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A prince, whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people."

So spake the Continental Congress.

America of 1776, nobly aided by France, fought the perfidious tyrant and sent him howling from these shores.

History is eventful.

Now America and France are both powerful Republics, and poor down-trodden, liberty-loving Ireland, tear-bedewed and hunger-fevered, implores their kindly offices to rescue her from the clutches of the identical dragon Washington and La Fayette battled to overthrow.

The cause of Ireland is just.

Her appeal ought to be heard and heeded.

Would that the day dawned when the starry fold of America and the tri-color of France might greet the green banner of Erin as an emblem of national sovereignty. That

The harp that once through Tara's halls
The soul of music shed,
No longer hangs on Tara's walls,
As if that soul were fled.
But a [illegible] pride of former days,
Now the despot's sway is o'er,
[illegible] hearts beat with fervent praise
Around Ireland's sea-girt shore.

The suit of the executors of George W. Demarest against the Central Railroad of New Jersey, for $100,000 damages for the death of Mr. Demarest at the Parker's creek disaster on the Long Branch Road last June, resulted Thursday in Paterson in a verdict of $30,000 against the company. Ex-Chancellor Williamson asked for a non-suit on behalf of the Receiver on the ground that the suit should have been brought against the Long Branch Railroad; also, that the Receiver, being an officer of the Court of Chancery, could not be properly sued. Judge Dixon denied the motion, and the defence rested without offering any evidence. The jury brought in a verdict in favor of the plaintiffs for $30,000. It is understood that the case will be appealed by the Receiver.

SALMON FOR THE DELAWARE.

On Saturday night last the largest shipment of salmon ever made in the history of fish culture in this country took place from the Fish Commission at Washington to the headwaters of the Delaware. 275,000 salmon seven weeks old went by the palace car of the Commission, to be followed in a few days by 226,000. Prof. Baird means this as a final test of the possibility of acclimating salmon in waters South of the Connecticut river. There never has been a natural run of salmon in waters south of that river, and although several attempts have been made to plant salmon in southern waters, they have not been in sufficient quantities to settle the question. The car containing these young salmon goes straight through from Washington to Deposit, making connection with the Erie at Jersey City.

This is to be followed in a few days by the shipment of 1,000,000 young salmon from Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island, to the headwaters of the Hudson.

ELIZABETH'S BIG DEBT.

ELIZABETH, APRIL 28.—Stewart L. Woodford, fiscal agent of the city of Elizabeth, has been notified by George R. McKenzie of the Singer Manufacturing Company that unless the settlement of that city's debt at the stipulated rate of fifty cents on the dollar is completed before May 15, his company will put in execution the mandamus for upward of $1,000,000 which they hold against the city. This is considered as effectually ending the settlement scheme, as only about one-fifth of its $5,000,000 of indebtedness has consented to the settlement scheme, and it will not be possible to obtain the consent of the other four-fifths in the time allowed by the Singer Company. The enforcement of the Singer mandamus and of other writs for smaller amounts pending against the city will necessitate the incorporation with the next tax levy of a sum in addition to the regular city taxes equal to about six per cent of the total valuation, and even then less than one-fifth of the city's debt will be paid.

It has been decided to formally open the Brooklyn bridge May 24th. Hon. W. M. Evarts, will be invited to speak for New York, and Rev. Dr. Storrs for Brooklyn.

Hon. Manning Freeman, of Piscataway Township, is spoken of as the probable County Collector of Middlesex county, at the organization of the new Democratic Board of Freeholders next week. No abler or better man for the position could be selected.

* * *

Judge Parker is reported as saying that the action of the Legislature in passing the new law relative to license applications, and causing it to take effect immediately, was about on a par with publishing an act against dogs by posting notices and expecting the dogs to read them.

* * *

And now, the small fry of the State press are advising (!) the Democrats to make their nominations for Governor first, "without waiting to see whom the Republicans will put up to fight him." Jess so. Save your wind and strength, gentlemen; there's lots of hot weather between now and nomination time. The Democratic Convention will accommodate you with a winning man, whenever that body assembles.

The time of the annual inspection of the Second Brigade, N. G. N. J., Major-General Sewell, commanding, has been definitely fixed by an official announcement that the Third Regiment will assemble at New Brunswick on the 9th of May; the Brigade Staff at Camden on the 14th of May; the Sixth Regiment and the Gatling Gun Battery at the same time and place, and the Seventh Regiment at Trenton on the 22d of May.

Considerable excitement prevailed at Tottenville and Perth Amboy over the mysterious disappearance of Keeper Brennan of the Great Beds Lighthouse, near Ward's Point. On Wednesday his boat was picked up in the bay not far from the light house. The boat was bottom up. On the previous night Brennan started from Perth Amboy in his boat, but it is supposed he did not reach the light house as the lamps were not lighted that night.

Wm. Badgley, twelve years old, who resided with his parents in Springfield, Union county, hanged himself on Monday of last week. His mother gave him a piece of twine with which to play, and he proceeded to the garret to amuse himself. When called to dinner he made no answer. One of the family found him in the garret suspended by the neck dead. He had tied one end of the twine around a rafter and the other end around his neck, and swung himself off "just for the fun of the thing," as related by one of the neighbors.

The Fish Wardens of South and West Jersey met last week, in Camden, at the residence of R. S. Jenkins, who was recently appointed fish commissioner in place of Dr. Benjamin P. Howell deceased. The following wardens were present: Joseph Ore of Camden county; Harry Hill of Mercer county; James H. Pierson of Gloucester county; William Lawrence of Salem county; Mr. Logue of Cumberland. Mr. Ore of Camden county represented Hamilton Hill of Burlington, who was unable to be present. Mr. Jenkins read the law to the Wardens on the subject of illegal fishing and instructed them to rigidly enforce the law. Mr. Ore instructed the new wardens as to what duties they would have to perform and the manner of doing the same. All of the instructions will be enforced in every particular.

LOCAL ANNEX.

Rev. Dwight Spencer

General Missionary of the Baptist Home Mission Society will preach next Sunday in the First Baptist Church, both morning and evening, in relation to the work of the Society in establishing churches and Sunday schools among the Mormons.

Police Notice.

The people of Plainfield, in view of the coming of the show of Forepaugh on the 5th inst, and the large attendance of strangers, will please not leave their dwellings entirely alone on that day or evening.

WINFIELD S. CHASE,
Captain of Police.

Decoration Day.

The above event, May 30th, is to be properly observed in Plainfield by Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., who call upon all friends for funds to aid them in so doing. Any contributions may be sent to Geo. W. Moore, Secretary and Treasurer of the Committee, who will publicly acknowledge the receipt of same through the city press.

Thanks.

At the last meeting of the memorial committee of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, the following resolution was adopted:

WHEREAS, Mr. George Stiles, of the firm of Ford and Stiles, having tendered to Winfield Scott Post the use of their wagon and horses for the conveyance of flowers on Decoration Day.

Resolved, That their offer be accepted and the thanks of this committee tendered for the generosity displayed.

G. W. MOORE, Sec'y.

Unintentional Shooting.

Master Tommy Blair, a young son of Mr. Ramsey Blair, a well-known dairyman residing near Evona, was shot in the chest by a playmate named Eddy Millikan, last Saturday afternoon. The latter pointed his father's gun at his companion in play, when the weapon accidently went off and the entire contents of the barrel, which was loaded with shot, were lodged in the body of young Blair. The lad was nearly killed by the shock besides being severely wounded, but prompt attention and efficient surgical care has so far overcome the effects of the accident, that hopes are entertained of the victim's recovery. Blood poisoning is, however, feared.

An Appeal to the Public.

Headquarters Memorial Committee, Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., 36 E. Front street.

In accordance with a resolution of the above committee, we appeal to the public of Plainfield and vicinity for funds and flowers to aid us in properly observing Memorial Day, May 30, the day set apart for decorating the graves of our fallen comrades.

Any contributions that the public may favor us with may be sent to the treasurer, at the above address, who will acknowledge receipt of the same through the press of this city.

BY ORDER OF THE COMMITTEE.

Fire Matters.

Regular meeting of the Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department, next Tuesday evening.

An attempt was made Tuesday night to fire the barn of Miss Mary Roll on Peace street. One of the stalls was kerosened and lighted, but burnt itself out before the building caught elsewhere.

The annual election for officers of the Plainfield Fire Department takes place next Monday, and more or less interest is occasioned by the fact that the rival candidates are all men of equal ability and fitness. The present Chief, Mr. Frank Vail, of No. 2 Engine Co., and Mr. A. L. Carney, of No. 3 Engine Co., are the nominees for Chief. Mr. W. L. Wright of No. 2 Engine Co., is the only candidate thus far for First Ass't; while Messrs. H. M. Stockton of Alert Hose Co., and N. W. Conway of Zephyr H. & L. Co., will contest the office of Second Ass't. "May the best man win."

Grand, Free, Public Procession.

A few of the great features of Forepaugh's superb and indescribably grand, gorgeous and costly free street parade, are 25 Royal Elephants in line; 300 plumed horses; 40 magnificent Chariots; 22 Elegantly-Caparisoned Stallions; Many wide-open dens of wild beasts; 3 Great Bands; Black and White Camels; the pageant of "Lalla Rookh departing from Delhi," in which is seen the "Handsomest Woman in the United States," and all the wealth of an Eastern Monarch's Court; also first perfected presentation of the peerless pageant, "Cleopatra, Queen of Egypt;" Living Lions loose in the street; Snake Charmers; Lions and Tigers performing; Carnival Scenes; Jubilee Singers; 3 Great Bands; all Nationalities; Giants; Dwarfs; Calliopes; Droves of Ponies; Historical, National, Patriotic and Moral Tableaux; and more variety, grandeur and splendor than ever was seen in any parade, anywhere on earth. It is free for everybody to look at and admire, and can be seen on the street Friday, May 4th.

Opening of the May Term of Court.

The May term of Court opened on Tuesday morning last at Elizabeth, Judge Van Sychel presiding; Associate Judges Mc Cormick, Harper and Hyer. The attendance was about as large as usual.

The Court was opened about ten o'clock, and there was but little time before Sheriff Forsyth came into the room with the Grand Jurors. The list was called as follows:

David Mulford, Linden, foreman; Jacob Reibel, John B. Roach, John B. Lutz, Meline W. Halsey, John McCandless, Charles VanHorn, John E. Voorhees and John E. Astfalk, Elizabeth; Geo. Hartshorn, Martin M. Thorn, William H. Sterling and George M. Stiles Plainfield; Robert J. Toms, Antone Lowmiller, Christopher D. Marsh and Benjamin B. Miller, Rahway; Joseph Moffett, Westfield; James W. Ferguson, Cranford; Isaac Littell, Fanwood; J. Williams Crane, Union; Matthais Droughty, New Providence; James H. Kelly, Summit; Clarence Agens, Springfield.

All the gentlemen called answered to their names, for the first time in many terms, and Mr. Agens was excused, as only 23 can serve.

After the usual oath had been administered Judge Van Sychel said that only a single matter had been brought to the attention of the Court. There were abuses in the mode of granting of licenses. The law, as he had been informed, required petitioners presenting petitions to the Excise Board to make affidavits that the persons signing application are freeholders of the ward. It is alleged that in some cases the affidavits have been false. It will be your duty to send for such persons as know of these facts, and if you find that any petitioner has wilfully made a false affidavit you should indict him for perjury. It is a matter that should be examined carefully. It is the law of the land and should be enforced like any other law. If they go before the Board of Excise with a false affidavit they should be punished.

The Grand Jury then retired.

The most important matter to come before the court is that of the trial of John Noonan for the murder of Thos. Mc Keon, at the Port last September. Noonan was formally arraigned on Tuesday and plead "not guilty". His trial was set down for the 15th inst.

The list of causes is of about the usual size, and includes 9 in the Supreme Court, 12 in the Circuit Court, 2 arguments on demurrer, 3 jury appeals, and 6 justices' appeals; total, 32.

One trial—which has been in litigation for some years—was set down to be tried by a struck jury. It was E. G. Brown vs. the Singer Manufacturing Company for $49,000. This sum is demanded by the plaintiff on a contract for work done in 1867, in filling in over twenty acres of land. The following named from this city constituted a portion of the jury: A. B. Dunlap, William Swaim and James Merritt.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Our Assessor commenced his duties the past week in levying the assessment for the coming year.

Joseph Moffett represents Westfield Township upon the Grand Jury now in session at Elizabeth, for the May term.

Both our real estate agents, Squire Jaques and Pearsall, have been very busy renting houses the past week. There are a very few dwellings now vacant.

Hiram Fisk has purchased the well-known horse "Mountain Boy," from Ben. H. Woodruff. He has been called the Fisk horse.

Miss Emma Johnson, one of the teachers in Public School District No. 10, has been quite sick for several weeks past, unable to attend to the duties of the school.

The Messrs. Welch Bros. of Broad St., although full of orders for painting, paper hanging, &c., are ready to contract for any work in their line at prices sure to be satisfactory, and they will engage extra hands if necessary to assure the prompt completion of the job.

On last Tuesday, the first day of the term of the Union County Courts, Samuel Gedshalk, the proprietor of the Westfield Hotel, was granted a license to keep an inn and tavern, as also was John L. Roulston to keep a saloon for the sale of malt liquors in our town. There was no opposition to the granting of their licenses. Both gentlemen try to keep their places in strict conformity with the license law, and are gentlemanly and accommodating to the traveling public.

Benjamin Osborn on Wednesday last sold another tract of two acres on top of Baldy Roll hill to James Morris, who proposes soon to erect a dwelling on the same, he having lately sold the tract he purchased of Mr. Osborn, on which he had commenced the erection of a dwelling house. There is no better view within twenty miles of New York than can be seen from Baldy Roll hill.

The Westfield Dramatic Club gave their Second Benefit performance on Wednesday evening, May 2d inst, in Lyceum Hall. Long before the hour for the performance to commence, all the reserved seats were sold—which included about all the seats. The programme consisted of a comedy in one act—"A Regular Fix," the Wooing of Wun Lung, a shadow pantomime, which was received with rapturous applause, and a Comedietta in one act—"I've Written to Brown". The various parts were well rendered by the different members of the Club. The Club propose to give one more benefit performance in the latter part of June proximo, in which will be produced "Poor Pillicoddy" and "David Garrick" with an exceptionally strong cast. Look out for the New Era.

The meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County on Tuesday next, closes the official term of our present Freeholder, Mr. Stephen S Mapes, who has represented our Township in the Board for the past two years. He has made a good and efficient Freeholder and has been much interested in the public good. He has given all parts of the Township his attention from the Summit road to Elizabeth avenue and Oakland near Cranford, Branch Mills on the East and the Rahway road on the West. He has the credit of securing and having built the first iron bridge in the Township near the residence of Henry J. Holmes, to replace an arch bridge washed away by the freshet last Fall. We understand he has secured an appropriation yet to be expended, of $400 for a new wood truss bridge, over stream near Theodore Folsom's, on the Township line between Westfield and Fanwood. During his term he has had built several good substantial stone culverts in the centre of our town, which will last for many years. His interest in the Public School, of which he has been a trustee ever since its erection, and was one of the commission to build the same; the establishment of the Westfield Fire Department, he being the first person to advance money for the purchase of the H. & L. Truck and Little Giant Chemical, which has done good service in the suppression of fires, and the ornamentation of his beautiful grounds surrounding his residence on Prospect street, are some of the evidences of his identity and interest he has in the welfare of our town. He had in contemplation the building of a stone culvert at the junction of Elm street and Broad, which is much needed, owing to the depression of the Broad street gutter [illegible] below the bed of road on Elm street. We hope our next Freeholder, Mr. James T. Pierson, will carry out the plan.

FROM THE SOUTH.
A PERFECT COMBINATION WITH TWO SALIENT ADVANTAGES—WHY IT CONCERNS YOU.
"There is no mistake about it," remarked Dr. M. F. Flower, of Gallatin, Missouri, "BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTERS are one of the neatest combinations ever produced. They have two kinds of advantages over all others, which we may call the major and the minor. First, they are clean and pleasant to use, never soiling the hands nor the linen of the wearer. Second, they act quickly and powerfully. I have tried the Capcine Plaster on myself for pneumonia, and on my patients for various diseases, such as Neuralgia, Muscular Rheumatism, Lumbago, Kidney trouble, etc., and in all cases relief has followed in from three to forty-eight hours." Dr. Flower rightly voices the written or oral opinion of thousands in his profession. BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTERS are the perfect external application. The genuine have the word CAPCINE cut in the centre. Price 25 cents. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York.

COUNCIL meeting next Monday evening.

RAIN, snow and disagreeable weather generally last Sunday.

HACKETTSTOWN is to have license, a vacancy in the Council having been filled by a license man.

THE pupils in the Junior class of the P. H. S., are already looking forward to the glory of a Commencement in the new Opera House.

EX-STREET Commissioner Wilson's imported Flamingo is dead. Two more of the same species are expected to be received by him shortly.

A SIXTEEN months daughter of George Foster died from pneumonia, at the residence of her parents West Front street, on Sunday morning last.

THE Elizabeth Journal says that John V. Berkaw, of Plainfield was married on the 24th to Miss Jennie Morris, of 1160 Washington street, that city.

THE seventeen-year locusts are to be heard from this year, one having already been dug up from the earth upon a property in Hunterdon county.

MR. John I. Holly, residing near this city, whose Jersey City cattle are known all over the country, has bought of W. F. Williams "Good Streams 19069."

EVERY man to treat himself. The Pennsylvania Senate has passed a bill to prohibit any person treating another to spirituous, malt or brewed liquors.

THE season for fishing approaches. Vanderbeek, on Park avenue, has a fine assortment of tackling of all kinds. "Van" knows what kind to use, too.

OUR thanks are tendered to James Bishop, Chief of Bureau of Statistics of Labor and Industries, for the 5th annual report of that institution, which is a valuable work.

AT the stables of John W. Morris at New Brunswick, can be found any kind of a horse at any price. The purchaser has only to select what he wants and the cost is sure to be satisfactory.

JAMES CONNEELY and John Rafferty were delegates from this city to the "United Ireland" Convention held in Philadelphia last week. They gave glowing accounts of its success upon their return.

MR. S. S. LANCASTER, of Seventh street, recently lost a valuable setter dog by poisoning. This makes the third animal of the kind destroyed by this method in the same vicinity within the past month.

THE Somerset Messenger has been enlarged and improved in appearance, and a new power press added to the establishment. We congratulate Bro. Mattinson upon the prosperity attending his assuming proprietorship of the Messenger.

MR. William Fisher, keeper of the Five Mile Lock, on the Delaware and Raritan Canal, below Bound Brook, lost his wife and two daughters by Pneumonia last week. He has the sympathy of a large circle of friends in his affliction.

MESSRS. Dunn Bros., the well-known News Agents of the Central Railroad have renewed their lease for the said road, and will still further increase their business the coming Summer. No more popular firm of news men exists than that of the Dunn Bros.

DURING the thunder shower which passed over this city on Friday evening last, the stable of Levi Hetfield, adjoining his coal yard, on Union street, was struck by lightning. No serious damage was done, although a valuable horse within the structure was partially stunned by the shock.

IT is with surprise that we observe how easily our local contemporaries have been beguiled into advertising a brass-mounted peripatetic, and that, too, at the expense of Mr. Adam Forepaugh who is paying these same papers liberally for that which they gratuitously accord the chap of facial area.

THE Alliance Music and Dramatic Association, of Elizabethport, gave an entainment at Van Deventer Hall during Thursday evening of last week. The cause to be benefited—St. Mary's church—and the attraction offered, brought out a "big house" and a large financial profit was the deserved result.

A LARGE invoice of new job type of the latest designs and styles just received at this office. With two new Gordon job presses recently added to our machinery department, we are now better than ever prepared to turn out fine work, our reputation in that line being already well established.

THE approach of Summer and consequent thunder showers should warn every property owner to see that his buildings are properly guarded against the electric fluid by lightning rods. Messrs. Hawley and Ten Eyck are now canvassing this section with a view of putting up durable rods at a fair compensation.

EIGHT boys presented themselves at the Court House, Belvidere, last Thursday afternoon, for examination as candidates for admission into the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, viz: John Ditton, Phillipsburg; W. C. Albertson, Vienna; C. S. Murphy, North Plainfield; U. L. Naylor, Lambertville; W. D. Tindal, Everittstown; J. J. Meehan, Somerville; C. L. Givens, Glenwood; J. E. Clayton, Deckertown. It is reported that Ditton's average was the highest.—Sussex Herald.

DURING the afternoon and evening of Thursday the 31st inst., in the parlors of the Crescent avenue church, the fifteen young ladies composing the L. L., of this city will hold a fair for the benefit of the Children's Home. This association of workers has unselfishly and earnestly devoted the past winter months to the securing, receiving and creating of useful and ornamental articles of all grades of value, which will make this Fair undoubtedly (as it deserves to be) the most successful ever given in Plainfield.

THE reprehensible habit indulged in by parties of scattering broadcast poisons of various kinds within the precincts of their grounds for the purpose of destroying domestic animals belonging to neighbors, which have annoyed them by crossing their premises, is to be deprecated for more than one reason. In the first place, the dumb brute should not be thus summarily dealt with because of his innocent rambles over private property and secondly it is unlawful for any person to thus scatter broadcast a deadly poison. We are led to these remarks in consequence of the sudden demise of several valuable dogs in this city recently, through the administration of poison scattered on grounds over which the animals were in the habit of passing.

ACCORDING to almanacs this is Spring—or at least a Spring month.

J. F. HOTCHKISS, of this city, has been awarded a patent for a boiler cleaner.

THE Crescent Base Ball nine will have a practice game on its old grounds, tomor*row afternoon.*

THE annual meeting of the Union & Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association, occurs on the grounds of the Association next Monday.

IT is said that the first broom corn ever planted in this country and the first broom made from its production, was at Cranford, Union county, this State.

ALL the doors in our Public schools are to be altered to open outward. The same rule should be followed in all public buildings and the private schools.

ONE of Forepaugh's advance agents gave a free stereopticon exhibition on Front street, Tuesday evening. It was worth five times the price of admission.

ON Monday evening, May 7th, there will be given at Mt. Bethel Hall, a Sixth Annual Ball, at which a good time is assured. Music will be furnished by John Van Arsdale.

GOVERNOR Ludlow has appointed Jas. S. Thompson, of Bound Brook, a Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Somerset County to fill vacancy caused by the death of Judge W. N. Onderdonk.

ENGINE No. 163, which has recently been re-modelled and furnished with a patent spark arrester, was run over the Central Railroad on Wednesday on a trial trip, carrying a long train of invited excursionists.

THE Committee appointed from the Common Council to "investigate the morals" of the inhabitants of the Poor Farm, was engaged in that fascinating occupation last Tuesday evening just before "the sun sank softly in the West."

MR. ISAAC MELBOURNE, of this city, having leased property on Somerset st., North Plainfield, beneath the mountains, has introduced valuable machinery for the manufacture of brick made from clay of good quality procured on the premises.

EFFORT is making to secure the appearance in this city of the Columbia College Glee Club in a miscellaneous concert. The New York press claims that this organization is not excelled by the more or less admired vocalists of other colleges.

THE remains of Mrs. Abrigal C. Rogers, (widow of Clark Rogers, dec'd.) who died at her son's residence near Jacksonville, Fla., last February, arrived in this city on Wednesdy last and will be interred in the Seventh Day Baptist Cemetery, today, undertaker Stiles officiating.

DURING the present month and the absence of Dr. Bliss, the pulpit of the Crescent avenue church will be occupied as follows next Sunday, Prof. Green of Princeton; the 13th, Rev. J. L. Hulburt; 20th, either Prof. Harris or Hodge of Princeton; 27th, Rev. J. H. Vincent.

TO-DAY and to-morrow Mr. Charles Zimmer, at his saloon No. 19 West Front St., offers his patrons the most delicious of bock-beer and the most tempting of bockwurst. He announces that he is bottling Ballantine's celebrated export beer for family use. Orders sent to P. O. Box 448, will be delivered at your residence.

MR. Joseph Sheldon of this city, while working on the Monroe avenue bridge at Rahway, Tuesday, was struck in the left side by the end of a guy rope which parted while under a strain. The victim was able to reach his home where his injuries, though severe, are being so cared for that his speedy recovery seems assured.

THE weather has been remarkably cool for the season of the year. In comparison with last year, it has averaged, during the day, nearly five degrees cooler. The fruit blossoms have been very backward and those who pretend to know say that it is fortunate they are, as they have not been injured, to any perceptible degree, by the cold.

WE had supposed the fallacy of such method of advertisement had become universally known, but this week the walking medium of a New York house has been strewing our city with a combination of pasteboard and colored inks that is already hidden from sight in the children's scrap-books or on the walls of servant-girl's bedrooms.

AN earnest attempt was made on Tuesday last to secure a light punishment for Joseph D. Lathrop, who pleaded guilty of stealing about $10,000 from the Central Railroad of New Jersey, but Judge Gildersleeve, in the Court of General Ses*sions of New York, thought clemency* in this case would be unjust to lesser criminals with smaller influence, and imposed a sentence of four years in State Prison.

A WRIT of certiorari has been served upon the authorities of Hightstown commanding that all the matters and things touching the licensing of Jacob Weidy, D. A. Lantz and John Donnell, and all resolutions, orders, notices and actions, &c., thereon be certified to the Supreme Court for review and adjudication. The writ was allowed by Justice Parker, and removes the matter out of the hands of the Common Council. A return will be made in due form.

ALL minor writs and levies being satisfied, the sale of the Oil Cloth works and contents upon a confessed judgment of $60,500 and costs, was begun by Sheriff Forsyth, Wednesday morning. The property attached was sold by the piece and purchased by R. V. Lindabury, Esq., for Mr. Jas. A. Skilton, the party holding the judgment, to "prevent any sacrifice" as was stated by the buyer. As we informed the public last week, the business is to be continued.

EVERY year there is the same talk about the backwardness of warm weather, and mortals continue to expect July in April. Many thought the slight flurry of snow Sunday morning was remarkable, whereas on May 6th, last year, throughout the Pennsylvania coal regions the snow was four inches deep, the weather very cold and an appearance of midwinter about everything. During the morning of May 12th, snow to the depth of six inches fell in Iowa.

THE Crescent Base Ball Association at its annual meeting of Tuesday evening, elected the following officers for the coming year: President, J. W. Murray; Vice President, H. A. Thorn; Treasurer, D. H. Mulford; Ass't Treasurer, L. S. Mulford; Secretary, E. R. Ackerman; Executive Committee—G. R. Cornwell, O. T. Roberts, J. W. Gavett, W. M. McGee and J. A. Demarest. The report of the Ass't Treasurer for the past year, showed cash on hand and dues over $100, and no outstanding liabilities.

THE Concert to be given this (Thursday) evening in the Park avenue Baptist Church, will undoubtedly be a most successful and enjoyable one. The program is to consist of a first part entirely composed of the choicest selections from that choicest of oratorios, Gounod's "Redemption," sung by seven ladies of the St. Cecilia Society of New York, and the Young Apollo Club. The second part will include glees, ballads, songs and choruses, calculated to please the hearers and best display the abilities of the vocalists.

VENNOR for first week in May—Tuesday, 1st, a cold May day; Wednesday, 2d, snow flurries in Northern and Western sections of country; Thursday and Friday, 3d and 4th, a chilly snap; Saturday and Sunday, 5th and 6th, warm and Summer-like, advanced weather for the season. May—altogether a favorable month. Outlook for season, good. Some of the storms are likely to be severe, with local damage to crops; but this is usually the case. The most unfavorable portion of the month will probably be between the 20th and 27th.

Where the Circus Will Be.

On the left hand side of Park avenue just beyond the Baptist church.

St. Mary's New Pastor.

There arrived by the steamer "Servia" from Europe, on Monday, the Rev. P. E. Smyth, who is to act as the pastor of St. Mary's parish of this city. He has been formerly stationed, unless we are mistaken, at Madison, at Orange and at Jersey City—leaving the latter charge in January last, when appointed to Plainfield. Being in poor health he had been granted a furlough and was starting for Europe when his last appointment was issued. He is said to be most kind and courteous but severely strict in the enforcement of the laws of the church, and an earnest worker.

Sudden Death of an Old Resident.

Last Saturday night about ten o'clock, as Messrs. Stillman Randolph and Chas. Soper were proceeding to their homes through the principal thoroughfare of New Brooklyn, Middlesex county, they stumbled over the body of a man lying along side the road. Procuring a lantern from a neighboring house they returned to the scene and found the dead body of one of the old residents of the village, Mr. Firman Runyon. Assistance was summoned and the remains carried to his home near by. It is supposed that Mr. Runyon, who was about 74 years of age, had been suddenly attacked with heart disease, while returning to his house from attendance at a religious meeting and dropped dead in the road only a short time previous to the discovery of his body as above described. Mr. Runyon was highly respected in the community wherein he lived, and was well-known to many of our citizens.

The Best of the Season.

To-morrow evening at Van Deventer Hall, will be given a musical and dramatic entertainment for the benefit of St. Joseph's R. C. church, of North Plainfield. The array of talent that has been brought together for the purpose far surpasses in combined ability any company that has ever before visited this city, and a varied programme will be rendered that cannot fail to please all. Miss Mamie R. Kunkle, the bright particular star of the occasion, although only seventeen years of age, is a musical composer and vocalist of remarkable capabilities. The other artists are Miss Agnes Proctor, late of the Robson & Crane, Jno. T. Raymond and "Black Flag" companies; Miss Libby Noxon from the St. Louis Theatres; Mr. Oliver W. Wren, of Daly's and other New York theatres; Mr. Willett Seaman, late of Barton's "Iolanthe" company; Mr. E. Murray Day, recently stage manager for Miss Ada Dyas; Mr. F. M. Kendrick of the George Knight combination; and the well-known "Haverly Quartette." Do not fail to secure your tickets at Miller's pharmacy in time to insure good seats before they are all taken.

Personalia.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Weigmann claim the youngest and finest boy in the city.

Mr. C. A. Rutter and family have returned from New York and will occupy their residence on Central avenue for the Summer.

The many friends of Mr. Samuel T. Varian are pleased to see him once more upon our streets after his severe attack of pneumonia.

Mr. James O'Neil who placed himself under the care of the Muhlenberg Hospital officers for treatment from pneumonia, is convalescing.

The many friends of Mr. Augustus Martin have wondered the past two weeks why he wore such a smiling countenance. The mystery is solved at last. It is a fine boy. We extend congratulations.

Mr. Edward Milliken of this city has succeeded his father in the iron and steel commission business at 95 Liberty street, New York; Mr. Milliken senior retiring from the firm of Milliken & Smith, last Tuesday.

Mr. Wm. Bloodgood, one of the proprietors of Bloodgood's Mills, between Westfield and Rahway, has leased a house of Mr. Isaac Melbourne, of this city, on 5th street, between 1st and 2nd Place, for the coming Summer. Mr. B. is gladly welcomed to Plainfield by his many friends residing here.

We extend congratulations to our fellow citizen and friend, Samuel Wilbur, upon his accession to a more lucrative position in business and sympathize with him in his sufferings consequent upon a sudden attack of disease resembling pneumonia. We are glad to learn of his speedy convalescence from sickness.

Mrs. Mary Hughes, widow of John McCormick and the venerable mother of Judge T. F. McCormick, died quite suddenly at her residence in Broad street, Elizabeth, Friday night last in the 69th year of her age. Mrs. McCormick had been ailing somewhat, but not so much as to indicate early dissolution.

The Seating Capacity of the Hall.

Although the subscribers to the Stillman Music Hall at the meeting of Monday evening, were favored with the particular and personal experience of some in relation to the size of Plainfield audiences, still not one was competent to speak understandingly of such audiences in a general way. If we are not mistaken, the Hall is to be available for a varied class of frequent entertainments, and what the audiences will be cannot be guaged by the number of people that attend the few concerts, lectures and readings given by the Y. M. C. A. during certain months of the year. These together with amusements arranged by our churches constitute almost the sum total of entertainments given in this city, and, in consequence, much larger audiences gather than would if amusements were more general. Still an attendance of 600 is unusual, and the average is about 400. Only one entertainment during the past year—that of the Royal Hand Bell Ringers—reached the higher figure given above, and even that combination appearing again, will not be favored with so many patrons.

The High School Commencement, to which no admission is charged, or a sermon by the Rev. J. H. Vincent, draws a larger house than can now be accommodated by any of our churches. Apart from occasions of this kind we can safely assert, a seating capacity of 800 would never be demanded, and we speak from our experience of years of attendance at every public entertainment that is given in this city. One speaker at the meeting of Monday evening, called attention to the necessity of affording accommodation to two classes—those who attend the higher order of entertainments and those who would patronize amusements offered the populace in general. Possibly 500 might be drawn to a recital by Thomas' Orchestra, but Plainfield does not contain more than that number who can appreciate or have even a taste for such a programme. As to "popular lectures at ten cents a ticket"—the class that could enjoy a lecture would stay away for fear of contact with those whom the low price might attract, and the latter have no taste for lectures at any cost.

A seating capacity of 800 is all that is desirable, and even that will, in nine cases out of ten, exceed the demand by one-quarter. But let a portion of this capacity be placed in a second gallery for the accommodation of the 15 and 25 cent admissions that would not be desired in the dress-circle or Balcony. One of the great objections to the Hall we now have is the proximity of the "gallery gods." They can only be kept in order if placed by themselves.

Steps Towards the Opera House.

Pursuant to a call issued upon the securing of the entire $40,000 proposed to be used in the erection of an Opera House in this city, a number of the subscribers met in the rooms of Jerusalem Lodge, F. A. M., last Monday evening and were called to order by Mason W. Tyler, Esq., who was subsequently chosen Chairman of the meeting. Mr. W. E. Lowe was selected as the Secretary and the call was read.

Corporation Counsel Marsh at the request of Mr. Gilbert, stated what steps were necessary and required by law to perfect the organization of the Association. He then offered for adoption a resolution to the effect that the Chair appoint ten of the subscribers to the fund to secure the permanent incorporation of the organization by the filing of the required certificate and the taking of such other action as was provided for by the law.

Mr. Gilbert moved to amend by the substitution of a provision that the meeting—not the Chair—select the ten incorporators.

Mr. James McGee thought that the meeting should first elect a temporary Treasurer and decide what percentage of the subscription should be paid in at once, before proceeding any further.

Mr. Joseph Yates suggested that a call of the roll be first had, in order to see how many subscribers were present and who they were. The resolution and its amendment were then laid on the table, and on motion of Mr. Samuel Milliken the subscription list was read. The roll call showed that 44 out of the entire 88 subscribers were present—representing subscriptions to the amount of $19,950.

On motion of Mr. Yates amended by Mr. Gilbert, each subscriber was allowed one vote for each $50 of stock taken, in balloting for the ten incorporators.

Mr. McGee moved that Mr. Gilbert be appointed temporary Treasurer and that twenty per cent of the subscriptions be paid in before proceeding to take any steps toward organization.

Mr. J. W. Murray held that the making of any assessment at that time was entirely unnecessary and would only delay the forwarding of the project. The certificate, he thought, should be filed at once and the organization so perfected that building might commence before the best months for such purpose were passed.

Mr. Milliken agreed with the last speaker, and thought any attempt at that time to test the reliability of the subscribers, was premature.

Mr. J. B. Dumont called the attention of the meeting to the following clause in the agreement signed by the subscribers, which provides that they shall "pay the sums set opposite to their names respectively in instalments as called for by the constituted officers of the Association."

The Chair ruled that according to such contract the present meeting had not the power to call for any assessment, and the motion of Mr. McGee was withdrawn.

The motion providing for the selection of incorporators was then taken from the table, and after the defeat of an amendment by Mr. Lowe to the effect that all the subscribers become incorporators, an amendment by Mr. Dumont was adopted providing that the incorporators selected be instructed to call a meeting of the subscribers for the purpose of electing directors and officers from the signers so soon as the certificate of incorporation shall be issued; and if necessary such instruction shall be inserted in the certificate.

Mr. Yates moved that the incorporators selected be the Directors of the Association for the first year.

Mr. Gilbert thought it was not competent to elect the Directors of an Association before its organization was effected, and the motion was lost.

The original resolution of Mr. Marsh as amended by Messrs Gilbert and Dumont, was then adopted, and on motion nominations were made for the ten signers of the certificate of incorporation.

The following were nominated: Messrs G. A. Chapman, W. R. Potts, A. Berry, G. Opdyke, A. Gilbert, A. C. Baldwin, O. T. Waring, L. W. Rushmore, W. H. Voorhees, M. W. Tyler, C. A. Marsh, J. W. Murray, B. A. Hegeman, H. R. Munger, L. N. Lovell, J. B. Dumont, and C. Tweedy.

During the balloting Mr. Chapman gave a brief outline of what was intended in the way of building, and other information as contained in THE CONSTITUTIONALIST of March 2d.

Messrs. B. O. Bowers, Wm. Thompson and J. Frank Hubbard were chosen tellers, and the ballots were endorsed on the back with the name of the subscriber voting and the number of votes he was entitled to on a basis of one vote for each $50 subscribed.

On motion it was decided that the organization be entitled the Music Hall Association of Plainfield and that $50 be the par value of each share of stock. Also that the amount to be inserted in the articles of incorporation as to be paid in before commencing erection be $10,000; that the time to begin be left to the judgment of the incorporators, and that the time of the existence of the Association be 50 years.

Mr. Milliken strongly urged the need of making the building completely fireproof. It would only involve the use of materials in the floor and roof that would cost but little extra.

Mr. Potts advised that the seating capacity be not too large. He thought 800 sufficient.

Mr. Gilbert thought entirely different. He stated that the city had several churches with a larger seating capacity than 800, and during his many years experience as a member of an entertainment committee he had seen numbers turned away from the First Baptist Church which would hold 1,000.

Mr. Chapman was of the same impression and advised a hall that would seat about 1,200. It should, in his opinion, be made available for the demands of two classes of entertainment—such as Thomas' Orchestra and low price lectures for the good of the populace, both of which would require a large hall. He thought it could be built in a way to allow the shutting off of a portion of the auditorium.

Mr. Yates also advised a large hall, and moved that a proviso be inserted in the articles of incorporation to the effect that the capital of the Association may be increased to $60,000 at any time by a two-thirds vote of the stock-holders.

Mr. W. Howland in answer to the proposed arrangement for shutting off a part of the hall, stated that the only building in Plainfield—the Park avenue Baptist church—that can be so divided, was the very worst regarding acoustic properties in the city. He understood that all architects agreed as to the impossibility of erecting a building in such a manner, with proper acoustic qualities.

Mr. Marsh in speaking to the motion of Mr. Yates, stated that the signers had subscribed on a basis of $40,000 as the capital stock, and if articles of incorporation were secured providing for a larger capital, he did not think the subscribers could be held for the amounts of their subscriptions. The law, however, provided that the shareholders at any meeting after the incorporation could by a two-thirds vote increase the stock as might be desired. Mr. Yates thereupon withdrew his motion.

On motion of Mr. Murray, the officers of the meeting were authorized to confer with the trustees of the Lodge and secure the room they occupied for future meetings.

Mr. Gilbert called for an expression of opinion regarding the size of the hall, from those who had experienced the extent of Plainfield audiences.

Mr. Jackson stated that he had seen all the churches of the city crowded to their utmost capacity and people turned away even when the admission price was $1.00. He thought the stockholders should not be selfish and care more for their dividends than the convenience of the people. Even if a large house was demanded but twice a year, it should be available.

Mr. Munger believed that they should not build alone for entertainments that would pay the Association largely, but for such purposes as School Commencements. That was one instance of the many that would arise. He stated that the Y. M. C. A., could have given a more popular class of Entertainments had a building large enough to accommodate the audiences been available. At one of its entertainments this year many had stood up and others been turned away. He considered a building pretty full, even if at times its seating capacity was only four-fifths occupied.

Mr. Baldwin stated that Mr. E. L. Roberts the architect, who had built 39 churches and had in consequence great experience, had told him an interior could be built to accommodate 1100 that could be reduced so as to seat only 700 without destroying its beauty or its acoustic properties.

The tellers having finished counting the ballots announced the following as the ten receiving the highest number of votes:

W. R. Potts, 348; A. Gilbert, 324; G. A. Chapman, 302; J. B. Dumont, 271; M. W. Tyler, 264; C. A. Marsh, 249; O. T. Waring, 241; C. Tweedy, 196; A. Berry, 171; B. A. Hegeman, 156.

The meeting then adjourned subject to the call of the Chair, or the incorporators.

ALL BROKE UP.

FOOLING WITH AN OLD PACER AND NEARLY WRECKING THE BAD BOY.

"Well, what's the matter with you, now?" said the grocery man to the bad boy, as he came into the grocery on crutches, with one arm in a sling, one eye blackened, and a strip of court plaster across one side of his face. "Where was the explosion, or have you been in a fight?"

"Oh, there's not much the matter with me," said the boy, in a voice that sounded all broke up, as he took a big apple off a basket, and began peeling it with his upper front teeth. "If you think I am a wreck you ought to see the minister. They had to carry him home in installments, the way they buy sewing machines. I am all right, but they have got to stop him up with oakum and tar before he will ever hold water again."

"Good gracious, you have not had a fight with the minister, have you? Well, I have said all the time, and I stick to it, that you would commit a crime yet, and go to State Prison. What was the fuss about?" and the grocery man laid the hatchet out of the boy's reach for fear he would get excited and kill him.

"Oh, it was no fuss. It was in the way of business. You see the livery man that I was working for promoted me. He let me drive a horse to haul sawdust for bedding, first, and when he found I was real careful he let me drive an express wagon to haul trunks. Day before yesterday there was a funeral, and our stable furnished the outfit. It was only a common eleven dollar funeral, so they let me go to drive the horse for the minister—you know, the buggy that goes ahead of the hearse. They gave me an old horse that is thirty years old, that has not been off of a walk since nine years ago, and they told me to give him a loose rein, and he would go along all right. It's the same old horse that used to pace so fast on the avenue years ago, but I didn't know it. Well, I wan't to blame. I just let him walk along as though he was hauling sawdust, and gave him a loose rein. When we got off of the pavement the fellow that drives the hearse, he was in a hurry, 'cause his folks was going to have ducks for dinner, and he wanted to get back, so he kept driving alongside of my buggy, and telling me to hurry up. I wouldn't do it, 'cause the livery man told me to walk the horse. Then the minister, he got nervous, and said he didn't know as there was any use of going so slow, because he wanted to get back in time to get his lunch and go to a ministers' meeting in the afternoon, but I told him we would all get to the cemetery soon enough if we took it cool, and as for me I wasn't in no sweat. Then one of the drivers that was driving the mourners, he came up and said he had to get back in time to run a wedding down to the one o'clock train, and for me to pull out a little. I have seen enough of disobeying orders, and I told him a funeral in the hand was worth two weddings in the bush, and as far as I was concerned, the funeral was going to be conducted in a decorous manner, if we didn't get back till the next day. Well, the minister said in his regular Sunday school way, 'My little man, let me take hold of the lines,' and like a darn fool I gave them to him. He slapped the old horse on [illegible] jerked up, and the old horse stuck up his off ear, and then the hearse driver told the minister to pull hard and saw on the bit a little and the old horse would wake up. The hearse driver used to drive the old pacer on the track, and he knew what he wanted. The minister took off his black kid gloves and put his umbrella down between us and pulled his hat down over his head and began to saw and pull on the bit. The old cripple began to move along sort of sideways, like a hog going to war, and the minister pulled some more, and the hearse driver, who was right behind, he said so you could hear him clear to Waukesha, 'Yee-up,' and the old horse kept going faster, then the minister thought the procession was getting too quick, and he pulled harder and yelled, 'who-a' and that made the old horse worse, and I looked through the little window in the buggy top behind, and the hearse was about two blocks behind and the driver was laughing and the minister he got pale and said, 'My little man, I guess you better drive,' and I said, 'Not much, Mary Ann; you wouldn't let me run this funeral the way I wanted to, and now you can boss it, if you will let me get out,' but there was a street car ahead and all of a sudden there was an earthquake, and when I came to there were about six hundred people pouring water down my neck, and the hearse was hitched to the fence, and the hearse driver was asking if my leg was broke, and a policeman was fanning the minister with a plug hat that looked as though it had been struck by a pile driver, and some people were hauling our buggy into the gutter, and some men were trying to take the old pacer out of the windows of the street car, and then I guess I fainted away agin. Oh, it was worse than telescoping a train loaded with cattle."

"Well, I swan," said the grocery man as he put some eggs in a funnel-shaped brown paper for a servant girl. "What did the minister say when he come to?"

"Say! What could he say? He just yelled 'whoa,' and kept sawing with his hands, as though he was driving. I heard that the policeman was going to pull him for fast driving till he found it was an accident. They told me when they carried me home in a hack, that it was a wonder everybody was not killed, and when I got home pa was going to sass me, until the hearse driver told him it was the minister that was to blame. I want to find out if they got the minister's umbrella back. The last I see of it the umbrella was running up his trousers leg, and the point come out by the small of his back. But I am all right, and shall go to work to-morrow, 'cause the livery man says I was the only one in the crowd that had any sense. I understand the minister is going to take a vacation on account of his liver and nervous prostration. I would if I was him. I never saw a man that had nervous prostration any more than he did when they fished him out of the barbed wire fence, after we struck the street car. But that settles the minister business with me. I don't drive for no more preachers. What I want is a quiet party that wants to go on a walk," and the boy got up and hopped on one foot towards his crutches, filling his pistol pocket with figs as he hobbled along.—Peck's Sun.

Now is the time to recall the old rule: "Stick to your flannels until they stick to you."

TOO HONEST TO BE TRUSTED.

A gentleman stopped his horse at a toll-gate, and not seeing the gatekeeper went into the house. Finding no one he began to search, and finally discovered the gatekeeper out in the field at work. Although the old man was quite a distance away, the gentleman went into the field, approached the old man and said:

"You are the toll-gate keeper, I believe?"

"Yes, sir," the old man replied, turning and leaning upon his handle.

"Well, I want to go through the gate."

"Ain't the gate open?"

"Yes."

"Well, why don't you go through? It's my business to be there."

"Because I want to pay you."

"And you came all the way out here to pay me five cents?"

"Yes, sir," said the gentleman, proudly looking the old man in the eye.

"Couldn't you have left the money on the table?"

"Yes, but I wanted you to know that I paid you."

"You are an honest man."

"Yes, sir," replied the gentleman, while a pleased expression spread over his face.

"You would have walked three times as far to have paid me that five cents, wouldn't you?"

"Yes, sir, I would."

"Here, John," the old man called to a boy that lay in the shade, "call the dog and go along and watch this feller till he gets away. Bet a hundred dollars he steals something 'fore he leaves the place."—Arkansaw Trave'er.

HIS RICH JOKE.

The other day, a baggage wagon brought a trunk to the Union Depot which was labeled:

"Dynamite within—smash if you dare!"

The trunk was closely followed by a young man who had about seven minutes to get his check and catch the train. When he presented his ticket and asked for a check the baggage-master replied:

"This trunk can't go as baggage."

"Why?"

"The contents are dangerous. You'll have to remove it from here at once or I'll make you trouble."

"But there is no dynamite within."

"There is the warning."

"Yes, but that was for a joke on the baggage smashers."

"Young man, a railroad never jokes. Get that trunk out of here."

"Come, old fellow, it was only in fun," entreated the smart Aleck. "I have only four minutes to catch the train."

"If you do not remove the dangerous trunk I shall have to call an officer," was the firm reply.

"I tell you it is not dangerous."

"Let me inspect it."

This was grudgingly acceded to, and nothing more dangerous than four shirts, which sadly needed washing, were discovered. By this time the train had departed, leaving the joker with eight hours on his hands, and as the trunk was relocked he was handed a scraper and the advice:

"Young man, it might be safer for you to label yourself with something like: 'Perishable—no delay.' You are evidently too ripe for this section. Now scrape that sign off, or the trunk can't go."—Detroit Free Press.

SATISFIED CURIOSITY.

It was a quiet-looking little man with a frayed mustache who got on a Cass avenue car the other night, and he had a square wooden box under his arm with rows of holes punched in the top, which immediately attracted the attention of a corpulent passenger with a cotton umbrella, who was sitting near the door.

'I suppose you have some wild animal in that box,' said he, tapping it with his umbrella.

'Yes,' replied the other, shrinking into a corner.

'You have a museum somewhere, maybe?'

'No, answered the small man, looking down at his feet.

'Well, might I ask you what you have in that box?' questioned the fat man, his curiosity increasing.

'Certainly,' murmured the man with the box, looking like the chief mourner at a funeral. There was a dead silence for several minutes, when the corpulent man spoke up somewhat impatiently:

'Well, what is it?'

'It is a mongoose.'

'What is that?'

'It is an animal that exterminates snakes,' said the man.

'And what do you propose to do with it?'

'I don't propose to do anything with it,' answered the man nervously. 'It is for a friend of mine who has the delirium tremens, and wants something to kill the snakes he sees.'

'But they aren't real snakes,' exclaimed the fat man.

'No, that's true, but then this is not a real mongoose.'

And he evaporated out of the door.

The Arab horse is not broken until his fourth year. That's where they differ from teacups.

A man walking carelessly along the sidewalk, fell down a coal-hole; he was picked up coaled.

"Yes," said the landlord, pointing to his block of new houses, "they're all full, 'cept the one at the end; that's last, but not leased."

Jones asked his wife: "Why is a husband like dough?" He expected she would give it up, and was going to tell her it was because a woman needs him; but she said it was because he was hard to get off her hands.

"Did that lady take umbrage?" said the proprietor of a Harlem store to his clerk who had just had a wordy dispute with a customer. "Oh, no. She took ten yards of turkey red calico, and wanted buttons to match."

Railroad engines are now provided with a hose and pump to throw water on burning cars, but when a train has jumped the track the engineer is too busy digging himself out of the debris to think of experimenting with the apparatus.

Nothing is more generally useful on a farm than a sweep or tread horse power. It can with proper machinery be applied to many purposes, sawing wood, cutting feed in winter, and grinding grain for stock. A good horse power will thus save each year many times the interest on its cost, and with proper care will last many years. A small steam engine will answer the same purpose, but most farmers have horses that must be fed whether worked or not.

IN THE WRONG PLACE.

A stranger entered the office of an ocean steamer agent on Griswold street the other day, and asked:

'Can a man come from Ireland by your line?'

'He can, sir.'

'Will you bring over my oldest brother?'

'We will that.'

'For how much?'

'In first-rate shape for $30.'

'I think I'll pay the money,' said the stranger, but, as he was pulling out his wallet, the agent asked:

'In what part of Ireland is your brother?'

'In the Dublin jail, sir, as a suspect. If he was out he would be plenty able to take care of himself, he would.'

'But we can't get him out of jail, you know.'

'Neither can I, you know, though I've written seven letters to the jailer to do a decent deed, and let Barney go.'

HOW TO MAKE HOME HAPPY.

If the soup is a little hot blow in your plate, especially if you have company; it will make your wife so proud of you.

When you come home for dinner sling your hat into the back parlor and give an Indian war whoop, just to stir up the cook.

If the dog comes to welcome you kick him down stairs with one foot and tread on the cat's tail with the other; it will give your wife a cold chill, and remind her that you are still the master of the house.

Growl because the roast is overdone or underdone, or is too fresh, or too salt, or too something or other. It is about the only way in which you can impress upon your family a proper sense of your awful dignity.

Never mind washing your hands, comb your hair with your fingers, dash into the dining-room and throw one leg across the corner of the table. There is nothing like a graceful position to impress one with your superiority.

If your wife and children, or any of them, ask you to take them out for a walk in the evening, snarl back that you are tired to death, and they ought to have some regard for your feelings. As soon as they are gone glide off to the pool room, and play billiards until midnight. When you get home say that you have been sitting up with a sick friend.

FARM AND GARDEN NOTES.

Never breed from scrub animals.

Don't neglect the vegetable garden.

Are your fences and gates in order?

The best stock is the most profitable.

Poor tools and bad seed are no good.

It does not take a great deal of slovenly management on an ordinary sized farm to waste $1,000 a year.

Sweet butter cannot be made from cream under which whey and thick sour milk have formed. The moment whey forms it has passed the point of perfection.

Curry horses frequently in Spring to aid in removing their old coat. A small quantity of oil meal added to their feed will also greatly assist in its removal. Discontinue this when the working season begins.

A lamb saved now may be worth dollars next Fall. What is called 'bad-luck' in raising lambs is sometimes bad management, or no management at all. If the sheep are healthy, nearly every one well-formed should be raised, and nothing pays the owner better than close, personal attention to them.

A writer says that he has never failed to cure garget by the use of beans. He feeds one pint of bean meal, mixed with other meal, for four successive days, and has found that quantity sufficient to cure the worse cases. He thinks if cows were fed with bean meal several times a year, they would never be troubled with garget.

A French chemist claims to have discovered a method of overcoming the danger threatening vineyards from the ravages of the phylloxera. His process is to inoculate the vines with the phenol poison. The phylloxera do not attack plants thus treated, and are extirpated for want of food. The vines are in no way injured by the inoculated process.

It is no rare thing for those having cows to sell to allow them to go unmilked for a time before selling, in order to impress the buyer with a well filled udder. This is both rascally and cruel. Although we have never heard of the law in this country interfering in such matters, in England recently a cow dealer was fined $20 and cost for an offense of this kind.

Any cause that interferes with the condition of the cow after calving may produce milk fever. Exposure, too much exercise or nervous excitement, are sufficient to bring on an attack, and a recovery is rare. It is the "ounce of prevention" in this case, as in many others, that is worth the pound of cure. Keep the animal quiet for a week before and after calving, and nurse her well.

Corn which is hilled will blow down more readily than that which has level culture. This can be accounted for by the fact that corn roots run very near the surface, and when hills are made they are confined to a small space covered by the hill, while in level culture the roots run from one row to another, thus enabling the corn to stand strong, as nature intended, and in no way liable to be blown down except by winds of unusual violence.

When farmers learn from experience that by housing their manure and thoroughly working it over, mixing with absorbents such as muck, earth, road dust, leaves, etc., to take up the liquid and ammonia set free, its value is double what it now is, and, too, at an expense much less than the same amount of plant food could be obtained in an artificial fertilizer, a new era will have been reached in agriculture, and we shall see the fertility of the old farms brought back to where they were fifty years ago.

The water which can be gathered from the roofs of barns and sheds needed to shelter stock will, if carefully saved, be sufficient for the stock through the year. To accomplish this the cistern should be a large one to hold the surplus of a wet season till a time of scarcity. With a basement barn the cistern should be in the corner where the bank of earth against the wall is deepest, to prevent freezing. Then with a faucet in the lower part of the cistern a continuous small stream can be kept running, adapting the flow to the number of animals, so that the tub shall never be empty and never or very seldom run over. This plan is a great convenience in winter and more than repays the expense by saving manure, besides the greater thrift of the stock.

THE BLARNEY-STONE.

The expression, 'He has kissed the Blarney-stone,' is applied frequently to a flatterer with a smooth tongue and ready speech. This famous stone is in the parapet of the large square tower of Castle Blarney, in Munster, Ireland. When visitors ask for the identical stone, the guide points to a stone several feet below the one usually saluted. The latter may be kissed without effort, but if a man wishes to kiss the real 'Blarney,' he must get some strong person to hold him by the heels over the wall.

HIS THANKS.

Old Fairsee came down to the office the morning after a committee of his employees had made him a surprise visit and presented him with an elegant and valuable clock. His face was sicklied over with a pale cast of thought, which was noticed by the clerk. The latter asked the old man what was the matter. It is just this, answered the capitalist, after a long pause. That clock could not have cost less than $100. It was an extravagant piece of business and must not be allowed to occur again. You may give notice of a ten per cent. reduction in wages, to commence with the first of the month.

A WAY THEY HAVE.

Two ladies who were bound somewhere in company a few days ago entered a Woodward avenue car together, and no sooner were they seated than both made a dive for their purses.

"Oh, let me pay!" pleaded one.

"Oh, I couldn't think of it!"

"Oh, do, now; I have just the change."

"Oh, but I have tickets."

"Yes, but you paid the last time."

"But you can pay some other time. Here—"

She was hurriedly searching through her portmonnaie, but didn't seem to find anything.

"I told you I had—"

And the second one began a search in a wild manner, emptying out pins, needles and buttons, but no money.

"Why, I do declare!" gasped the first.

"Strangest thing I ever saw!" added the second.

"I'll pay for both," observed a man on the seat opposite, and he marched up, fumbled through his pockets and held out a battered quarter to the driver. The latter would not take it, and the man marched out and slid off the platform in the most solemn manner, and at the next crossing the ladies said they had taken the wrong car, rang the bell, and got off.

Literary Note.

The North American Review for May contains nine articles, nearly every one of which discusses some topic or problem at the present moment prominent in the public mind. Senator John T. Morgan writes of "Mexico", and sets forth the considerations of commercial advantage and international comity which are rapidly bringing about a more cordial understanding between that country and the United States. The Rev. William Kirkus, taking occasion from Bishop McQuaid's recent vaticinations regarding the decay of Protestantism, makes a vigorous counter charge upon the papal system in an article entitled "The Disintegration of Romanism." In "Emerson and Carlyle," Edwin P. Whipple discourses with all his old-time keenness of psychological insight and perfection of literary form upon the strangely diverse mental and moral characteristics of those two great thinkers. Prof. Felix Adler offers "A Secular View of moral training," arguing that the current skeptical habit of thought demands an independent system of practical ethics, based primarily on observation rather than on revelation. "Communism in America," by Prof. Alexander Winchell, gives very forcible expression to the apprehensions of those pessimistic observers of the trend of events in this country who think they see in our political and social developement all the signs of impending national decay. The other articles are "Affinities of Buddhism and Christianity," by the Rev. Dr. James Freeman Clarke; "Woman as an Inventor," by Matilda Joslyn Gage; "College Endowments," by Rossiter Johnson; and "Extradition", by A. Sedgwick. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, N. Y., and for sale by booksellers generally.

NEUTRALIZED!

In what way a prevalent evil may be shorn of its power to harm.

Malaria is a broad name for many diseases—all originating in blood poisoning. Bilious fever, the typhus and typhoid fevers and chills and fever are prominent members of the family. Malaria defied alike the builders, the plumbers and the physicians. Despairing of ordinary treatment the latter almost unanimously recommend BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER as the greatest anti-malarial specific of the age. These plasters act upon the liver, spleen, bowels and kidneys. Worn over the region of the liver, and upon the back over the kidneys, they ward off malaria like a charm. No other plasters do this. When you purchase, satisfy yourself that the word CAPCINE is cut in the center of the plaster. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, N. Y. Highest awards at International Expositions. ap-6-y-1

Dated January 2, 1883. ap13-5w

SHERIFF'S SALE.—In Chancery of New Jersey—Between Charles S. Baylis, complainant, and Charles Zimmer, et ux. et al., defendants. Fi. fa. for sale of mortgaged premises.

By virtue of the above stated writ of fieri facias to me directed, I shall expose for sale by public vendue, at the Court House, in the City of Elizabeth, N. J., on

WEDNESDAY, THE TWENTY-THIRD DAY OF MAY, A. D. 1883,

At two o'clock p. m. of said day, all that tract or parcel of land and premises hereinafter particularly described, situate, lying and being in the city of Plainfield, in the County of Union, and State of New Jersey.

Beginning at a point on the established side line of Front street, and in line of lot now owned by William H. Voorhees and in line of the party wall in the brick building as it now stands, erected by William H. Voorhees, which said party wall is the division line between said Voorhees and the heirs of the Williamson estate; thence south forty-six degrees and fifteen minutes east, along the centre line of said party wall and in continuation thereof eighty-six and one tenth (86.1 ft.) feet to a point in line of lands formerly owned by J. D. Titsworth, now said Voorhees' corner; thence north forty-four degrees and thirty-eight minutes east along said Voorhees' line three and three tenths (3.3 ft.) to another corner of said Voorhees' land, thence south forty-six degrees and twenty-one minutes east, seventy-seven and six-tenths (77.6 ft.) feet, and still along said Voorhees' and other line to a post, being a corner of the Congregational church lot and of Wooden Brothers' lot; thence north forty-one degrees and forty-nine minutes east, twenty-one and twenty-five one hundredths (21.25 ft.) feet along said Wooden Brothers' land, to a point and corner of lot now owned by Adam Fritz (formerly J. S. Garretson); thence in a northwesterly direction and following line of land of said Fritz, one hundred and sixty-three and eight-tenths (163.8 ft.) feet to a point in the established side line of Front street aforesaid; thence along said side of Front street south forty-six degrees and fifteen minutes west thirty (30 ft.) feet to a point and place of beginning, excepting and reserving, nevertheless, a strip of land ten feet in width heretofore conveyed by said Zimmer and wife to Adam Fritz, from the rear of the above described premises, by deed dated September 3, 1878, which said strip is to be used as a driftway by said Zimmer and wife and Fritz and their heirs and assigns forever, in connection with a driftway of ten feet in width over land of said Fritz (formerly Wenning), extending from the premises above described to Exchange Alley; the right to use which, said last named driftway, having been conveyed to said Zimmer and wife by deed of said Fritz and wife, dated September 3, 1878 and granting also the right to use said driftway its entire length, from premises of said Fritz (formerly Garretson) to Exchange Alley, as fully as the same was reserved and granted, respectively, in the deeds to and from said Fritz, above mentioned.

POETRY.

TRUST.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

A picture memory brings to me;
I look across the years and see
Myself beside my mother's knee.

I feel her gentle hand restrain
My selfish moods, and know again
A child's blind sense of wrong and pain.

But wiser now, a man gray grown,
My childhood's needs are better known,
My mother's chastening love I own.

Gray grown, but in our Father's sight
A child still groping for the light
To read His works and ways aright.

I bow myself beneath His hand;
That pain itself for good was planned
I trust, but cannot understand.

I fondly dream it needs must be
That, as my mother dealt with me,
So with His children dealeth He.

I wait, and trust the end will prove
That here, and there, below, above,
The chastening heals, the pain is love!

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

"ONLY A FARMER."

'I don't like the country, and I never would have come here but for the chance of becoming Mrs. Allen Waters—that's the truth."

Her mother looked up amused at the frankness of her youngest daughter, and as for the oldest daughter, Dora, she sank back in her seat with a pained blush in her dark cheek.

'I am sure, Ada, you need not complain. You have a far easier living at the Hollyhocks than either mother or I,' she said.

'Why everything need be so hateful, I don't see,' grumbled Miss Ada, frowning under her flaxen curls. 'If father hadn't died now, he might have run along for years, until Dora and I were suitably married, and kept up appearances so we could have made good matches. Now everybody knows we are poor.'

'And everybody knows we are honest,' cried Dora, who still trembled at the mention of her dead father. 'We settled everything as honorably as possible, and came here to live, glad of Uncle Alfred's offer—at least I was.'

'And I am sure I was, my dear,' said Mrs. Atherton, with a sigh. 'I am thankful to have a roof over my head in my old age.'

'Uncle Alfred was absorbed in floriculture, and made a pet of the place for years. It is lovely here, I think,' said Dora, leaning to look out into the bright summer garden.

'I don't care for flowers,' returned Ada, moodily. 'I can't make myself happy with hoes and watering pots. I think it ought to be better than this, with the Water's place opposite. But Allen Waters is away and the gates are shut against us. In fact, there is nobody here.'

'You calculate a great deal on the society of a man you don't know in the least, Ada,' said Dora, returning to her sewing.

'I'm not in the least bit like you, Dora, with your notions of congeniality and similar tastes,' burst forth Ada. 'I've a taste for comfort and luxury, and I could love any man who could give them to me. Besides,' somewhat moderating her violence, as her mother looked annoyed at her extreme statement, 'you know we have always heard what a fine fellow Allen Waters was.' "

Dora said no more. Her bright, dark face burned with indignation. She was ashamed of Ada, grieved, yet secretly tried to make some excuse for her sister.

Day by day, Ada continued her complaints of the Hollyhocks. She was miserable herself, and she certainly made everybody else so. While Dora was as busy as a bee, Ada moped herself almost sick.

The little phaeton which Dora had driven in as a child was left to the family, and at her mother's suggestion, Dora hired a mild, fat Dobbin of a neighboring farmer one day and invited Ada to a drive.

'There's lovely scenery along the valley road. It will make a little change for you, Ada. Besides, I've a bit of news to liven you up.'

Ada turned languidly.

"Allen Waters is coming home," said Dora with a faintly mischievous smile.

After a moment's thought, Ada rose, arrayed herself in her prettiest driving costume, and entered the carriage.

"Drive past the Waters' estate, Dora. What a fat, lazy horse! There is no fun in driving if you can't drive in style. There, now see the Waters' place. It's all I expected it to be. There'd be some comfort in living if one could be mistress there. It's no better marriage than I ought to have made if papa had not failed."

And, with discontented lips and an arrogant toss of the head, Ada was driven past a wagon in which was a man in his shirt sleeves.

He glanced at the young ladies with frank curiosity.

'Did you bow, Dora? Impudent fellow! How he stared! Country folk!' sneered Ada.

'I bowed because he bowed to us, Ada. You would not have me repel such a mere civility. He is probably some one who knows us, though we are strangers here.'

'I detest such people.'

'I don't think I could detest any one who wore such white shirt sleeves, and looked so comfortable under a broad straw hat this hot day,' laughed Dora, carelessly.

But the very next moment Ada was thankful for the existence of 'such people,' for the phaeton broke down, and, with a dismal scream, she was tipped from her seat and landed among the roadside buttercups and clover.

The mild, fat, old horse instantly stopped. Dora looked anxiously about her for help. No house was near. She looked appealingly up and down the quiet road; then—oh, gladly!—she saw the hay wagon, the straw hat, and the white shirt sleeves drawing near.

'You have broken down,' said the owner hastily jumping down.

'Thank you, yes. The carriage seems coming all to pieces,' said Dora trembling with fright. 'Could you do anything to help? I should be, oh, so much obliged to you.'

'Yes,' said Ada, shaking the dust off her silk skirts. 'We are the Misses Atherton; we'll pay you of course.'

The man bent to look at the axletree. His face was turned toward Dora, and she saw him smile.

'It's not so very bad, then?' she said, anxiously.

'It might be fixed, I think, so you could get home safely; but I haven't much time, in fact I am in a hurry.'

'What is your time worth to you?' asked Ada, with the air she once heard a millionaire use in speaking to some workman he was about to employ.

'Sometimes more and sometimes less,' he replied, with the same quizzical smile.

But he had procured a cord from his pocket, and with deft fingers, began mending the broken trace. Then he produced some nails, and with a stone pounded away vigorously beneath the carriage.

'There. By driving carefully you will be able to reach home safely,' he said at last, rising.

There was something in his composed manner and distinct enunciation which made Ada stare for an instant; but she could see little beneath the broad straw hat, but a curly black beard, a tanned cheek, and two piercing eyes.

'What is to pay?'

'Nothing.'

He offered a hand to help Dora into the carriage.

She seated herself and drew out a little embroidered portemonnaie.

'I beg your pardon,' she said earnestly, 'but you must let me pay you. You said you was in a hurry, we have taken your time, and you have done us great service. I have nothing but a half sovereign. Pray take it. I am sorry it is so little,' blushing as she tendered him a shining coin.

Again the quizzical smile and the eyes—they had a world of meaning in them, those piercing dark eyes under the hat brim. Dora felt her heart beat strangely.

It relieved her greatly that the man extended his hand and received the money.

'Thank you,' he said quietly.

'What may your name be?' asked Ada, who had seated herself unassisted, 'and your occupation? You are quite handy,' patronizingly.

The man laughed outright, a low, mellow laugh.

'My name does not matter, I am a farmer. Good day, ladies.'

He stepped back, lifting his hat, smiling at the look of consternation upon the features of the girls at the grace and the face the movement revealed.

A kingly brow, shaded by close clipped yet beautiful hair, a white forehead, eyes dauntlessly bright, with scorn and a smile in them.

The phaeton turned one way, the hay wagon the other.

'Who ever thought he looked like that under that old hat, in a hay-cart?' said Ada, breathlessly. 'Who can it be? How provoking! He was a right down gentleman, though he said he was only a farmer.'

Poor Ada. Her mortification had just begun.

That evening, with silk hat doffed from the handsome head, faultlessly arrayed, Mr. Allen Waters presented himself in the little parlor of the Hollyhocks and introducing himself, begged leave to inquire if the young ladies had reached home quite safely.

Ada apologized quite eagerly, and tried to be sweet, but Mr. Waters seemed to have eyes only for Dora's brunette face.

He came again and again to the Hollyhocks, and at last one day boldly declared himself Dora's lover.

'You have known me but such a little while; you don't know half my faults,' she murmured.

'I don't care if I don't,' he laughed. 'I loved you and have loved you ever since you offered me that half sovereign so charmingly, blushing and ashamed of the small sum. Why, you little darling, do you know your appealing dark eyes kept me from meeting a man who would have paid me $100 that day?'

'And you have never got it?' cried Dora aghast.

'No; but that does not matter. I have your half sovereign, and would rather have it.'

Such an incorrigible fool was the fault, he had his own way, and Dora became Mrs. Allen Waters. She loves her husband because, under all circumstances, she finds him a gentleman. And Ada is in the sulks.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

Holiness is an unselfing of ourselves.

Laws are the sovereigns of sovereigns.

Hope is the cordial of the human heart

A man may hold his tongue at the wrong time.

Real glory springs from the silent conquest of ourselves.

He will easily be content and at peace whose conscience is pure.

True wisdom, in general, consists in energetic determination.

Chance is a word void of sense; nothing can exist without a cause.

Sunshine is like love, it makes everything shine with its own beauty.

Ill fortune never crushed that man whom good fortune deceived not.

One pound of learning requires ten pounds of common sense to apply it.

There are more people who can forget themselves than govern themselves.

The tongue of slander is a sword which is seldom allowed to grow rusty.

That man has attained to wisdom who can do everything at the proper time.

The very nature of love is to find its joy in serving others, not for one's own benefit but theirs.

There is a fellowship among the virtues by which one great generous passion stimulates another.

Don't judge a man by his failure in life, for many a man fails because he is too honest to succeed.

Character is higher than intellect. A great soul will be as strong to live as well as strong to think.

A man that studieth revenge keeps his own wounds green, which otherwise would heal and do well.

He who does a base thing in zeal for his friend, burns the gold thread that ties their hearts together.

Every lie, great or small, is the brink of a precipice, the depth of which nothing but conscience can fathom.

"It will pass away," weak parents say of some fault of their children. Oh, no! it will not pass away, it will develope.

Certainly man is of kin to the breath of his body, and if he be not of kin to God by his spirit, he is a base and ignoble creature.

Political parties cannot forever live on reminiscences, and more than a tramp can be prosperous on the fact that he has "seen better days."

Books are the true levelers. They give to all who faithfully use them the society, the spiritual presence, of the greatest and best of our race.

Feelings come and go like the troops following the victory of the present; but principles, like troops of the line, are undisturbed and stand fast.

There are men in this naughty world so mean that they would even consent to 'take the beam from their eye' if they could only sell it for timber.

Wrong-doing is a road that may open fair, but leads to trouble and danger. Well-doing, however rough and thorny at first, surely leads to pleasant places.

A JOHN GILPIN RIDE.

WHY AN OLD WOMAN TOOK YOUNG MULKITTIE HOME.

Old Mrs. Peggy Potterson, a wealthy old lady, who owns a large plantation several miles below the city, came to town the other day, and visited her favorite preacher, the Rev. Mr. Mulkittie. The boy did not have a good chance at her, for her own volubility precluded anything like the presentation of a suitable occasion. He only called her attention to a few propositions, exhibiting such precocity, that the old lady had a desire to know him more intimately. She manifested a desire to be identified in the shaping of the child's growing mind, and just before she started home, she implored Mulkittie to allow the boy to accompany her. 'I will bring him back in two days,' she said. 'I would so enjoy taking him out among the sheep and pigs, and listen to his charming little comments. Oh, do please let him come. You would like to go with me, wouldn't you?' turning to to the boy. 'There I knew he would.'

Finally it was agreed that the boy should accompany Mrs. Potterson, and very soon seated beside the kind-hearted old lady, he was riding rapidly down the river road.

'You are such a fine little fellow,' said Mrs. Potterson, 'that I'd like you to come and live with me.'

'Have you got any ducks?' asked the boy.

'Yes, I've got more than a hundred.'

'Is your ducks the kind that carries mud around in their bills?'

'Yes, some of them do.'

'Which ones?'

'Oh, any of them; it doesn't make any difference. You are such a bright little boy,' and she hugged the child.

'Have you got any goats?'

'Yes, lots of 'em.'

'Will they butt?'

'Yes, some of them.'

'Which ones?'

'Oh, I don't know; just any of them that takes a notion?'

'Which one takes a notion?'

'First one or the other.'

'Have you got little calves?'

'The prettiest you ever saw.'

'How many have you got?'

'I don't know exactly.'

'Why don't you know exactly? If the calves had their own way you couldn't get any milk from the cows, could you? Did any of the cows ever kick you?'

'My little man—what are you shying at, Salem'—talking to the horse, 'you ask so many questions that I don't know which to answer first.'

'Are you married?'

'I was married, but my husband was killed in the army?'

'How, killed in the army?'

'Why, he went to fight, and was shot.'

'Was he mad?'

'I don't know.'

'Then what did he want to fight for?'

'He was fighting for his country.'

'Didn't he fight for the town, too?'

'Oh, yes; that is, yes.'

'Was he a policeman?'

'No, he was a soldier?'

"What's a soldier?'

'A soldier is a man that fights for his country.'

'And his town, too?'

'Yes, of course.'

'Then he's a policeman, ain't he?'

'You don't seem to understand. There was a war between the North and South, and my husband fought for the South.'

'Was the North an' South mad at each other?'

'Yes, and tried to kill each other.'

'What did they get mad about?'

'Why, the South went out of the Union.'

'What Union?'

'The—great goodness—Union of the States.'

'An' did the North leave the gate open so the South could get out?'

'Hush now, Willie, we're getting most home.'

'But I want to know. An' when your husband went out the gate they shot him did they?'

'Plainly speaking, my husband fought to keep the negroes from being freed.'

'How freed?'

'Great Cæsar! The negroes belonged to the white people, and had to work for them. The North didn't like this, and wanted the negroes to own themselves.'

Suddenly, with a strange dawning of night, with a wonderful conception of night, with a wonderful conception of childhood—an intuition which philosophers cannot explain—the child asked: 'Wasn't it right for the slaves to own themselves? Didn't the little negro boys an' girls learn at Sunday school that if they was good they would go to Heaven?'

'You must hush, now.'

'But I want to know. Did your husband go to Heaven?'

'Yes, he did.'

'How do you know?'

'Because—whoa! come around here!' And she turned around and began to drive rapidly toward the city.

'Where are you going?' asked the boy.

'Going to take you home. A saint could not stand you. Get up there!' And the horse almost flew along the road.

'If you was a negro—'

'Git up!' and she struck the horse with the whip. The dry sand flew high in the air. 'Runaway!' people shouted, as they rushed to their front gates. With increased rapidity the horse turned into a street, meeting a minister's buggy, colliding with it, and throwing the apostolic gentleman sprawling on the ground. Another turn, and a deacon barely escaped with his life.

'What's the matter?' demanded the Rev. Mr. Mulkittie, rushing to the gate, as the horse, panting, knocked down a panel of the fence, and stopped.

'Here!' cried Mrs. Potterson. 'Take the boy. I've got enough of him.' And she lifted him from the seat.

'She's the chariot of fire,' said the boy, as the buggy dashed away.

In days gone by a Philadelphia Quaker, who was also a large ship-owner, suddenly dropped all his insurance on his vessels, and when beset by the agents to explain his singular conduct said:

'I have come to the conclusion to depend upon the Lord for the safety of my ship.'

No arguments nor explanation could move him from his purpose, and things went on for five or six months without a loss. Then one ship was destroyed by fire, and another was driven ashore, and close upon these disasters came the destruction of a valuable cargo. It was then that the old man sent for an agent and said:

'Friend Thompson, the Rover is about to sail for Liverpool.

'Yes.'

'And thee make out a policy of $50,000 on her.'

'Yes.'

'And thee may also make ready to insure her cargo.'

The Constitutionalist.

W. L. FORCE & A. L. FORCE,
EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

ONE CAUSE.

No respecter of truth can deny that the wrongs of Ireland are both real and intolerable.

There are many causes for such wrongs, all justly chargeable to England; and their permitted existence is not only repulsive to human rights, but scandalous to this enlightened age.

Foremost among them is the robber Land Monopoly.

The soil of Ireland is naturally productive, and if divided into small sized farms, and an opportunity given, under the provision of wisely enacted home laws, for the tillers to be equitable renters or to become actual owners by purchase, the country could and would readily sustain a prosperous and contented population.

That should be the condition of Ireland.

The exact reverse is her unhappy fate.

The aristocratic and wealthy classes of England own in immense tracts the land of Ireland.

For its use, subject to foreign appointed agents, and to laws made by an English Parliament wherein the Irish people are powerless, rent, as a general rule, is exacted to the utmost penny, and thoughtless of the poor comfortless tenants who struggle on from year to year to maintain life, and in thousands of instances fail even to do that.

Where goes the rent?

To England, for the support of titled pomp and pampered living upheld by the thieving system of monarchy.

Ireland writhes in poverty.

England rolls in riches, and has the audacity to boast that the foot of a slave does not press her globe encircling domain.

Across her coronet should be engraved in flaming letters the word HYPOCRISY!

If Ireland is free, where under the sun ever crouched a slave?

NEW JERSEY THE CHAMPION.

The census returns show the greatness of New York, as regards population, wealth, commercial and manufacturing establishments, and diversified productions, over sister commonwealths, and fully sustain her claim to be called the Empire State.

Yet, notwithstanding all that, the same official data proves that in agricultural particulars New Jersey ranks much higher than New York, as the following figures make manifest:

Population of New York	5,082,871
Population of New Jersey	1,131,116
Acres improved land New York	17,717,862
Acres improved land New Jersey	2,096,297
Value farms and buildings N. Y.	$1,056,176,741
Value farms and buildings N. J.	190,895,833
Farm products New York	178,025,695
Farm products New Jersey	29,650,750

A comparison of the above figures shows that the average value of improved farming land in New York is $60 per acre, and in New Jersey $91 per acre, or a difference in favor of New Jersey of fifty per cent.

Again—

The farm products of New York average $10.05 per acre of improved land, while those of New Jersey reach $14.15 per acre, showing the superiority of New Jersey to be in that particular forty per cent.

Then as to taxes—

The assessed value of all real and personal estate foots up

In New York	$2,651,940,006
In New Jersey	572,518,361

On which taxes of every kind, State, County, City, Town and School, aggregate thus—

New York	$56,392,975
New Jersey	8,958,065

Or 2 12-100 per cent. for New York to 1 56-100 per cent. for New Jersey.

New York is the Empire.

New Jersey the Champion.

To be a Jerseyman is to wear the badge of distinction.

We glory in the name.

EAGER TO BURN THE RECORDS.

Under this heading the N. Y. Star says that a committee of Treasury officials at Washington, appointed to consider the subject of storing the Treasury records, incorporate a most suspicious suggestion in their report. They say that the Department records now occupy a space of 129,808 cubic feet in the Treasury and 75,500 cubic feet in the leased building, and that the available remaining space, 160,000 cubic feet, will be exhausted early in 1885. Hence they recommend that a fire-proof edifice be constructed, and at the same time the Treasury officials be authorized to burn at discretion such of the records as may be destroyed without detriment to the public good.

This is an extraordinary proposal. If the Treasury records from 1863 to 1883 including the colossal operations of the war epoch—can be crowded into 205,000 cubic feet, how can 161,000 cubic feet be exhausted in the next two years for the same purpose? And if a fire-proof building ought to be erected, why propose to burn the records anterior to the probable inauguration of a Democratic President?

The impression prevails in Washington that should a Democrat be elected in November, 1884, to succeed Arthur, it will be extremely difficult to prevent the Treasury from catching fire before March 4, 1885. What does Mr. Folger think of the implication?

THE N. J. DETECTIVE BUREAU.

The above named association held a meeting at 828 Broad street, Newark, on Wednesday evening, May 2d, for the purpose of electing officers for the following year:

Chief, A. Haggarty was re-elected chief; Secretary and Treasurer, Manning Force; Board of Directors, Commissioners Joseph G. Hill, John Gregory, James Dunn, William A. Housell, E. Barbour, Henry D. Repple.

Each detective made reports of arrests during the year.

Chief Haggarty has been in the detective business for the past thirty-five years, and is considered one of the best detective officers in the State.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

Bible study on Saturday evening of this week as usual.

New Catalogues can now be obtained from the Librarian.

The subject for the young men's meeting next Monday evening is "Consecration and how to show it."—Rom. 12.

The amusement room of late has been too small to accommodate the many young men who visit it; but this is good evidence of the need of larger room. This room is open and for the use of all young men. They are all welcome.

Members of the Boys' branch will be in attendance each afternoon of the week to attend to the boys' reading room. All boys of the branch are allowed the use of the room free. The meeting of the boys on Friday afternoon of this week will be for Bible study. It is hoped every member will be present.

A Card.

In course of the last City Council meeting, Mr. Jones moved that the ladies of the Relief Association be given permission to visit the Poor House at my place, which motion was not carried (and very properly too) on the ground that my house was private property. Now I would like the fact understood that I do not keep a public Poor House, but that a contract has been made between the Overseer of Poor and myself to board and clothe a certain few, which contract could cease at the option of either party concerned at any hour. Nevertheless, I do hereby invite the ladies of the Relief Association to visit my house at any time while said boarders are with me, and further, I do hereby agree to put $100 in the Treasury of their Association, if after they are made acquainted with all the facts, in their estimation, I have been derelict in my duty relative to the charges that have been made, or in any other way concerning said contract. DAVID HAND.

Board of Freeholders.

A regular meeting of the Union County Board of Freeholders was held on Thursday, May 3d.

County Collector Sheridan presented his annual report, which was received and placed on file. It is larger than usual, there being fifty-four pages of legal paper. The supplementary report will add to its length. The committee appointed to examine it reported that it agreed in every particular with the vouchers, accounts, etc. The total expenses thus far are $105,635.94. The tax levy was $125,000. The report gives every detail. The school tax for this year is $62,309.56.

The County Physician's report was received and placed on file, a brief extract of which will be found elsewhere.

The County Attorney presented an opinion that the bill of $45 charged the county by a citizen of Rahway, for the storage of the iron of the Milton avenue bridge, on his lot, was excessive, and should be cut down.

The committee on Elizabeth bridges report that Lawrence Trapp had been appointed tender of the South street draw.

Several resolutions were offered, transferring the surplusage of some accounts to others not having enough.

A number of bills were paid.

The Board then adjourned to Wednesday, May 9th, when it adjourned sine die.

New Boards of Freeholders.

The new Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County met at Elizabeth on Wednesday last at 11 o'clock, for organization. All the members were present.

Clerk Crowell called for order, and then began the election of officers. There was no opposition whatever. Mr. Martine was unanimously elected Director, Mr. John L. Crowell, Clerk, Mr. F. Sheridan, County Collector, and Mr. J. A. Fay, Jr., County Attorney. The salaries were made the same as last year—Clerk, $300; Collector, $1,000, and Attorney $300.

The County Collector's report was taken up and a resolution offered that it be published, but this was laid over till the appropriations were made.

The minutes of the Board were ordered to be published at a cost not exceeding $100 each paper, in THE CONSTITUTIONALIST, Elizabeth Daily Journal, Central New Jersey Herald, Freie Presse, Rahway Democrat, Rahway Advocate, Plainfield Bulletin, Central New Jersey Times and the Summit Record. The latter is an addition to the number.

The proper committee was authorized to borrow $100,000 in anticipation of the collection of taxes.

The following standing committees were appointed:

Collector's Bond—Belmer, Debbie, Pierson.

Publication—Halliday, Donohue, Vanderbeek.

Discharge of Prisoners — Donohue, Isenmann, Smith.

Collector's Committee—Debbie, Halliday, Newbury.

Auditing—Doty, Briant, Thompson.

Lunacy—Oliver, Doty, Husbands.

Building—Briant, Isenmann, Hubbard.

Jail—Isenmann, Oliver, Hubbard.

Stationery—Doty, Briant, Thompson.

Sheriff—Debbie, Belmer, White.

Miscellaneous—Halliday, Oliver, Newbury.

Special committees were appointed as follows:

Bonds—Doty, Hubbard, Oliver.

Appropriations—Oliver, Halliday, Doty, Hubbard, Newbery.

Elizabeth Draw—Donahue, Oliver, White.

Rahway Draw—Halliday, Belmer and Husbands.

The Board then adjourned to meet in one week.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders met for organization on Wednesday.

Clerk Cortelyou, whose duty it was, called the roll of the new board. All present.

Messrs. Voorhees and Dow were nominated for Director. The latter declined in favor of the former, when Mr. V. was unanimously re-elected, and returned thanks for the honor.

Mr. Cortelyou was re-elected Clerk, and the salary fixed at $125.

The salary of the Collector was fixed at $500, as before, and Messrs. Alfred Berry and George V. Vroom were put in nomination. A ballot was taken (Messrs. Staats and Gaston acting as tellers). The vote stood—Berry 6, Vroom 3. Mr. Berry was declared re-elected, and Mr. Gaston spoke in complimentary terms of the efficient manner in which the Collector had discharged his duties in the past, saying that the accounts had been so perfectly kept that the committee were only three hours in comparing last year's vouchers with the books, and not a discrepancy of a penny was discovered.

John D. Bartine, Esq., was elected counsel, and the retainer fixed at $50 per annum.

The Board then adjourned.

The Middlesex County Board of Freeholders met at New Brunswick on Wednesday and organized by the election of the following officers:

Director—Luther H. Tappan.

Clerk—P. K. Edgar.

Collector—Richard Servies.

Solicitor—Robert Adrian.

The Driven-Well Cases.

DES MOINES, IOWA, May 9.—In the United States Circuit Court this morning decision was rendered in the long-contested driven-well cases of Green against several hundred defendants in this State. The Court holds that the patent is entirely null and void; first, for abandonment to the public for several years before Green applied for a patent; second, for priority of use, and third, for want of novelty. The Court also holds that the re-issue of the patent is void for the reason that it grants more and broader claims than the original patent.

The tube or driven well, was, it is asserted, invented by Nelson W. Green, of Boston, while a Lieutenant-Colonel in the 79th New York Volunteers, serving in Missouri. It was suggested by the capitulation of Colonel Mulligan to the Rebels, compelled by lack of water and the fact, or belief, that a number of the wells of the region had been poisoned. The patent was first issued in 1868, and re-issued in 1871. It includes "the process of constructing a well by driving or forcing an instrument into the ground until it is projected into the water, without removing the earth upward, as is done in boring," and also makes and has been allowed the broad claim to the right to the pump and pipe constituting an air-pipe well, and the use of any device which will utilize the atmospheric pressure to force the water underlying the earth into the well.

William D. Andrews & Brother, of No. 233 Broadway, are the managers of the patent for Colonel Green. They were seen at their home, No. 4 East Thirteenth street, last evening. Both expressed doubt of the correctness of the report.

"It is incredible that such a decision should be given by a United States Court," said George Andrews, one of the firm. "It is so at variance with the well-established law. The patent has been in litigation for ten years or more, and out of eight or ten decisions rendered, this is the first adverse one, if such decision really has been given. Our proofs have been simply overwhelming. If such a decision really has been given, it seems fair to say that it is the result of public clamor; there is no law that could possibly justify such a decision. We have numerous suits pending in this and other States, and such a decision will encourage the opposition. The case will of course be carried to the Supreme Court and the decision of the Iowa Circuit Court will be reversed. United States Judges Benedict, Wheeler and Blatchford, of this State, Nelson, of Minnesota; Dillon, of Minnesota and Iowa; Gresham, the present PostmasterGeneral, and Nixon of New Jersey have already decided in our favor."

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Mahlon H. Ferris has rented the house of Robert French, corner of North avenue and Elm street.

George Schucker of New York has occupied the house of George A. Bayard, on Orchard street.

Justice Jaques received his commission on Tuesday last, and was sworn in office by County Clerk Vosseller.

The C. R. R. Co. have had the fences around the parks on both sides of the depot, re-painted the past week.

James T. Pierson, our new Freeholder, was sworn into office on Wednesday, at the annual meeting of the Board.

Mr. A. Westbrook who resided last year on Orchard street, has moved into the Welch house on Westfield avenue.

Robert French sold on Tuesday last his lot corner of Elm and Quimby streets to Mr. Walter N. Sparkman, who intends in a short time erecting another building on the same.

Little Henry was severely bit last week by a large mastiff owned by Mr. A. A. Drake. The dog grabbed him by the arm, injuring it considerably. Dr. Cooper dressed the wounds.

The ladies of the Congregational church held a Bazaar and Festival in Lyceum Hall on Wednesday evening last. There was a large attendance. The sale of fancy articles was very brisk. One of the features of the entertainment was an Art Gallery. The receipts are for church purposes.

Wm. Kissam, a farmer residing in Fanwood Township, came to our town last Tuesday to do his trading. On starting for home his team of horses, on turning around in front of the Hotel, upset the wagon and threw Mr. Kissam out, bruising him quite severely and doing considerable damage to the wagon. The horses ran a short distance and were captured by some bystanders.

COMIFERA
For the Head, Scalp and Hair!

Thousands write us, on arriving home weary, the brain overwrought and tired out, that after bathing with Comifera they feel refreshed and ready for another day's work. It soothes, exhilarates and strengthens the head and brain. Ministers, doctors, lawyers, teachers, brokers, merchants, bookkeepers, mechanics, clerks, housekeepers, sewing girls, and every one who feels languid, depressed and exhausted should use it. It eradicates all diseases of the scalp and skin, removes dandruff, and keeps the hair soft and silken. We ask you to try it, and after using one-third of a bottle, if not satisfied return it to the dealer, and your money shall be refunded.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time, and ordered engrossed preparatory to the third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.
WALTER L. HETFIELD, City Clerk.
Plainfield, N. J., May 7, 1883.

AN ORDINANCE

For the assessment and collection of a Tax for the purposes of the Library Fund of the City of Plainfield for the year 1883.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That in addition to taxes for the current expenses and for the support of the poor of the City of Plainfield there shall be assessed, levied and collected by tax for the purposes of the Library Fund of the City of Plainfield for the year 1883, the sum of Eight Hundred Dollars [illegible], at the same time and in like manner as the tax for current expenses of the city for the year 1883 is required by law to be assessed, levied and collected, and the moneys when collected shall be held and used as provided in Chapter 168 Laws of New Jersey for 1879.

AN ORDINANCE

For the assessment of property and the collection of taxes within the city of Plainfield for the year 1883.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. There shall be assessed, levied and collected by tax for the current expenses of the city of Plainfield, for the year eighteen hundred and eighty-three, the sum of ten thousand dollars ($10,000).

Sec. 2. There shall be further assessed, levied and collected by tax for the support of the city poor of said city of Plainfield, for the year eighteen hundred and eighty-three, the sum of thirty-five hundred ($3500), at the same time and in the same manner as the said sum of ten thousand dollars, mentioned in section one of this ordinance is assessed, levied and collected.

Adopted by the Common Council May 7, 1883.

RUNKLE of the Flemington Democrat congratulates himself upon the fact that Donkeys never suffer with softening of the brayin! But, Runkle is no true evidence of such statement—he possesses naught to soften.

THOSE who purchased the miserable apologies for umbrellas of a vender at the circus for a dollar each, looked like Camanche Indians when they arrived home, the dye stuff with which the flimsy material was covered, being spattered over their faces.

"CATARRH can be cured" is the very satisfactory statement of the proprietor of Smalley's Catarrh Remedy. No disease more effectively baffles the physician's skill, and if a trial of the simple and safe treatment advertised elsewhere proves its worth, no sufferer should be without it.

ONE of Plainfield's well-known horseman, Frank Azoy, won the steeple chase contest at Forpaugh's circus here last Friday evening. While riding in a similar race at New Brunswick on Saturday night, the horse he was riding, a vicious one, ran against a tent pole and broke the animal's leg, which necessitated killing him.

THE incorporators of the Music Hall Association of Plainfield have forwarded the required papers to the Secretary of State and expect to receive a certificate of incorporation in time to call a meeting for Monday evening next to elect a Board of Directors and other officers, order the issuing of stock and appoint the Committees necessary to push forward the scheme.

IT is a common remark that there are more robins and other song and insectiverous birds to be seen on the lawns and among the trees adjoining Plainfield's handsome residences than for years past. This is partially, if not wholly due to the existence of Protective Societies, which are feared by those boys and pot-hunters who have so ruthlessly destroyed these birds during late years.

FOR a wonder there were no robberies committed in this city during the visit of Forepaugh's circus last Friday. This is undoubtedly mainly due to the precautions taken and vigilance exercised by Captain of Police Chase, who warned every suspicious and known bad characters to beware of their actions while here. The extra police force which was put on duty, also had a tendency to keep the thieves from plying their avocation.

THE Trinity Reformed Church has secured for its choir Miss Abel, of Easton, a young lady in possession of a strong soprano voice that, with more efficient training than has been given it, will in time demand as much admiration as is deservingly accorded the instrumental abilities of her cousin. Miss Abel should never carry her chest tones above low F, at least—for which fault, however, the teacher and not the pupil must be blamed.

THE Grand Jury expects to finish its work to-day, Thursday.

THE Union County Court of Common Pleas at Elizabeth adjourned Wednesday until Tuesday of next week.

THE new catalogue of the Y. M. C. A. library is just published, showing a large assortment of desirable books including a number of recent additions.

THE evidence necessary to convict the young man accused of ringing a false alarm last Monday night, was not obtainable, but City Judge Good fined him $5 for swearing about it.

RETAIL dealers in tobacco will find it greatly to their advantage to purchase their supplies in that line of Patterson, thereby saving the cost of freight and paying only the regular New York prices.

THE corner lot 100x200 feet at Manning and Westervelt avenues, North Plainfield, which was sold by the Building Loan Association at auction last week, was purchased by Dr. J. H. Cooley for $451.

ON Monday afternoon next at two o'clock, Theo. F. French administrator for Nelson W. Gardner deceased, will expose for sale a very desirable building site on the northerly side of Front street east of Park avenue.

THE Fourth Ward House, cor. Third and Liberty streets, just opened by Mr. Hugh O'Donnell, is doing a thriving business. A Collender pool table soon to be added will make this the favorite resort of that neighborhood. Give him a call.

SUNDAY next, May 13th, at 7:30 p. m., Mr. F. W. Grant will commence (D. V.) a series of lectures on the Lord's coming and related events, with Daniel and the calendar of prophecy, in the Hall formerly occupied by the Y. M. C. A., opposite the Post Office.

NEXT Thursday evening at Van Deventer Hall, the great American Humorist, J. J. Villers will deliver his lecture on "The Funny People we Meet." This will not be the first of Mr. Villers visits to this city, and so old a friend will undoubtedly be welcomed by the many admirers he has among our citizens.

THE Columbia College Glee Club, as will be seen by its advertisement elsewhere, will give a concert in the Park avenue Baptist church, Thursday evening of next week. The programme will include choruses, glees, quartettes and trios sung in a manner that leads the New York press to claim for this Club the title of best.

THE members of the L. L., are procuring from the ladies of this city a number of choice recipes for various table delicacies which are to be published in book form and sold at the fair to be held by the society, for the benefit of the Children's Home, in the parlors of the Crescent avenue church, during the afternoon and evening of the 31st inst. These recipes are the outcome of personal experiments by the ladies who endorse their worth, and form a valuable collection which no housekeeper should be without.

THE Special Committee of the Council appointed to investigate the morals of the inhabitants of the "Poor Farm," decidedly exceeded its powers and departed from the purpose it was appointed for, when it censured the late Overseer of the Poor for the omission of duties that only the past Council had the right to demand. The Committee, however, merely displayed its ignorance of the facts of the matter—the late Overseer did, in his reports to previous Councils, call attention to the annual birth of children in the Poor House, and the then Mayor and members of the Council knew of such evil. The Alms Committee of last year and the late Overseer also met and considered the matter.

Reception.

The ladies in charge of the Children's Home will hold a reception, at the new building, on Jackson avenue, on Tuesday, May 22d, between the hours of three and ten p. m. The gathering will be purely a social one, and all who feel an interest in the Home are cordially invited to be present.

The Circus.

The mammoth show of Forepaugh's was visited by large numbers of people during its sojourn in Plainfield last Friday. The afternoon performance was well attended and in the evening it is stated that 6,500 tickets were sold. The performance was an exceptionally good one, and no accident occurred to mar the pleasure of the occasion. The evening performance was brought to a sudden close, however, by the downpouring of heavy rain, which came through the tent cloth seams and drenched the pleasure seekers below. Many a Spring bonnet and suit were ruined.

Personalia.

Dr. L. W. Oakley has been appointed by the Committee on Jail Inspection as Jail Physician for the coming year.

Mr. D. O. Wotherspoon and family who have been residing for the Winter on East 19th street, N. Y., have returned to their Front street residence for the coming season.

A magnificent bed of tulips, and one of hyacinths, in front of the residence of Mr. James K. Arnold on Manning ave., North Plainfield, attract the admiring attention of all who pass.

The death occurred on Wednesday of Barzillia J. Randolph, one of the oldest and most respected of our citizens, whose funeral will take place from the Seventh-Day Baptist church, Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Mrs. Chas. Gill of this city leaves for Europe on the 17th of this month, via Steamer "Grecian Monarch," M. M. Thorn agent. Said vessel is one of six, and is second to no other line plying between New York and Europe.

Hon. J. J. Bergen, Esq., late Prosecutor for Somerset County, and Mrs. Helen Dickie, were married on Thursday of last week, and left for a three weeks' tour through Canada and elsewhere. We tender our congratulations to the happy pair.

Mr. R. S. Little has leased his cosy little place on Park avenue, for a term of three years, to Mr. Thos. Minford, Jr., of New York city. Mr. Little with his family will make a trip West, spending the winter in Southern California, and on his return next Spring, will try a tour abroad.

There died of consumption at the residence of Mr. L. I. Lansing, on First Place, Wednesday morning, Anna Bulkley, daughter of the late Turner Bulkley and sister of the Principal of the Plainfield Public Schools. The deceased arrived in this city the day before her death intending to make her sister a short visit before returning to her home in Danbury, Ct. Having been ill for some time, the journey here hastened a result that was inevitable.

It is with feelings of pleasure that the many friends of Manning Jennings are congratulating him upon his convalescence from sickness and once more welcome him upon our streets. It will be remembered that Mr. Jennings received a fall while instructing a new sexton of the 1st Baptist church in certain duties in that edifice some four months since, whereby he was the victim of a fractured leg, which has confined him to his home ever since. Manning Jennings is one of the "old residents" of Plainfield, being born in 1803, residing at his present location for the last 54 years, at which time there was to be counted only 22 houses, where now our fair city stands. Although still suffering from lameness occasioned by his injury, he bids fair to live in our midst years to come.

Fair in Aid of the New German Church.

The Fair in aid of a fund for building a new German church will be held on the evenings of the 23d, 24th, 25th and 26th of this month, at Saengerbund Hall, corner North and Park avenues. It will also be open in the afternoon from 2 to 5 on Friday, the 25th, and Saturday, the 26th. The ladies who have charge of the arrangements sincerely hope that they may not appeal in vain to the well-known generosity of their Christian friends, Germans as well as Americans. Trusting they will meet with a kind support in their efforts towards so worthy a cause, donations in money, fancy or useful articles, refreshments, etc., will be thankfully received at any time, before or during the fair by MRS. HENRY STRAUSS, 2d STREET.

Pres. of Ladies' Committee.

U. & M. C. M. A. A.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the "Union & Middlesex Co's Mutual Agricultural Association," held on the grounds of the Association, Monday afternoon, May 7th, Vice President O. T. Waring acted as Chairman and W. L. Force, Secretary. The following gentlemen were elected to serve as Directors for the ensuing year:

John I. Holly, J. W. Johnson, Nathan Robins, J. V. D. Christopher, John W. Laing, W. T. Ames, A. H. Smith, Eugene A. Gross, O. T. Waring, John W. Handren, C. W. Leveridge, Jas. S. Vosseller, W. F. Williams, L. D. Walker, Smith W. Laing, Bergen Vanderhoven, Manning Freeman.

The Apollo and St. Cecilia.

By reason of the variety and general excellence of the programme and the vocal talents of those who took part, the concert of last Thursday evening at the Park avenue Baptist church deserved a greater patronage than was accorded. The selections from Gounod's "Redemption" were as a whole interpreted with much effect by members of the St. Cecilia Society and the Young Apollo Club. The Glees were not so well rendered, but the solos were universally satisfactory. Mrs. Luther was very pleasing in the ballad given in answer to a recall, and quite so by her singing of Verdi's "Caro Nome." Master George Bauer's soprano was no more enjoyable than such unnatural and transitory voices in his sex always are. He, however, has not been excelled in his line by any of Mr Williams' pupils of the past. Mr. J. W. Black did well, but can do better; while Mr. J. W. Macy was at his best, which all will agree is saying a great deal in his praise. Mr. Frank Moulin sang Braham's "McIntyres" and "The Market on Saturday Night" with some appreciation of their intent.

A Benefit Entertainment.

For the benefit of St. Joseph's R. C. church of North Plainfield, there was given a dramatic and musical entertainment in VanDeventer Hall, last Saturday evening, that was remarkably enjoyable. Misses Mamie Kunkel, a young lady with a future before her, sang "Esmeralda" and "Savourneen Dheelish" with much effect, and also performed in a decidedly meritorious manner a piano composition of her own, "The Khedive March." Mr. Oliver W. Wren, an Irish comedian, elocutionist and vocalist of much ability, added to the general excellence of the programme; and the singing of Mr. F. M. Kendrick was very pleasing. An amusing farce and a charming comedy called forth the combined talents of the entire company, and both were admirably given. Miss Agnes Proctor proved herself an exceedingly bright actress, and Mr. Willett Seamon and the Haverly Quartette sang with more or less power and ability. The entire affair reflected greatly to the credit of the gentleman who arranged it and who most assuredly deserved more success financially than was attained.

Sunday School Convention.

From the Elizabeth Journal we gather the following facts regarding the annual Convention of Union County Sunday Schools:

The annual Convention of the Union County Sunday School Association was opened Friday afternoon last in the Second Presbyterian church, Elizabeth, N. J. After the devotional exercises Rev. Hugh Smythe welcomed the members of the Convention. He tendered a cordial greeting to all.

Rev. Mr. Hurlbut of this city who had charge of the meeting, explained that he was not President of the Association, but Mr. McGee was absent, and he was simply occupying the place at his request.

The County Secretary's report was read by Mr. Durand of Rahway. It was entirely statistical. The following are a few of the figures:

Clark township	1	Sunday School	of	[illegible]	members.
Cranford	5	"	"	300	"
Elizabeth	20	"	"	5,420	"
Fanwood	4	"	"	201	"
Linden	6	"	"	419	"
N. Providence	3	"	"	261	"
Plainfield	10	"	"	2,449	"
Rahway	13	"	"	2,010	"
Springfield	2	"	"	200	"
Summit	3	"	"	230	"
Union	5	"	"	274	"
Westfield	6	"	"	571	"
Total	84			12,691

There are also in the county 12,525 library books, 17,564 Sunday School papers distributed, 89 scholars received into the church during the year, $3,626.07 collected for benevolent purposes, etc., $4,988.59 expended in the Sunday Schools, $29,558 value of Sunday School property and $30 paid to the County Association.

Mr. Durand also read his report as Treasurer; Cash received from former Treasurer, $30.96; receipts from Sunday Schools, $20; from subscriptions, $30; total $80.96. Expenses, $57.68; balance, $23.28.

Rev. Samuel W. Clark, the State Secretary, then addressed the Convention, and was followed by others, who explained the workings of the institution.

The evening session of the Convention was largely attended, the exercises being conducted by Mr. James McGee, of North Plainfield. The Committee on nominations reported the following named person as officers of the Association for the ensuing year: President—R. W. Woodward, of Elizabeth; Vice President—George H. Babcock, of Plainfield; Recording Secretary—Augustus S. Crane, of Elizabeth; Corresponding Secretary and Treasurer—James H. Durand, of Rahway; Executive Committee—Rev. J. F. Biggs, Cranford; Joseph Gales, Elizabeth; Rev. J. L. Hurlbut, Plainfield; W. D. Wood, Cranford; A. F. Grant, Westfield; Township Secretaries—Clark, E. S. Ells; Cranford, J. T. Wilcox; Elizabeth, J. J. Coyne; Fanwood, R. C. Treadwell; Linden, D. C. Crane; New Providence, Amos Potter; Plainfield, C. W. McCutchen; Rahway, S. M. Oliver; Summit, A. F. Dohrman; Union, A. Atkins; Westfield, R. K. Sinclair; Springfield, to be supplied. These nominations were all unanimously confirmed.

Rev. Mr. Hurlbut announced that a District Sunday School Convention for the IIId Congressional District would be held in Newark on the 16th of May. He nominated as delegates to that Convention from this county, C. C. McBride and James McGee.

Rev. E. P. Ketcham, of Plainfield, was introduced, and made a most excellent address, the theme of which was: The truth as it is in Christ—how it should be regarded, received and used by Christians, especially by teachers of the young.

At the two sessions of the Convention about 120 delegates were present, besides the many others in attendance, and the Sunday Schools of Union, Westfield, Linden, New Providence, Plainfield, Cranford, Scotch Plains, Rahway and Elizabeth were represented.

County Physicians' Report.

The annual report of the County Physician was submitted to the Board of Freeholders at a meeting held last week. Its substance stated briefly is as follows: It carefully summarizes the number of deaths requiring official action, places where they occur and date of occurrence, with causes of death. Not less than 42 persons have died suddenly from various diseases. All the cases of drowning have been accidental; two deaths from exposure have taken place owing to the severity of the winter, three victims have been murdered, and the railroads have contributed 18 deaths, of which 10 took place on the Central, 7 on the Pennsylvania, and 1 on the D. L. & W. The County Physician suggests that as the railroad companies have protected their principal crossings by gates, that the number of deaths from railroad accidents will henceforth be materially reduced.

He suggests that there might be a further saving of life by the rigid enforcement of the law, preventing any person trespassing upon the railroad tracks. There have been six very determined cases of suicide. In this connection, Dr. Terrill calls attention to the Penal Code of the State of New York, which went into effect December 1st, 1882, and which provides for any person attempting suicide. He then touches upon parochial registers of births, marriages and burials, and the various acts regulating the same in this State.

The rest of the report, which covers ten pages, is devoted to the explanation of cases and a statement of the necessity of taking photographs of the unknown dead for future identification and the authority therefor.

A number of other facts, laws and explanations connected with his duty follow, and then comes a final recapitulation which shows that of $900 appropriated only $693.36 have been expended, leaving a balance of $206.04

The amounts expended by the county for Coroners' expenses during the last five years were as follows:

For the year from May, 1878, to May, 1879, (59 cases,) $116.

For the year from May, 1879, to May, 1880, (59 cases,) $474.60.

For the year from May, 1880, to May, 1881, (81 cases,) $519.35.

For the year from May, 1881, May, 1872, (91 cases,) $602.82.

For the year from May, 1882, to May, 1883, (96 cases.)

During the year very many important cases have come before the County Physician for his action.

FIRE MATTERS.

The Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department met in regular meeting, Tuesday evening. Present—Messrs. Depew, Jones, Gillies and Flaig. In the absence of President Van Winkle, Mr. Gillies called the meeting to order. The opinion of Wm. Maxson, Esq., was read on certain questions, and was to the effect that the officers of the new Board shall be elected before it can be organized for business. Mr. Jones was chosen chairman, and the minutes of the last meeting of the old Board were read. On motion the Board proceeded to the election of officers for the coming year. Mr. J. Van Winkle as President, Mr. T. J. Gillies as Secretary and Mr. E. H. Depew as Treasurer were the only nominations, and such were unanimously chosen—Mr. W. E. Jones who was named for the latter office, declining to run. In the absence of the President, the standing committees were not named. The election of A. L. Carney as Chief, W. L. Wright as First Assistant and H. M. Stockton as Second Assistant, was announced. The officers of the several companies of the Department as reported officially to the Board, were confirmed. An invitation from the Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., of Plainfield, was read asking the members of the Board to unite with the members of the Post in the services of Decoration Day, and the Secretary was instructed to communicate the Board's acceptance of the same. The Secretary was instructed to make out exemption certificates (if applications be correct) for Wm. Harding, Edward Keller and Henry Eggerding of Engine Co., No. 3. The Board approved the action of No. 2 Engine Co., in its reinstatement of Messrs. W. R. Jennings and J. Vetterlein, and also confirmed the election of E. H. Pack as a member of No. 1 Engine Co., James Brennan and C. Newell as members of No. 2 Engine Co., John Giles as a member of Zephyr H. & L. Co., and John Harding as a member of No. 3 Engine Co. Odam, $7.50; M. Bird, $15.10; Margaret Gamberton, $3; W. S. Chase, $16.50; warrants were ordered drawn from the Poor Fund.

Mr. Ross presented the license applications of J. G. Cadmus, hack, C. Lyons, pedler, F. Tessiere, pedler, Mrs. Palermo, pedler, and George Eaton, stage. All granted.

Mr. Coriell offered a resolution to the effect that all lamps hereafter erected be on iron posts and conform in pattern with those in general use. Adopted.

The Lamps Com., reported favorably on petition for 3 lamps on Prospect ave., and the same was granted.

Mr. Jones moved that a Committee be appointed to confer with the property owners in relation to widening Park ave., between Fifth and Sixth streets. Carried.

Mr. J. Simpson, from Aud. Com., reported the following bills correct: A. Vanderbeck, $54; P. P. Good, $75; C. A. Marsh, $145.31; J. Van Winkle, $100; W. S. Chase, $56.34; Geo. W. Grant, $45.83; M. Conway, $18; P. Burgan, $45.83; Jno. Johnson, $154.69; Plainfield Gas Co., $213.75; Carney Bros., $14.61; N. Y. & N. J. Globe Gas Co., $119.04; John C. Meeker, $453.72; warrants were ordered drawn from the General Fund.

The ordinance for the assessment of property and the collection of taxes for the year 1883, was placed on its final passage and adopted.

Mr. Jones moved that the ladies of the Relief Association be given permission to visit the Poor House.

The other members of the Council failed to see what authority it had to grant permission to anyone to visit Mr. Hand's private residence.

Mr. Marsh moved as an amendment that Mr. Hand be requested to afford the ladies of the Relief Association, every privilege to visit the paupers.

On Motion of Mr. Coriell the whole matter was laid on the table—Messrs Marsh, Serrell and Jones voting in the negative.

The Council adjourned at 11:35.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

A remarkable tribute. Sidney Ourchandro, of Pittsburg, Pa., writes: "I have used Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs many years, with the most gratifying results. The relieving influence of Hall's Balsam is wonderful. The pain and rack of the body, incidental to a tight cough, soon disappear by the use of a spoonful according to directions. My wife frequently sends for Hall's Balsam instead of a physician, and health is speedily restored by its use."

Red Horse Powders are the surest cure for diseases in animals.

Dr. Green's Oxygenated Bitters is the oldest and best remedy for Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Malaria, Indigestion, all disorders of the Stomach, and all diseases indicating an impure condition of the Blood, Kidneys and Liver.

Concord Grape Vines.—Fine, vigorous Vines, two, three and four years' old, for sale by the dozen or thousand at the lowest prices. These Vines are raised on the famous Mt. Prospect Vineyards, at Passaic, New Jersey, where the well-known Port Grape Wine is produced that is so highly esteemed at Dresden and Berlin, and other European cities to which it is shipped, and that is so highly esteemed by physicians everywhere. Address, ALFRED SPEER, Passaic, N. J.

Decline of Man. Nervous Weakness, Dyspepsia, Impotence, cured by "Wells' Health Renewer." $1.

Skinny Men. "Wells' Health Renewer" restores health and vigor and cures Dyspepsia. $1.

Shiloh's Consumption Cure. This is the best question the most successful Cough Medicine we have ever sold, a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup and Bronchitis while it's wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since it's first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a test which no other medicine can stand. If you have a Cough we earnestly ask you to try it. Price 10 cents, 50 cents and $1.00. If your Lungs are sore, Chest or Back Lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Price 25 cts. Sold by R. J. Shaw.

Answer this question. Why do so many we see around us, seem to prefer to suffer and be made miserable by Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Coming up of the Food, Yellow Skin, when for 75 cents, we will sell them Shiloh's Vitalizer, guaranteed to cure them. Sold by R. J. Shaw.

Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy. A marvelous cure for Catarrh, Diphtheria, Canker mouth and Head ache. With each bottle there is an ingenious nasal Injector for the more successful treatment of these complaints without extra charge. Price, 50 cents. Sold by R. J. Shaw.

Wells' "Rough on Corns." Ask for Wells' "Rough on Corns." 15c. Quick, complete, permanent cure. Corns, warts, bunions.

I limped about for years with a cane, and could not bend down without excruciating pain. Parker's Ginger Tonic effected an astonishing cure and keeps me well. It is infallible. E. [illegible], Binghampton, N. Y.

A dangerous counterfeit. There are dangerous counterfeits in circulation purporting to be "Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer." The strongest evidence of its great value is the fact that parties knowing its great efficacy try to imitate it. Each bottle of the genuine has a fac simile of a walnut leaf—blown in the glass; and a Green Leaf on the outside wrapper. The "Restorer" is as harmless as water, while it possesses all the properties necessary to restore life, vigor, growth and color to the hair. Purchase only from responsible parties. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. Johnston, Holloway & Co., Philadelphia, and Hall & Ruckel, New York, wholesale agents.

Flies and Bugs. Flies, roaches, ants, bed-bugs, rats, mice, gophers, chipmunks, cleared out by "Rough on Rats." 15c.

A dressing to beautify gray hair every family needs. Parker's Hair Balsam never fails to satisfy, for I have used it extensively. I regard Parker's Ginger Tonic a most excellent remedy for kidney, lung and stomach disorders. It invigorates without intoxicating. J. Francis, [illegible], Journal, Chicago.

Best ever made, Emory's Little Cathartic Pills, pleasant to take, sugar-coated; no griping; only 15 cents a box, of Druggists or mail. Standard Cure Co. Sold by E. P. Reynolds, Plainfield, N. J.

Malaria, Chills and Fever, and Bilious attacks positively cured with Emory's Standard Cure Pills—an infallible remedy; never fail to cure the most obstinate, long-standing cases where Quinine and all other remedies have failed. They are prepared expressly for malarial sections, in double boxes, two kinds of Pills, containing a strong cathartic and a chill breaker, sugar-coated; contain no Quinine or Mercury, causing no griping or purging; they are mild and efficient, certain in their action and harmless in all cases; they effectually cleanse the system, and give new life and tone to the body. As a household remedy they are unequaled. For Liver Complaint their equal is not known; one box will have a wonderful effect on the worst case. They are used and prescribed by physicians, and sold by Druggists everywhere, or sent by mail. 25 and 50 cent boxes. Emory's Little Cathartic Pills, best ever made, only 15 cents. Sold by E. P. Reynolds, Plainfield, N. J.

MARRIED FOLKS WOULD BE MORE HAPPY IF

Home trials were never told to neighbors.

They kissed and made up after every quarrel.

They tried to be agreeable as in courtship days.

Household expenses were in proportion to receipts.

Each would try to be a support and comfort to each other.

Each remembered the other was a human being, not an angel.

Fuel and provisions were laid in during the high tide of Summer.

Women were so kind to their husbands as they are to their lovers.

Both parties remembered that they were married for worse as well as better.

MORALITIES.

Doubt indulged soon becomes doubt realized.

Tears are the showers that fertilize this world.

It is foolish to borrow trouble from to-morrow.

The tongue is the worst part of a bad servant.

A sanctified heart is better than a silver tongue.

The only jewel which will not decay is knowledge.

Happiness is not confined to any sphere of life.

Perseverance is the best school for manly virtue.

It is not profession, but fruit that glorifies God.

I hold him to be dead in whom shame is dead.

Rather be beaten in right than succeed in wrong.

Children have more need of models than of critics.

Little things console us because little things afflict us.

The small courtesies sweeten life, the greater ennoble it.

Next to love, sympathy is the divine passion of the heart.

Obstinacy and heat in argument are surest proofs of folly.

The word "impossible" is the mother-tongue of little souls.

If you want to find how great man is let him tell it himself.

The greatest truths are the simplest; so are the greatest men.

Worth begets in base minds envy; in great souls, emulation.

As every thread of gold is valuable so is every minute of time.

Whatever you dislike in another take care to correct in yourself.

Duty smiles upon those who fly from it; follow it and it smiles.

Time is the most precious of all possessions but least thought of.

Enjoy your own life without comparing it with that of another.

The best sort of revenge is not to be like him who did the injury.

Morning for work, evening for thought and night for repose.

Think wrongly if you please, but in all cases think for yourself.

Cherish no unkind nor revengeful feelings towards thy neighbor.

Nature supplies the raw material, education is the manufacturer.

Next to love, sympathy is the divine passion of the human heart.

The committee appointed to count the money in the Treasury has completed the count. It was begun on March 31. The committee has been assisted by from twenty to sixty expert counters. All paper money has been twice counted. The coin was emptied from the bags, and the amount verified by weight. The committee found the total money to be $13,469,297.

Prohibition does not stop drinking; it merely changes the method of it, and by making it lawless makes it furtive, secret and sneaking. A correspondent of the New York Sun has collected the following interesting table, which bears on this point, giving the number of arrests for drunkenness and the percentage for the year 1880, in two towns in Maine, where prohibition is in force, and in six towns and cities in other States, as follows:

	Population.	Arrests.	Per cent.
Hoboken, N. J.	30,999	400	1.29
Newark, N. J.	136,400	1,778	1.31
Burlington, Iowa,	19,450	296	1.51
Bangor, Me.	16,857	242	1.44
Cleveland, Ohio,	160,143	3,000	1.87
Des Moines, Iowa,	22,408	894	3.90
New York, N. Y.	1,106,500	28,000	2.44
Portland, Me.	33,810	1,397	3.99

In 1875-76 the arrests in Bangor were 777, or nearly 5 per cent. Prohibition was introduced in Maine in 1850. In 1880 the increase of all crime was 207 per cent., while the increase of population from 1850 to 1880 was only 11.27 per cent. These figures rest on the authority of Judge Goddard, of Portland.

CLIPPINGS FOR THE CURIOUS.

Dogs live without food on the prairie from twenty-five to thirty-six days.

California's imported ostriches lay eggs weighing three and a half pounds each.

The Romans during the luxurious period were accustomed to eat five meals per day.

In olden days lord mayors were not permitted to go more than five miles from London.

Microscopes were invented by Jansen in Holland about 1590, by Fontana in Italy and Drebbel in Holland about 1621.

A species of opera was introduced in London in 1684, but the first regular performance of an opera did not take place until 1692.

To a camphor tree on the historical Jasper Spring farm, three miles from Savannah, Ga., this country is indebted for all its camphor trees.

It is nothing unusual in Olympia, Washington territory, to see a man taking a wheelbarrow load of silver dollars to the land office to pay for land.

In Corea the common cure-all is ginseng root, the best specimen of which will in times of scarcity command the almost fabulous price of $10,000 a pound.

The little canary seed, which we feed to our birds only, is used by the natives of the Canary Island as an article of domestic food. It contains a large proportion of nutritious farina.

Lecturing in Boston on the sun, Prof. Samuel P. Langley said that if a column of ice having a diameter at its base of forty-five miles and extending to the moon were erected on one of our western prairies, and all the heat of the sun were concentrated suddenly upon it, it would melt and become vapor in a single second.

FEMININE FANCIES.

Gloves remain very long.

Mitts have very long wrists.

Chip bonnets begin to be seen.

Jacques are the reigning roses.

The leading bonnet is the gable-roof poke.

Every kind of plaid and check will be worn.

The newest coiffures show more of the forehead.

Cuffs are little used, tiny frills of lace being preferred.

Roman striped silks are employed for full dress gowns.

Stylish costumes are made with high square shoulders.

The low heeled English walking shoe grows in popularity.

Shaded straw and chenille bonnets are largely imported.

Old rose and garnet make an admirable color combination.

Ostrich feather trimming is much used for elegant wraps.

Black lace bonnets are restored to their former popularity.

The pouf in the back is a feature in new costumes and wraps.

Corded shirrings in single rows and clusters continue in favor.

Jet bids fair to be as popular as ever in decorative dress effects.

Old rose and rose boreale are the new names for ashes of roses.

Elastic cloth made of stockinet is in demand for jackets and bodices.

Rhine stone combs and ornaments are in vogue for hair decoration.

Plain black silks are in greater demand than black satin or surrah.

There is a return of favor to button boots in preference to laced ones.

Red hair is decidedly fashionable, and is arranged in severe simplicity.

The most daring liberties are taken in color combinations this Spring.

Old gold, shot and barred with blue, appears in many Spring fabrics.

Jabots and fichus of mull and lace promise to be as much worn as ever.

One of the late caprices in the way of a lace pin also forms a bouquet holder.

Smoky pinks, greens, blues, and various neutralized tints are in high favor.

Spanish laces are not so exclusively fashionable this Spring as they were last.

Large buckles or slides are the preferred ornaments of large hats and bonnets.

Ribbon bows and cock's comb cockades decorate costumes as well as bonnets.

As many as forty-two different colors and shades appear in the new Spring gloves.

Large buttons are not as much employed for outside wraps as they were last year.

White cashmere serge dresses, worn without a touch of color, are stylish for the house.

The long wrists of mitts and gloves have a fanciful finish of shirring, puffs and ribbon.

Blue and colors, shot with tints to produce opaline effects, bid fair to be much worn.

Buttons are small and inconspicuous, and are no longer used for show, but simply for service.

Ottoman velvet, very thickly ribbed, is the newest fabric for combining with cloth and cashmere.

The features in new polka dotted cotton dress goods is the large size and close proximity of the dots.

The draperies are much bunched around the hips, and even below that point by some dressmakers.

Jet sequins form the ornamental fringe of black sulle tabliers and draperies on black evening toilets.

Carrot colored gloves are worn with absinthe colored dresses at private balls and evening receptions.

Syrays of flowers, beautifully imitated in precious stones, are taking as brooches the lead of all others.

As many as eight different colored ribbon cockades with cock's comb ends are seen on some new bonnets.

Visiting and reception dresses grow more simple, dinner toilets more elaborate, as the season advances.

Bodices of velvet, whether plain or brocaded, are elegant and fashionable for afternoon, dinner and reception toilets.

A Summer Invitation.

We are in receipt of an artistic specimen of beautiful typography in the shape of "A Summer Moth Book" full of advice as to where to spend the coming season's vacation, and information in relation to the ways of getting there, where to stop, what to do while there and an approximate table of expenses. It is issued by the Pennsylvania R. R. Co., and its descriptions of the attractions of Cape May and Atlantic City, by pen and pencil, are decidedly persuasive. Mr. J. R. Wood, General Passenger Agent of the Company, will undoubtedly mail a copy to your address if requested.

New Jersey Oysters.

Statistics for 1882 show that there are 3,540 fishermen engaged in the oyster trade in New Jersey. Over a million dollars in capital is used, and nearly 800 vessels and 1,750 boats employed. 1,760,122 bushels of oysters of all grades were taken; worth nearly two million dollars when sold in market. The report in the pamphlet published by the State is very long and goes into the minutest details of what the compiler calls ostreaculture. The various technical terms used by fishermen on the New Jersey coast are given in full, and the illustrations of oysters, spawn, etc., are very interesting.

Poor-House Abuses in New Jersey.

Startling disclosures made by an investigation into the conduct of Adolph Hamann, the keeper of the Poor of East Brunswick Township, allege that the paupers are given barely enough food to sustain life and are kept without fire and in the most deplorable condition. An account is published of a visit to the institution, which states that the sick are kept in an attic where the snow sifted through the roof, and without proper covering. One man, it is stated, lay with the flesh rotting from his bones from a neglected sore. Another dying, was being treated to rum and whiffs from a tobacco pipe, with the death rattle in his throat.

SHERIFF'S SALE.—In Chancery of New Jersey.—Between Charles S. Baylis, complainant, and Charles Zimmer, et ux. et al., defendants, Fi. fa. for sale of mortgaged premises.

By virtue of the above stated writ of fieri facias to me directed, I shall expose for sale by public vendue, at the Court House, in the City of Elizabeth, N. J., on

WEDNESDAY, THE TWENTY-THIRD DAY OF MAY, A. D. 1883,

At two o'clock p. m. of said day, all that tract or parcel of land and premises hereinafter particularly described, situate, lying and being in the city of Plainfield, in the County of Union, and State of New Jersey.

Beginning at a point in the established side line of Front street, and in line of lot now owned by William H. Voorhees and in line of the party wall in the brick building as it now stands, erected by William H. Voorhees, which said party wall is the division line between said Voorhees and the heirs of the Williamson estate; thence south forty-six degrees and fifteen minutes east, along the centre line of said party wall and in continuation thereof eighty-six and one tenth (86.1 ft.) feet to a point in line of lands formerly owned by J. D. Titsworth, now said Voorhees' corner; thence north forty-four degrees and thirty-eight minutes east along said Voorhees' line three and three-tenths (3.3 ft.) to another corner of said Voorhees' land, thence south forty-six degrees and twenty-one minutes east, seventy-seven and six-tenths (77.6 ft.) feet, and still along said Voorhees' and others' line to a post, being a corner of the Congregational church lot and of Wooden Brothers' lot; thence north forty-one degrees and forty-nine minutes east, twenty-one and twenty-five one hundredths (21.25 ft.) feet along said Wooden Brothers' land, to a point and corner of lot now owned by Adam Fritz (formerly J. S. Garretson); thence in a northwesterly direction and following line of land of said Fritz, one hundred and sixty-three and eight-tenths (163.8 ft.) feet to a point in the established side line of Front street aforesaid; thence along said side of Front street south forty-five degrees and ten minutes west thirty (30 ft.) feet to a point and place of beginning, excepting and reserving, nevertheless, a strip of land ten feet in width, heretofore conveyed by said Zimmer and wife to Adam Fritz, from the rear of the above described premises, by deed dated September 2, 1878, which said strip is to be used as a driveway by said Zimmer and wife and Fritz and their heirs and assigns forever, in connection with a driveway of ten feet in width over land of said Fritz (formerly Manning), extending from the premises above described to Exchange Alley; the right to use which, said last named driveway having been conveyed to said Zimmer and wife by deed of said Fritz and wife, dated September 2, 1878 and granting also the right to use said driveway its entire length, from premises of said Fritz (formerly Garretson), to Exchange Alley, as fully as the same was reserved and granted, respectively, in the deeds to and from said Fritz, above mentioned.

FROM THE SOUTH.

A PERFECT COMBINATION WITH TWO SALIENT ADVANTAGES—WHY IT CONCERNS YOU.

"There is no mistake about it," remarked Dr. M. F. Flower, of Gallatin, Missouri, "BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTERS are one of the happiest combinations ever produced. They have two kinds of advantages over all others, which we may call the minor and the major. First, they are clean and pleasant to use, never soiling the skin nor the linen of the wearer. Second, they act quickly and powerfully. I have tried the Capcine Plaster on myself for pneumonia, and on my patients for various diseases, such as Neuralgia, Muscular Rheumatism, Lumbago, Kidney trouble, etc., and in all cases relief has followed in from three to forty-eight hours."

Dr. Flower merely voices the written or oral opinion of thousands in his profession. BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTERS are the perfect external application. The genuine have the word CAPCINE cut in the centre. Price 25 cents.

POETRY.

GLOW WORM.

BY EDWARD SPENCER.

Two sisters—Grief and Pain—
Wrench at the leaden chain
Linked to my heart.
Twinned in the womb of woe,
Twins by my path they go,
Never apart.

Narrow that pathway word
Pacing from night to morn
Athwart my cell.
Ten paces south and north,
Ten paces back and forth,
Lorn sentinel!

Never the light of day
Cheerily comes that way,
Nor the sunshine;
Into the point, dim shaft,
Where spiders ply their craft,
Dawn sends no sign.

Rays of the grimy lamp,
Under the arches damp,
Sombre and black,
Faintly drop down and play
On the wan face, but may
Not light my track.

Once—not so long ago—
A glow-worm's light pulsed slow
And dim hereby.
Only a glow-worm's light,
But it was strong and bright
To the prisoned eye.

Reckless, then, of the pain,
Heedless of fettering chain,
Lured by that spark,
I knelt to the insect's glow;
Hoped, almost lived, when lo!
All, all was dark!

Twin sisters—Grief and Pain—
Take up the links again
Here in my cell.
Ten paces, as before,
Hoping to hope no more—
So—all is well!

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE LAST WILL.

I.

There's many lovely towns lying along the Connecticut river, but none more lovely than that near which one of the Regicides concealed himself for a long time to escape pursuit. This old town has a double row of elm and maple trees on either side of its principal street, which extends two miles in length along the river. About half a mile from the southern end of the street stands the old Walbridge place. This has stood for nearly 200 years, and so many old memories are clustered about it that relatives near and remote would consider it a great misfortune if the estate were allowed to pass out of the family.

In the south parlor of the old house, on a bleak evening in January, 1860, an old man lay dying. He was the owner of the Walbridge homestead, and the last of the old stock. He had one son who was now standing by his bedside, and a dearly beloved daughter who for fifteen years had cared for him, and who now sat chafing his cold hands while her two children knelt at the foot of the bed, shading their eyes, dreading to know what this death-bed might reveal to them. John Walbridge, the old man's son, a wealthy distiller in a distant town, could scarcely restrain his selfish impatience that he had been detained here since yesterday, and his old father was still alive. The old man stirred, his eyes slowly opened.

"Mary, I want to see Mary."

"Here I am, father."

"Alone, alone."

Reluctantly the brother left the room, and the children were about to follow when the old man raised his head feebly—

"Robert—"

The mother, believing Robert to be wanted, detained him, carefully closing the door. With difficulty the dying man spoke. His words were disconnected, but he made them understand that he wanted to speak of his will, and he twice or thrice repeated, "The last—the last." They imagined that there were more than one will and that he had been unable or unwilling to choose between them.

"Afraid of John"—gasped the old man. "Look out—" Again he muttered incoherently, "I put it in the—"

Thinking to help his feebleness, Mary asked, "Did you leave your last will in your study?"

A decided negative movement of the head and a glance of his eyes answered her. "In the—" He stopped. Mary turned her head and saw her brother John standing in the door. The dying man had seen him first and the sight arrested the words that trembled on his lips. The effort at conversation had exhausted the sick man, and although he several times opened his eyes and once or twice pressed Mary's hand feebly, he spoke no more and at midnight he died.

Robert, a lad of sixteen, was shrewd enough not to mention the conversation, which had evidently not been overheard by his Uncle John, and who, as only the last disjointed sentence reached his ears, had failed in his object in eavesdropping.

During the interval between the old man's death and burial John Walbridge, as the only son and sole heir of his father's large estate, remained master of the house. He had just now a special reason for discovering any will made of late by his father, for in a recent visit he had with some difficulty convinced his father of the incapacity of any woman to manage business; and having given his promise that he would provide for his sister Mary and her children liberally, he had the satisfaction of seeing his father sign a will to him the bulk of the family property, leaving only a small balance in bequests to various relatives, and to the church of which he was a member and supporter. Much to John's anxiety, however, he had not seen the will witnessed, for his father was unwilling to make Mary a witness of her own misfortune, and the one domestic was away for the night. John, however, exacted from his father the promise that the will should be witnessed in the morning, nothing having been changed meanwhile. He had such confidence in his father's word that he left early in the morning, without having ascertained anything save that his father was as well as usual.

II.

To the funeral of Deacon John Walbridge gathered all the old settlers for miles around. He had been well known and beloved, and many were the wishes expressed for Mary's fortune, and many expressed the hope that John would not inherit any of the old father's honestly earned wealth to add to his nefarious trade. Robert, finding that his Uncle John had discovered his father's will in the study, and remembering that his grandfather had stoutly denied that it was in that room, spent much time in haunting other places of concealment with which the old house was well supplied. His efforts met with no success. Mary, too, sought in many places, but finally gave up the search in vain.

After the funeral, according to custom, the will was read, and John Walbridge was found to be sole heir. The lawyer who read the document continued to curiously examine it after he had ceased reading, and finally called John's attention to some words faintly traced below the signature. These they finely made out to read:

"My curse upon him if he does not care for Mary and her children."

For a time these words occurred frequently to John's mind, and made him uncomfortable; but he soon dismissed the thought of fear, and camly bade Mary to remember that she with her two children had had a good home here for fifteen years, when she had been left a widow and penniless. These children had been thus far kept in school and well clothed, and as Robert was now of an age to earn his own living, he would advise his sister to place the boy without delay in some clerkship. He had, himself, some influence in his own town, and he would cheerfully use it in Robert's behalf. As for the girl, as she was yet too young to help herself, he would undertake to clothe her and keep her in the same school where she now was until she was sixteen years old. He intended to sell the old house as soon as opportunity offered, but until such time as he could find a buyer Mary might remain there with her child as she had done. Mary was so indignant at her brother's treatment of her that she would have rejected the proposal with the scorn it merited had not Robert begged her to submit. He was still positive that another will was somewhere concealed, and to leave the house was to lose the chance of finding its hiding place. Thus it happened that the uncle returned to his business leaving his sister and her children in charge of the old house.

III.

Robert's one idea, now, was to find the will that he was sure must be concealed somewhere in the house. With patience almost inexhaustible, he turned out the contents of every old bureau, ransacked the frames for any little drawer that might be concealed from casual observation, he examined every cupboard, the boards in the floor, the old clock, the old bedsteads with a curious drawer under the head—a place which ancestors thought to be a safe hiding-place for valuables while the owner slept. Robert dreamed out strange holes and corners which in his feverish wakening he could not find. Often did Mary advise her son to give up the idea which absorbed him and try to find assortment suited to his age and attainments. Not to be beholding to his uncle, Robert sought and obtained a situation as a clerk in the small store to which the postoffice was attached. He thus learned the method of two kinds of business at once, and proved himself so competent that there was soon no danger of his being supplanted by any one else so long as he chose to retain the position.

Nothing more was said about the sale of the old place, but a man came once to look at the premises, and Robert soon after heard a rumor of a mortgage upon the property. John Walbridge had not always been such a hard-hearted brother as he now proved himself to Mary in her emergency. He had of late been conducting his business on a large scale, and speculated largely in tobacco. He had lost large sums upon the crops left unsold upon his hands, and his business at the distillery was thus crippled. He hoped that the next season would be better. If he could only dispose of the large stock of tobacco stored in his barns he would be all right once more. While he was in torture between hope on the one hand and fear of failure on the other, his immense barns, all situated near each other, and filled with choice tobacco, caught fire from some cause unknown on a blustering night. The dry and papery stock burned like tinder. Nothing was saved, but he said to himself: "After all, the insurance will help me out of my difficulties." But on arriving at the office of the agent he received the overwhelming news that "the policy expired yesterday."

Ruin stared him in the face. His creditors on learning the state of the case, and remembering the insurance as he had done, presented their claims. Many of them had waited for months, as a creditor often trusts a man reputed to be wealthy. A heavy mortgage had been put upon the distillery property to raise money to pay those creditors who were the most clamorous. The old homestead also was mortgaged heavily to meet the demands of other creditors. These were the largest, but not by any means all his debts, and, worst of all, the wretched man had not a spark of conscience left; otherwise he must have been harrassed day and night because of his broken promise to his father.

IV.

Nearly two years passed while all these changes were transpiring. Robert had become a skillful clerk. Bessie had been kept steadily in school, and in June would graduate from the high school in her own town. She would soon be competent to take care of herself. In John Walbridge's life, meanwhile, one misfortune seemed to pave the way for another. The loss of his property was followed by the death of his wife. He had but one child, a daughter, whom he dearly loved. For her he had intended to amass a fortune. This child, Mary, had been blessed with a good and judicious mother. Mary had been subjected to many a taunt aimed at the distiller's daughter. John loved his daughter dearly, and had often promised himself that when he had cleared $50,000 for her he would give up the business altogether for her sake.

Thus matters stood in May, 1862, when two men from the city presented themselves at the office of John Walbridge, and reminding him that the mortgages in their hands were legally due, demanded payment of the same. John was unable to pay, but he had fully expected to be able to come to some terms with them and thus put off the evil day. He was doomed to disappointment. "Pay now or we attach all." He was forced to yield to the situation, having no money wherewith to pay.

That night the poor man fell a victim to some shock that deprived him ever after of his mental faculties. He never knew his daughter again. He was never able to wait upon himself more. He was a helpless burden on a faithful daughter's hands.

V.

Out of the dear old house Mary and her two children were driven. The furniture, however, they were allowed to retain, and with it they fitted up a small house which Robert's means enabled him to hire. As the uncle and cousin were destitute they were welcomed into the household, and the two little families were dependent upon the exertions of Robert. However, when the new school year opened Bessie received an appointment as teacher, and thus was enabled to assist her brother.

Among the furniture of the homestead was a very old piano, with little square . in size, like old-fashioned table legs, and fitted with round, brass ornaments we sometimes see on bedsteads and bureaus in our grand-mother's rooms. After John Walbridge and his daughter became part of the little household Mary sorely missed her piano, but the cousins laughingly assured her they could well supply the deficiency. They all hastened to the lumber room and endeavored to open the old spinet, but it was locked—nailed up, in fact.

Robert in his enthusiasm broke open the old instrument; but to the disappointment of all not one string was left. The case was full of papers and bundles of documents.

An idea occurred to Robert—the missing will.

"Keep back. Don't touch a thing for your lives, until I look!" he cried.

He quickly removed roll after roll of dusty papers, and at last his eyes caught sight of one envelope fresher and less dusty than the rest.

"Last will and Testament of John Walbridge"—the date but a few days preceding the old man's death, later than the one by which John Walbridge, Jr., had come into possession of his father's property. Robert's breath came thick and fast.

"See! see! mother, look! I cannot read," and he fainted quite away.

There it was—the missing will; and as John Walbridge could not mortgage what was not his—by this, the latest will, and the old homestead belonged to Mary and her children.

Imagine the rejoicing. They softened it as much as possible for cousin Mary's sake, and when after the father's death she became Robert's wife she had the full share of all the pleasures that the old homestead afforded.

TO MAKE A LIVE TOWN.

1.—Sell your building lots at a reasonable prices.

2.—If you can afford to do so, donate a building lot for some large busines enterprise, and thereby enhance the value of town property.

3.—Induce business men to locate in your own town.

4.—Patronize the business men of your own town.

5.—Always sum up your expenses when you visit places outside of your own town to buy goods.

6.—Speak well of worth public enterprises.

7.—If anything should be undertaken that may be of benefit to the town, do not speak ill of it to others because you happen to be prejudiced against it.

8.—Speak well to strangers of your town and people.

9.—If you have surplus money, do not invest it in far-off speculations, but give yourself and your town the benefit of it by establishing some profitable factory.

10.—Encourage your local newspaper by subscribing for and advertising in it.

ABOUT YOUR DAUGHTERS.

Give your daughters a thorough education. Teach them to cook and prepare the food of the household. Teach them to wash, to iron, to darn stockings, to sew on buttons, to make their own dresses. Teach them to make bread, and that a good kitchen lessens the doctor's account. Teach them that he only lays up money whose expenses are less than his income, and that all grow poor who have to spend more than they receive. Teach them that a calico dress paid for fits better than a silken one unpaid for. Teach them that a full healthy face displays greater lustre than fifty consumptive beauties. Teach them to purchase, and to see that the account corresponds with the purchase. Teach them good common sense, self-help and industry. Teach them that an honest mechanic in his working dress is a better object of esteem than a dozen haughty finely-dressed idlers. Teach them gardening and the pleasures of nature. Teach them, if you can afford it, music, painting, etc., but consider them as secondary objects only. Teach them that a walk is more salutary than a ride in a carriage. Teach them to reject with disdain all appearances, and to use only "yes" or "no" in good earnest. Teach that happiness of matrimony depends neither on external experiences nor on wealth, but on the man's character.

BARGAINING WITH A PUMP.

Some thirty years ago an intemperate man was reformed by being refused one cherry. Penniless he went to a public house one morning where he had squandered many a shilling, to get a drink "on tick." The landlady refused to trust him. Seeing a plate of luscious ripe cherries on the bar, he asked for but one. "Save your money and buy your own cherries," was her surly reply. "I will," he said, and he did. His wounded pride forced him to reflect: reflection insured amendment. From that morning he was reformed.

The following story tells of a flannel weaver who was also induced by a surly answer to reflect and then to make a good bargain with a pump.

This man had saved a guinea for the purpose of having a whole week's dissipation. He began on Monday, spending three shillings per day for seven days; on the morning of the eighth day he was burning with thirst, but his money was gone. He went to the back door of the place where he had spent his guinea, to beg a pint on trust.

Judy, the landlady was mopping the passage; he stood looking at Judy, with his cracked lips, parched tongue and bloodshot eyes, expecting her to ask him to take just a drop; but she did, and he requested her to trust him for only one pint.

With an indignant look of scorn and contempt she replied: "Trust thee! thou dirty, idle vagabond! Set a step in this house and I will dash this mop in thy face.

The poor wretch hung down his head in shame. He was leaning against a pump; and after a little study began to talk to the pump:

"Well, Pump," he said, "I have not spent a guinea with thee, Pump; wilt thou trust me a drop?"

He lifted up the handle, put his burning mouth to the spout and drank his fill; this done, he again said to the pump:

"Thank thee, Pump; and now, hear me, Pump. I will not enter a public house again for the next seven years; and, Pump, thou art a witness."

The bargain was kept, and this man afterward became a respectable manufacturer, and often said it was a grand thing for him that Judy threatened to dash the mop in his face.

The fishing days are now at hand.

Checkers is looked upon as a square game.

ARTIFICIAL DIMPLES.

Learning that there was a place in the city where dimples were made to order, I went there out of curiosity. I was shown into a parlor somewhat resembling a dentist's room. To me presently came a dapper little man. I wanted a dimple in my arm, and told him so.

My arms being bare, and the exact spot indicated, he placed a small glass tube, the orifice of which was extremely small, upon the spot. This tube had working within it a piston, and was so small that when the handle was drawn up the air was exhausted from the tube and it adhered to the flesh, raising a slight protuberance. Around this raised portion the operator daintily tied a bit of scarlet silk, and then took away his suction machine. The little point of the skin that was thus raised he sliced off with a wicked-looking knife, bringing the blood. I tried hard not to scream, but it was so unexpected that I had to. Then he bound up the arm, placing over the wound a small silver object like an inverted cone, the point of which was rounded and polished. This little point was adjusted so as to depress the exact centre of the cut.

Then he told me to go away and not touch the spot until the next day.

When I came at this time he dressed my arm again, and this operation was repeated for five days, when the wound was healed. The silver cone was removed, and there, sure enough, beneath it was the prettiest dimple in the world! And all I had to pay was $10.—Chicago Tribune.

AMERICAN.

We want in America a more positive and universal type of Americanism, and far less aping after foreign feelings and manners.

Attend a concert, and all the music, vocal and instrumental, is Italian, none evincing American sentiment. Such affairs are doubtless artistic and to the musically educated attractive, but does not national pride justly demand the cultivation of patriotic melody to an equal extent, at least, with foreign?

Dine at a first-class hotel, so called, and the bill of fare laid before you is French from beginning to end. Is there any lack of dignity and intelligence in applying American names to the articles of food we eat? Has our mother tongue become so degenerated that we are ashamed to call plain roast beef—roast beef?

Then, again, in Colleges and Schools, elaborate care is bestowed upon languages and studies of slight practical utility, while the vitally important knowledge of Our Country, its history, institutions, biographies, literature, laws and resources, are passed as of inferior account. In that particular more positive Americanism is sadly needed.

There will always be a certain number of noodles, now denominated "dudes," bent on imitating absurd foreign fashions and despising home common sense, but every genuine American ought to decree that America is capable and worthy to lead in all things.

Let us boldly stamp on all we do the proud title of Americanism!

GOOD AND BAD.

Men have the right to honestly accumulate, peaceably possess, and freely enjoy and dispose of worldly riches.

To deny that would be favoring agrarianism.

Rich men, when actuated by benevolence and patriotism, are blessings, but when slaves to avarice, deaf to the cries of want, and hardened against all the noble instincts of humanity, they blight where they ought to prosper.

The roll of enduring fame contains the names of many wealthy Americans who made themselves illustrious by the fact that their life-actions and departing bequests were for the good of human kind, and who never bowed in worship at the idol shrine of self.

The greater the number of such rich men, better off will be any community wherein they may reside.

We honor wealth of that character.

But there is another class of millionaires, the product of recent years, which we are bound to condemn.

Not content with grasping financial power regardless of unscrupulous means, they seek to make that power absolute, by concentrating under their own control viciously acquired special privileges, and treating with contempt the legal rights freedom designed for other people.

To secure supremacy, such financial cormorants are found using their ill-gotten wealth not only to crush out honest industry and legitimate enterprise, but to pollute the very fountain of free government by manipulating nominations and elections, corrupting executives and legislators, and even, as has been suspected in some instances, the judiciary.

They are workers of evil, and the people of the United States cannot be too sharply on the alert to thwart their designs.

They are MONOPOLISTS.

* * *

When elections are corrupted, legislatures purchased, and officials debauched, the foundations of liberty are sapped.

* * *

Democracy guards with jealous care the rights of all alike, and seeks to perpetuate the institutions of freedom it first established.

* * *

The political freedom enjoyed by the people of the United States sprang from a protest against exclusive privileges granted by a British King over one hundred years ago.

* * *

Monopolists now aim to fasten upon this country a system of laws and usages in direct antagonism to popular liberty won by the Revolution and ordained as governing authority by the Constitution.

* * *

The Governor has signed commissions for the following fish wardens: Levi French and Jos. R. Ivine for Burlington county; Edwin F. Westcott for Cape May county, and Cornelius W. Casther for Middlesex county.

* * *

The triumph of Democratic principles will promote the general welfare of the people, bring back the Government to the economy and honesty of its earlier days, and check the growing power of sordid combination and class favoritism.

* * *

Statesmanship of the present day cannot accomplish more desirable results than the framing and enacting of laws, through the operation of which, capital will accumulate in the hands of the producing many instead of being controlled by the speculating few.

* * *

Democracy recognizes the millionaire to be as good as any other man, and as much entitled to personal and property protection under the law, but it will not sanction the swallowing up of liberty by property any more than the destruction of property by mob violence.

The great bridge connecting New York and Brooklyn, which has been built at an expense of about fifteen millions of dollars, is to be formally opened to the public on the 24th inst. Hon. W. M. Evarts has been invited to speak for New York, and Rev. Dr. Storrs for Brooklyn.

* * *

A New York journal well remarks—"The opening of the Brooklyn Bridge is to be celebrated by firing $5,000 worth of rockets from the summit of the structure. It would be a much more practical and rational method of celebrating the event to fire $5,000 worth of beef and bread into five thousand poor families."

HANGING OF JOE BRADY.

DUBLIN, May 14.—Joe Brady, convicted of participation in the the murder of Lord Frederick Cavendish and Mr. Forster on the 6th of last May, was hanged at 8 o'clock this morning. A vast concourse of people gathered outside the prison yard. A strong force of troops and police were present to preserve order.

Brady rose at 6 o'clock. At 6:35 Canon Kennedy, of St. James' Church, and Father O'Reilly administered the sacrament to him in the prison chapel. The three remained praying until the arrival of Marwood, the hangman. Brady submitted quietly while his arms were being pinioned, and walked slowly and unflinchingly to the scaffold. The black flag, indicating that the execution had taken place, was hoisted over the prison at 8:02. Almost immediately after the flag was raised, a hearse and a coach with mourners were seen at a distance coming in the direction of the prison. The police interfered and prevented the vehicles from approaching. Brady was visited by his mother last evening. She was heard to exclaim, "Mind, Joe, no statement." Brady replied, "Don't think I am a fool." It is stated that the mother threatened to disown her son if he gave any information. Brady made no statement. One of the last things he did was to write a letter to his mother. He carried a prayer book in his hand to the scaffold and was thoroughly resigned and firm. His body fell nine feet and his death was instantaneous. The number of persons in the crowd outside the jail, it is estimated, reached ten thousand. The throng is said to have been even greater than any of those which collected when executions were public. At the moment the black flag was seen over the jail a cry was raised of "Hats off," and every head was uncovered. The crowd shortly afterwards dispersed quietly.

An Irishman, who was very near-sighted, and who was about to fight a duel, insisted that he should stand six paces nearer to his antagonist than the other did to him, and they were both to fire at the same time.

German music, merriment and song awoke the echoes in the Orange Mountain ranges from Chatham to Paterson, a distance of about twenty miles, at an early hour Sunday morning, the occasion being the annual celebration of the Whit-Sunday Waldfest, or forest festival. Hundreds upon hundreds of men, women and children of German birth and descent were driven to the mountains from Newark, Elizabeth, Paterson, Hoboken, Jersey City, New York and other places to hail the raising sun with songs and shouts of welcome.

It is estimated that the Florida Ship-Canal, for the construction of which a company has just been formed, will cost thirty million dollars. Of this sum twenty-six million is said to have been subscribed, and engineers are to commence the survey once. The proposed route will leave the St. Johns River about twenty miles above Jacksonville, and thence on a direct line as nearly as possible to the Suwanee River, on the Gulf of Mexico, making a tidewater canal of less than 100 miles in length, and deep enough to float the largest ocean steamers from Ocean to Gulf.

It is apparent that Plainfield is infested with fire-bugs, the recent numerous incendiary fires and attempts to fire, clearly indicating such a state of affairs. That it is no easy matter to ferret out the guilty wretches may be true, but an attempt should be made to do so at whatever cost. Morristown was once infested by a gang of fire-bugs, who were finally brought to justice and punished by the aid of shrewd detective work. That is the plan that Plainfield should pursue. Good detectives should be set at work immediately, at whatever cost to the city, and bring these fiends to speedy justice.

Mrs. Jesse R. Grant, mother of ex-President Grant, died suddenly Friday afternoon of last week at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Corbin, No. 522 Pavonia avenue, Jersey City Heights. Mrs. Grant, whose maiden name was Hannah Simpson, was born in Berks county, Penn., on November 23, 1799. At an early age her father removed, together with his family, to Claremont, Ohio. It was here she first met Jesse R. Grant, whom she subsequently married, and by whom she had six children. Mrs. Grant lived in Covington, Ky., for a number of years, her husband being postmaster there during the administration of her son. In 1879 she went to Jersey City.

The Law of Partners.

Wednesday Justice Nodyne rendered a decision on partnership law which may be of interest to our readers:

A and B were partners in 1873. The partnership was then dissolved, and notice of the dissolution given by advertising same in one of the city papers. Previous to the dissolution the firm were liable to the bank for a note discounted by it upon which the firm were endorsers. In 1876 three years after the dissolution of the firm the note was renewed, A, one of the partners, then endorsing the firm-name of A. & B., thereon without the authority of B. Under the ruling of the Supreme Court in Farmer's & Mechanic's vs. Green 1, Vroom 316 and the law as laid down in Cowen Treaties, Section 196—and Story on Partnership, Section 323—Justice Nodyne decided that B. could not be held. Nelson Runyon, Esq., represented the Bank and Messrs. Jackson & Codington, the defendant B.

A Wedding Anniversary.

At the residence of William Sullivan on West Third street, Monday evening, the twentieth anniversary of the wedding of that gentleman and his wife was celebrated in a manner that will long be remembered by those who attended. Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan proved themselves most admirable hosts, while their daughter was untiring in her efforts to promote the pleasure of all and was decidedly successful in her endeavors to gratify the desires of everyone. A large number of invited guests were present from this city, New York, Brooklyn, Elizabeth and elsewhere. The toilets of the ladies were elegant, and the array of presents as handsome and costly as they were numerous. Among these were especially admired an entire tea set in french china, hand painted, and one in Japanese ware; a toilet set of Bohemian glass; silver spoon vase, gold lined; cut glass ice pitcher and preserve dish; silver pickle service; a table lamp of pesotinne ware; a full set of toilet damask; a glass stand holding a magnificently frosted bridal cake; napkin rings, cut glass perfumery bottles, vases, etc. The rooms on the first floor were cleared for dancing, and about 40 couples to the harmonious strains of Professor Frazee's quartette band, kept up the reel, the jig, the quadrille and the round dance until daylight of the following morning. A supper was served just after midnight from a table handsomely adorned with quantities of cut flowers and fairly loaded with tempting edibles and fine liquors. Nothing in the slightest way occured to interfere with the entire gratification of the guests, and no like affair will ever be more pleasurably remembered.

Shad Fishing.

The Howell & Hunt fishery at Gloucester City, is one of the most extensive institutions of the kind in the country. The seine used is over a mile in length, and is drawn in with the aid of horses and a large gang of colored fishermen. It takes about two hours to complete a haul. Crowds of people visit the fishery every day to witness the operation of casting and drawing in this monster seine, the monotonous singing of the colored men, in their quaint dialect, as they haul away on the lines, standing waist deep in the water, eliciting laughter from the bystanders. Last Monday the largest haul of the season was made, 1,500 fine shad being taken in the net. Another noticeable feature of Gloucester City is its planked shad dinners. To fully appreciate the worth of this delectable fish, one must partake of a planked shad. The modus operandi is to split the fish open on the back and lay the flesh side out flat upon a thick plank, which is then placed in close proximity to a bed of hot coals and thus cooked. It was our good fortune to partake of such a dinner recently at the solicitation of that prince of caterers and good fellows, Mr. Wm. Thompson, who is proprietor of Thompson's Hotel at Gloucester City. Mr. T. is well known throughout the State, and his handsome grounds are daily visited by hundreds of people from Philadelphia and surrounding country to enjoy the hospitality and excellent mess to be had there. "Billy" has the thanks of the friends he so generously provided for the day in question, and a vow has been registered that a "return trip" shall soon be made and another onslaught made on his planked shad and other delicacies.

Jersey Central Election.

The annual election of Directors of the C. R. R. of N. J. was held in Jersey City on Friday last. The following ticket was chosen without opposition, 154,333 votes being cast in favor of it out of a total possible vote of 185,632 shares; Henry S. Little, John Kean, Franklin B. Gowen, Edward C. Knight, Robert Garrett, Sidney Shepard, Theodore F. Randolph, Samuel Sloan and J. Kennedy Tod. The only change from last year's board is the choice of Mr. Tod to fill the place of Edward Clark, deceased. The election of officers will take place this week. The shareholders passed a resolution, recommending a lease of the Central to the Philadelphia and Reading, as follows:

Resolved, That the stockholders hereby approve of the proposed lease and contract to and with the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company, and request the directors to execute and carry the same into effect immediately upon the company acquiring the legal power to act in the premises by the termination of the receivership.

The vote in favor of the resolution represented 138,951 shares. The report of the Master in Chancery relating to the termination of the Receivership, will be presented to the Chancellor of New Jersey some time this week.

The following is the summary of the company's last year's business. The gross earnings for the year ended December 31, 1882, were $11,312,296, an increase of $384,792; operating expenses, $6,221,225, an increase of $68,430; net earnings, $5,091,071, an increase of $316,272; interest, rentals, etc., $4,493,794, an increase of $321,651, and surplus, $597,276, a decrease of $5,379. The increase in fixed charges is due to the payment of interest on American Dock and Improvement bonds funded in 1881.

SCOTCH PLAINS PARAGRAPHS.

A new fire company has been organised in the Village under the title of "Bucket Company." Over 25 names now appear on the roll book.

The press of late have taken up the controversy of what constitutes a gentleman. We have always been under the impression that a gentleman was one who wore percale shirt collars, white hat with a weed on it and wasn't afraid of a hotel clerk.

A literary entertainment under the auspices of the F. C's of Good-Will Lodge, No. 101, K. of P. was largely attended Wednesday evening. The programme was a thoroughly enjoyable one, and not the least satisfactory of which was a recitation by Mr. John Carney of Plainfield.

There was a large and pleasant gathering at the residence of Mr. Thomas Paff, on Monday Evening last, the occasion being the 25th anniversary of Mr. & Mrs. Thomas Paff. Music, dancing and refreshments were the order of the evening, and the festivities were kept up until the approach of dawn. The presents on the occasion were many.

The death under the most lamentable circumstances of the wife of Dr. F. W. Westcott, at this place last Friday, called forth the entire sympathy of the many friends she had drawn to her by her innumerable virtues. The deceased was an active worker in the church and Sunday-School, and one who will be sadly missed from the community.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Mahlon H. Ferris has had a valuable horse very sick the past week.

Chas. Hanaman has about completed his five cottages on Clark street. They make a fine improvement to that portion of the town.

The Rev. N. W. Cadwell of the Presbyterian church, left on Monday last on a trip through New York state. Rumor hasit that he is to bring a partner for life home with him.

Prof. William H. Elston of Public School No. 10, is engaged in taking the census of the children in our school district, which has to be done in the month of May in every year.

The corps of civil engineers who have been stopping at Westfield Hotel for some time, and engaged in making surveys for a new line line of railroad, left for a short time expecting soon to return and continue their work.

On last Sunday afternoon the M. E. Sunday School was addressed by the Rev. J. Riggs of Cranford, N. J., subject "Americans in Constantinople." Mr. Riggs handled the subject very ably, as he has recently been on, a visit to that city.

Agustus K. Gale and William Gilby the two petit jurors from Westfield for the May term were impaneled as jurors on Tuesday last, on the murder trial of Burke, Dunn and Noonan, for the killing of Thomas Mc Keon at Elizabethport last September.

On Sunday morning last, at 2 o'clock, Mrs. Frank H. Green, residing on Union street, departed this life after a lingering illness. Her funeral occurred on Wednesday the 16th inst. at 2 p. m., from her late residence. The body was placed in vault in Fairview Cemetery.

The M. E. church was well filled on last Wednesday evening, it being an entertainment for the benefit of the Ladies' Aid Society connected with the church. The Programme consisted of readings, recitations and solos by Mr. Anthony, Mr. Duall and Miss Cooper all residents of our town.

DEATHS.

CANNON—In this city, May 13th, 1883, of enteric fever, Charles W., son of Edward S. and Anna M. Cannon, aged 15 years, 9 months.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time, and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.
WALTER L. HETFIELD, City Clerk.
Plainfield, N. J., May 7, 1883.

AN ORDINANCE

For the assessment and collection of a Tax for the purposes of the Library Fund of the City of Plainfield for the year 1883.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That in addition to taxes for the current expenses and for the support of the poor of the City of Plainfield, there shall be assessed, levied and collected by tax for the purposes of the Library Fund of the City of Plainfield for the year 1883, the sum of Eight Hundred Dollars ($800), at the same time and in like manner as the tax for current expenses of the city for the year 1883 is required by law to be assessed, levied and collected, and the moneys when collected shall be held and used as provided in Chapter 162 Laws of New Jersey for 1879.

AN ORDINANCE

For the assessment of property and the collection of taxes within the city of Plainfield for the year 1883.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. There shall be assessed, levied and collected by tax for the current expenses of the city of Plainfield, for the year eighteen hundred and eighty-three, the sum of ten thousand dollars ($10,000).

Sec. 2. There shall be further assessed, levied and collected by tax for the support of the city poor of said city of Plainfield, for the year eighteen hundred and eighty-three, the sum of thirty-five hundred ($3500), at the same time and in the same manner as the said sum of ten thousand dollars, mentioned in section one of this ordinance is assessed, levied and collected.

Adopted by the Common Council May 7, 1883.
Approved May 8, 1883.
WM. B. MAXSON, Mayor.
Attest: WALTER L. HETFIELD, City Clerk.

Surrogate's Order to Limit Creditors.

Union County, Surrogate's Office, May 4th, 1883.

Charles P. Gillis the Executor of Susan [illegible], deceased.

On application of the above named Executor it is ordered that said Executor give public notice to the creditors of the estate of said decedent to bring in their debts, demands or claims against the same, under oath, within nine months from this date, by setting up a copy of this order, within twenty days hereafter, in five of the most public places in the county of Union, for two months, and also within the said twenty days, by advertising the same in the CONSTITUTIONALIST for the same space of time; and if any creditor shall neglect to exhibit his or her debt, demand or claim, within the said period of nine months, public notice being given as aforesaid, such creditor shall be forever barred of his or her action therefor against the said Executor.

IT is remarked that the wheat fields never looked better at this season of the year than they do at the present. The bright green grain covers every foot of ground sowed last Fall, and there are few bare places. The prospects are good for a bountiful harvest of grain and grass. The outlook for a plentiful supply of all kinds of fruit was never more promising.

A BILL to prevent editors from printing free puffs of strawberry festivals and church fairs is badly needed. PARTIES having telephones in this city last evening were favored with hearing portions of the concert held in Plainfield. "Bonnie Lassie Jean" could be distinctly recognized as one of the pieces. —New Brunswick Times. All of which speaks volumes regarding the accomplishment of New Brunswick telephones, by reason of the fact that there has not been a concert in this city in two weeks, nor have we been afflicted with "Bonnie Lassie Jean" in six months.

AT the last meeting of the old Board of Freeholders of Somerset county, it was resolved to refuse to agree with the proposition made by the Union county Freeholders to substitute a wider and more appropriate line bridge at Grove street, this city, in place of the one now in course of construction. They also ordered the work to be continued under the former contract. The Union county Board, of course, can acquiesce, or not, as they see fit. We think the action taken by the Somerset Board ill-advised and injudicious. Both counties want a better bridge at this point. It is to be hoped the new Board will rescind the resolution and do as the Union county Board have done.

ARRANGEMENTS have been almost completed whereby the Oil Cloth works will be turned over to a new firm that has formed, and the factory will probably start up again next Monday.

ON our second page appears the advertisement of those enjoyable entertainments by the "Home Dramatics" of this city. In our next issue we will give full particulars of the nature of this pleasing affair.

IF you feel that you can't stand the heat and must dispense with your flannels, then just don't do it. Many victims of chronic rheumatism have brought incurable suffering on themselves by such imprudence.

THE newly elected Board of Chosen Freeholders of Monmouth Co., composed of 13 Democrats and 2 Republicans, have elected John T. Hait (Dem.) as County Collector, and John S. Luffborrow (Rep.) as County Auditor.

THE trial of Noonan, Dunn, and Burns, the three men charged with having, during the Elizabethport riot in September last, murdered Thomas Mc Keon, was begun in the Union County Court at Elizabeth, Tuesday last.

THERE is no time of the year when a cool day is so disagreeable as in May, when the fires are out, and you expect warm weather. You can only keep comfortable by brisk walking, sitting in the kitchen or going to bed.

ALL hail to Mr. John L. Sullivan. Despite hemorrhages and lengthy sprees he was able to knock England's representative, Mr. Charles L. Mitchell, all over a ring last Monday evening in New York, and so demonstrated his superiority as a brute above all brutes.

CONSIDERING the frequency with which oil tanks are struck by lightning, it is fortunate that there has not been greater destruction in this neighborhood from that cause. The loss of six lives from the explosion of a tank last Thursday, on the New Jersey shore, ought to cause serious consideration of the question whether such death traps should be permitted to be built so near a thickly populated district.

AN instance of the terrible effects of lightning may be seen on the farm of Mr. Thos. Lee, on the road leading from this city to Rahway. The electric bolt struck the top of a locust tree and in its descent literally tore the tree into minute particles finally tearing out a great hole in the ground several feet in depth. Lightning is liable to strike anywhere, therefore it behooves every property owner to see that his buildings are protected by proper lightning rods.

THE Hunterdon Co. Agricultural Society has decided to hold the next annual fair the last week in September. The entries on live stock will close on the Monday before the fair, at 9 o'clock p. m. The price of admission has been fixed at 30 cents, each stockholder to be entitled to three checks during each of the last two days of the fair. No premiums will be offered for machinery and farming utensils, but those who desire to display such articles will be permitted to do so.

THE following is an extract from an act passed by the Legislature, and is of interest to a large number of our readers:

"All persons who shall own or have in their possession any poultry or animals of any kind which may come to their death by reason of any contagious disease, shall within twenty-four hours after such death, bury such poultry or animals under the surface of the earth to the depth no less that two feet; any person or persons neglecting or refusing to comply with the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be liable to a fine not exceeding two hundred dollars or imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding six months."

DIRECTOR Voorhees of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders has announced the standing committees for the year as follows:

On Public Buildings and Grounds—Messrs. Dow, Gaston and Staats.

On Lunacy—Messrs. Staats, Conkling and Schenck.

On Finance—Messrs. Gaston, Hoagland and Owens.

On Printing—Messrs. Wyckoff, Staats and Dow.

On County Collector's Accounts—Messrs. Schenck, Gaston and Hoagland.

On Auditing—Messrs. Owens, Wyckoff and Conkling.

On motion of Mr. Staats the Board fixed upon the second Tuesday of each month as the day for the regular meetings, as heretofore.

IN relation to the proposed Editorial excursion this year the Rahway Democrat says: "The executive committee of the New Jersey Editorial Association met again last Friday to further consider the Summer excursion. Reports were received as to the steamboat and hotel accommodations, in connection with the proposition to go to Newport, and also to making a trip on one day from Newport to Boston. The rates were found to be satisfactory, both the steamboat and hotel management making a large reduction from the usual rates, so that the tickets for the fare on the steamboat (not including state-rooms,) the entertainment at the hotel at Newport and the excursion to Boston (not including any entertainment there) can be placed at about $17. It is proposed to start from New York on the evening of Monday, June 25, and return the following Friday evening. A sub-committee will go over the route about the middle of May to complete the arrangements."

THE Prohibitionists of this State will hold a convention at Trenton on May 23d, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Govenor.

THE Dover Era says of one of our citizens. "Mr. Loyal Farragut, son of the distinguished Admiral, will reside in Morristown this Summer."

ON Tuesday next a stage will be run from the corner of Park and North avenues to convey those who wish to attend, to the auction sale at the residence of Mr. R. S. Little.

THE Lambertville Beacon has been improved in appearance by the substitution of a neat new heading. It has also been enlarged a column a page. The Beacon is a handsome and readable paper.

THERE will be sold by auction, Tuesday next, the elegant household furniture, horses, carriages, &c., belonging to Mr. R. S. Little, from his residence on Park avenue, the first house beyond the Fair grounds.

THE administrator's sale of the lot on Front street just beyond the post-office, a part of the Nelson Gardner estate, which was to have taken place last Monday afternoon, was adjourned for one week, on account of a lack of bidders.

ONE of Street Commissioner Meeker's employees got "snowed under" last Tuesday evening and spent the night in the City Jail. Wednesday morning, before going to work again, he contributed five dollars to the city's treasury at the suggestion of Judge Good.

AT the trial of William A. Hall, Newark's absconding chief clerk, on Tuesday last, Expert Yalden testified to his examination of the books. The marks of an erasure could, he said, be discovered by the aid of a microscope in one of the books. There was in one case a change of a five into a three.

THE Grand Jury was discharged by the Court on Monday, having finished its labors and found 34 bills of indictment out of 160. None was found against Mr. P. Day of this city for selling liquor on Sunday, nor against the Westfield young man charged with "breach of promise" by Bessie Kelly. Mr. Samuel Drier, however, was indicted for assaulting Constable Pierce.

THE trial of Wm. H. Burke and John Noonan for the Elizabethport homicides is now in progress before Judges Van Syckel, McCormack, Harper and Hyer, in the Union county courts. Mr. L. F. Wadsworth, of this city, is one of the jurors in the case. The names of other petit jurors, E. C. Morse, V. W. Nash, Asa Collier and F. A. Dunham were challenged and objected to.

Personalia.

Mr. R. H. Leathem of Broadway has left for Montreal, Canada, where he will spend the Summer.

Mr. Theodore F. French of Somerset street has returned to this city after a few weeks trip to the South.

His Honor, Mayor Maxson, will deliver the address at the Decoration Day memorial services to be held in the City Park on the 30th inst.

Mr. Charles R. Theirs has the sympathy of his many friends, in the loss by death of his wife, who has been a sufferer from consumption for several years past.

Miss Bulkley of the Plainfield High School, together with Miss Rushmore, Miss Mosher, Miss Gleim, Miss Dusenbury and Messrs. Rushmore and Foster, will leave early in July for an extended tour through Europe.

Mr. W. K. McClure and family started for the Adirondacks last Tuesday, where Mr. McClure will conduct his hotel, the Tupper Lake House, through another of its successful seasons.

Mr. Levinus I. Lansing for many years a resident of this city, died at his home on First Place, Monday morning, after a long illness. The funeral services occurred on Wednesday, and interment at Greenwood Cemetery the following day.

Miss Alice Holmes of East Fifth street has been offered the position of contralto in the Grace church choir—a compliment her rich voice unquestionably deserves. Should it be accepted the Crescent avenue choir will loose one of its most pleasing vocalists.

Mr. Joel D. Hedden, the former popular bar clerk of the Mansion House, has secured a lucrative position with Mr. Geo. B. DeRevere, proprietor of the Taylor House, Jersey City. "Joe's" many friends will undoubtedly call upon him when visiting that city.

At the residence of the bride's parents, Theresa, N. Y., were married Thursday of last week, Effie Vieve Irvine and Henry O. Williams, Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Williams are expected in Plainfield during the early part of next week, and intend residing here.

At Riverside Farm, Ohio, the residence of the bride's parents, was married on Thursday, Caro D. Shaw and Edmund R. Taylor of North Plainfield. The happy couple left for this city soon after the ceremony, and upon their arrival will occupy the residence on Duer street which has been newly furnished for their reception.

We received a call on Wednesday from Mr. John Blue, a former resident of Plainfield, and who now has charge of Connor's Son's Typographical Messenger, New York city. Mr. Blue has not visited Plainfield but once in thirty years, and was much surprised to note the many changes about the then village, which have occured since he left it.

Mr. George W. Rockfellow has proven himself the equal of the famous Kimball. Last Sunday morning after a short sermon in the Congregational Chapel, Mr. Rockfellow exerted his powers of persuasion so effectually that he succeeded in raising $3,100, the entire indebtedness of the Society which now owns its property free and clear.

The sincere sympathy of almost the entire populace has been aroused by tidings of the serious illness of Heywood Cuthbert—a young man so greatly admired for his many charms of person and character and his possession of such remarkable intellectual abilities. He was taken with pneumonia after which typhoid fever set in, and as we go to press to-day (Thursday) but little hope of his recovery is entertained. So rapid has been the development in the past of the patient's mental faculties at the expense of his physical condition, that disease has made rapid progress.

It was our pleasure to make a friendly call upon our esteemed friend, and former resident of Union county, Capt. Wm. H. Gill, at the United States Arsenal buildings, Philadelphia, Pa., one day last week, where he has charge of the Quartermaster's department. The courteous Captain kindly showed us through the various departments, which were found to be models of cleanliness and order, and explained in detail the workings thereof. Capt. Gill is most eminently fitted for the position assigned him by the Government. Mrs. Gill presides over the household with dignity and grace and the Captain's friends are sure of a hearty welcome when calling. Miss Ella, the charming daughter of County Collector, P. Sheridan, is visiting at Mrs. G.'s and thoroughly understands the art of entertaining guests in such a way as to at once make them feel at home.

Reception.

The ladies in charge of the Children's Home will hold a reception, at the new building, on Jackson avenue, on Tuesday, May 22d, between the hours of three and ten p. m. The gathering will be a purely social one, and all who feel an interest in the Home are cordially invited to be present.

Worthy Efforts in a Deserving Cause.

The fifteen young ladies of this city composing the society known as the L. L., and calling themselves the Lend-a Hand League, will hold a fair in the parlors of the Crescent avenue church during the afternoon and evening of Thursday the 31st inst., in aid of the Children's Home of Plainfield. For the past six months these ladies have held weekly meetings and labored industriously in the construction of articles useful, ornamental and decorative, which collectively will make such an attractive display as has never before been presented for the patronage of our citizens. The cause is a worthy one, and the efforts of the L. L. should be endorsed by success.

The Opera House Meeting.

Prior to the regular meeting of the stockholders of the Stillman Music Hall Monday evening, Chairman Tyler announced that the Incorporators would first meet and perfect the organization of the Association in such manner as was required by the laws governing the formation of such and by including as incorporators all the subscribers. This being done, the subscribers present were called to order, and on motion the certificate of Incorporation was read. It was announced that the Incorporators had chosen Mr. Chas. Tweedy as Secretary and he then acted as such.

Mr. Marsh moved to proceed to the adoption of By-laws of the Association, which would determine the number of officers and the character of such.

Mr. Gilbert thought the roll should be called to ascertain whether a majority of the stock was represented.

Mr. Marsh considered the point well taken, as until By-laws were adopted providing the number that should make a quorum, he thought a majority of the interest was necessary to transact any business.

The roll was then called and showed stock represented by those present to the amount of $20,300.

Before the By-laws offered by Mr. Marsh for adoption were read, that gentleman explained that he had merely drawn up the same for consideration and amendment by those present. On motion they were read entire and then by sections.

They subsequently were adopted as a whole; making the number of Directors eleven, and providing for the manner of annually electing such and the chosing of their successors;

Providing for the election annually by the Board of Directors of a President, a Secretary and a Treasurer;

Fixing the duties of the Board of Directors, the President, the Secretary and the Treasurer;

Providing for the regular bi-monthly meetings of the Board;

Requiring that dividends on the net profits be declared as often as the Board may direct.

Providing for a corporate seal and when and where it shall be used.

Providing for the holding of annual meetings of the stockholders on the second Mondays of May of each year, and providing for the calling of special meetings of the stockholders.

Regulating the issuing, exchanging and transferring of certificates of stock.

Providing for the regular order of business, the chosing of Inspectors of Election, and the manner of altering or amending the By-laws.

On motion the meeting proceeded to the election of a Board of Directors, and the following were nominated:

Messrs. A. Gilbert, L. V. F. Randolph, Geo. Opdyke, G. A. Chapman, O. T. Waring, C. Tweedy, L. Myers, J. E. Tracy, J. T. Closson J. B. Dumont, W. Miller, J. Male, M. W. Tyler, C. A. Marsh, H. King, C. Potter, Jr., G. Lessignolo, A. Berry, B. A. Hegeman, L. L. Compton, J. W. Murray, W. E. Lowe, W. B. Wadsworth and W. R. Potts.

Of these Messrs Murray, Myers, Tracy and Wadsworth withdrew.

Mr. Myers suggested that the eleven Directors selected represent the different localities of the city.

Messrs. W. B. Wadsworth and W. W. Howland were named as Inspectors of Election.

It was moved by Mr. West that Mr. Baldwin be instructed to cast the vote of the stockholders for the eleven incorporaters as the Board of Directors.

Mr. W. Wadsworth thought that such eleven did not represent sufficiently different localities of the city.

Mr. Marsh spoke for himself and he thought for others of the original Incorporators, to the effect that he would not desire an election secured in that manner. The motion was lost.

The following were elected as a Board of Directors for the first year:

W. Rockhill Potts,
L. V. F. Randolph,
George A. Chapman,
Alexander Gilbert,
Mason W. Tyler,
John B. Dumont,
Oliver T. Waring,
Alfred Berry,
Craig A. Marsh,
Charles Tweedy,
George F. Opdyke.

Before this result was announced Mr. W. Howland offered a resolution requiring the Board of Directors to advertise for building plans and give cash prizes for the best. Messrs Tyler, Tracy and others justly condemned this effort to regulate the Board, and the resolution was subsequently adopted as a recommendation to that body. Mr. Phillips presented a communication protesting against the erection of the Hall in the rear of a property owned by others, and strongly urging the purchase by the Association of the entire front. He also questioned the exactness of considering the lot on which the building was to be erected, as a "donation."

Upon the adjournment of the stockholders' meeting, those of the newly elected Board present met and decided to come together again at the office of Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh, Wednesday evening, for organization.

At this meeting all the Board were present with the exception of Messrs. Randolph and Chapman, and the following officers were elected:—President, Mason W. Tyler; Secretary, Craig A. Marsh; Treasurer, Orville T. Waring. A Building Committee was appointed consisting of Messrs. A. Berry, C. Tweedy, W. R. Potts, A. Gilbert and M. W. Tyler. A special meeting of the stockholders was ordered called for the evening of Friday, June 1st, at 8 o'clock at the rooms of Jerusalem Lodge. Messrs. Gilbert and Marsh were appointed a committee to suggest amendments to the By-Laws, and the Board adjourned to meet again next week.

THE Crescents will probably play the Potter nine, to-morrow afternoon, on the old Park avenue grounds.

MR. John N. Schenck of Race street, North Plainfield, is sharpening lawn mowers in a thoroughly satisfactory manner.

THE Rev. Dr. Ormiston of the Collegiate church of New York, will deliver an address in the Trinity Reformed church, next Monday evening, upon the occasion of the anniversary of the Ladies' Christian Work Society.

FIRE MATTERS.

Mary Melvin, residing on Fourth street, near Plainfield avenue, was seriously burned to-day (Thursday) as a result of using kerosene to quicken the fire in the kitchen stove. It is supposed that she was stooping over the fire and pouring the oil on it, when her dress caught and her body was instantly enwrapped in flames. She was removed to the Muhlenberg Hospital, where she now lies in a critical condition.

MR. Theodore Bleecker of Netherwood, telephoned the central office at this city, Wednesday evening, that the chimney of his residence was afire and threatening the roof. The Department was at once notified and started for the scene, but turned back leaving Mr. Bleecker and his neighbors to quench the flames. It would be well to remember that if a conflagration occurs at Netherwood the only place to get water is at the Hotel cisterns, which are always full.

A mysterious fire occured under the coal sheds of Mr. David J. Boice on Park avenue about half-past seven o'clock on Wednesday evening last. Passers-by saw flames suddenly shoot upward from an empty barrel placed along side one of the wooden supports of the roof of the coal sheds. An alarm was given, and Mr. V. W. Nash and others broke the lock from the large gate at the entrance and gaining admittance soon extinguished the flames which had communicated to the support and roof. The entire department turned out and in an incredible short space of time, No. 1 Engine had a stream of water through hose from the Second street well. Her services were fortunately not needed. It is a mystery how an empty barrel should thus suddenly ignite and be entirely consumed. Whether a spark from a passing locomotive, ashes from a pipe thrown into it when the yard was closed at six o'clock or incendiarism was the cause of it, is unknown.

The Board of Managers of the Fire Department met in adjourned meeting in the Council room. Tuesday evening. Present—Messrs Depew, Gillies, Morris and Jones. In the absence of President Van Winkle, Mr. Jones was chosen as Chairman. The minutes of the previous meeting of the 8th inst, were appuoved as read. The Secretary read a communication from the President appointing the following standing committees: Wells—Jones and Depew; Repairs and Supplies—Morris, Gillies and Flaig. Notice of the resignation of W. S. Darling as a member of Alert Hose Co., was received and accepted. The following bills were ordered paid; John G. Staats, $13 15; E. O. Chamberlin, $31 30; W. F. Adams & Co., 75; Henry Hamilton, $8; W. B. Grannatt, $25; Wm. Murphy, $4 90; Wm. Bowman, $2; F. A. Dunham, 2; A. D. Jennings, $2; J. R. Franze, $2; M. J. Mc Carty, $1; Jno. Scudder, $1 50; Chas. L. Davis, $1; Jas. E. Huntington, $1; L. E. Wright, 50; J. Collins, $1; J. Sutphen $3 50, and $2; C. H. Hope, $1; E. Carman, $2; R. Wortman, $4; W. L. Force & Bro., $17 55; Chas. A. Davis, $2; T. J. Carey, $5; W. B. Maxson, $15; T. O. Doane, $7.94. The following were referred to the Committee on Repairs and Supplies: W. B. Grannatt, $27 85; J. P. Homan, $31 15; John A. Thickstun, $60 50; M. Bird, $67 53; Manchester Locomotive Works, $30 24. Mr. Morris presented a petition signed by the prominent business men in the vicinity, requesting the Board to secure better and more speedy methods of procuring water from the well at the corner of Front and Somerset streets—on motion received and placed on file. Mr. Jones stated that the Committee on Wells had already considered the matter and could arrange a means to meet the desire. The Committee was instructed to ascertain the cost of such. It was moved and carried that when the Board adjourned it be to meet on Thursday evening, June 7th, at 8 o'clock, in the same place. On motion the Com. on Repairs and Supplies was authorized to procure a gong for steamer No. 1; also to have the outside wood-work on the Second street houses painted and the chimneys and front of the same pointed-up; also to procure three lanterns and five trumpets for newly elected officers, and a 10 gallon can of machinery oil. A communication was read from Wm. B. Maxson, Esq., suggesting that the Board offer a reward of $100 for the apprehension of any one guilty of incendiarism. The same was received and ordered filed. Mr. Morris thought the Board had no legal power to offer such reward, and in connection read a clause from the City Charter delegating to the Common Council that authority. On motion the Treasurer was requested to see Mr. Maxson and present such facts before him. The Board then adjourned.

Last Saturday evening, just before ten o'clock, the Rev. T. Logan Murphy, Rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, North Plainfield, was walking home through Washington avenue from Front street, when he met a man coming from the direction of the bridge, who after passing him yelled "fire" and started on a run. Almost immediately another appeared from out of the yard to the left of the street in which were the barns and sheds of Robert Simpson the ice dealer and these buildings burst into flames. Mr. Murphy was unable to see the faces of either of the men, and although he pursued them they escaped in the darkness. The alarm bell was rung with promptness and the entire Fire Department at once turned out; still, by reason of the wind that prevailed, the conflagration had assumed quite large proportions before work to quench it had commenced. No. 2 Steamer upon arriving on the scene thought it could run through the barn yard, past the burning buildings and so on to the field beyond where water could be taken from the brook. But unfortunately the gate supposed to be at the further end of the yard had been replaced with a fence and passing through was thus prevented. In going down the steep hill at the entrance, the man at the brake found it impossible to hold the heavy steamer back, and those at the tiller only saved themselves from being run over by cranking the wheels and guiding the engine to the left under a shed. Here it lay directly in the course of the flames as they were blown by the wind, and so hot were the gusts that for self protection it was abandoned. No. 1 Steamer which had stationed itself on the bridge and was throwing two very effective streams, turned one on the blaze that had begun to scorch the paint of No. 2, and cooled the surroundings sufficiently to allow men to approach the steamer in danger and fasten to it ropes that dragged it from a position where in a short time destruction would have resulted.

The flames enveloped the buildings so rapidly that their contents could not be saved. Mr. Simpson lost beside many other things, two cows, two pigs, 125 chickens, 6 tons of straw, 250 sheaves of cornstalks, 100 bushels of corn, a wagon, sleigh, cart and hay rack. The loss financially is from $700 to $1,000 with no insurance. The barn that was consumed belongs to Mr. John Wilson and is supposed by the owner to have been insured.

The flying sparks set fire a number of times to the roofs and eaves of the "church tenement" on New street near Front, and of the "church factory" at the corner of Central avenue and Second street. The efforts of the Zephyrs and No. 2 Steamer, however, arrested these threatenings. Sunday morning another alarm was rung by reason of some straw near the ruins having blazed up, but No. 1 and No. 2 Steamers were promptly on hand and effectually drowned out the last spark.

Too True.

It is difficult to suit everybody in editing a newspaper. No sensible editor tries to. Some people care for nothing but base ball news; others think the editor is a fool for giving so much space to that interesting game. Some are deeply interested in stocks; others in accounts of the crops; others pick out the blood-and-thunder crimes; others read only the personal and kindred gossip; others care about nothing but the "bad boy" and other stories. It takes all kinds of reading to make a newspaper that everybody will find something to be interested in. Occasionally there will be found a person so narrow in his views as to demand that everything shall be left out of the paper except what he is interested in, but the editor does not run the paper for the special benefit of such people. If he did it would soon be run into the ground.—Perth Amboy Republican.

Claiming Half New Jersey.

The inhabitants of New Jersey will be startled to learn that a family in London claims half the State by right of inheritance. Letters on the subject have passed between the family and Deputy Register Nagle, of the New York Bureau of Vital Statistics, who has been asked to search the records for important facts to establish the claim. The latest communication was received Wednesday of last week by Dr. Nagle, from Lavina Fenn Valssiere, of No. 78 Dynevor road, Stoke-Newington, London, England. After asking about the registry of the death of a Mr. Bethell, who made a will in 1823, when he was about forty-five or fifty years of age, the writer goes on thus:

His nephew, John Fenn Bethell—who is my uncle—was then living with him as private secretary, and has since died. The money is put into chancery, and all relatives of the Bethells are now wanted to claim moneys and estates, and if you could make inquiries you would be paid handsomely for your trouble, providing your efforts enable us to obtain the property, otherwise we could not remunerate you, as we are only small trades-people. Doubtless the property is immense, as one-half of New Jersey belonged to my great uncle, besides other estates in America. His name was either William or James. He went over to New York from Stowe market (Suffolk), a widower with a son and daughter. The daughter married a black man named Richardson and they lived in Orange street. Richardson died from sunstroke. The son is also dead. John Fenn Bethell had also a brother, James, who went to America from Bury St. Edmunds, in Suffolk, between forty and fifty years later, and as we have not since heard from him we are very anxious to obtain the evidence if he is dead. We would then be able to begin proceedings.

Dr. Nagle says he has not begun the search yet, but will look over the records very soon.—Paterson Press.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

Cures the Asthma. Geo. W. Cross, of New York, Jan. 3, 1881, writes: "It gives me pleasure to say that Tanner's German Ointment cured me of Asthma. The case was peculiar. I got a box of the Ointment to cure a burn, and seeing that it would cure various diseases, I thought I would try it for Asthma. I rubbed it freely on my chest, and took a little internally, a piece about as large as a pea, and to my surprise and delight I found it gave me immediate relief. I am now entirely cured of the Asthma, and have had no return of the complaint."

Myer's extract of Rock Rose is a wonderful Blood Medicine, cures scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, etc.

Mathews' Hair Dye. A splendid dye for the whiskers and moustache as well as hair. Try it.

Oh, what a cough!—Will you heed the warning. The signal perhaps of the sure approach of that more terrible disease Consumption. Ask yourself if you can afford for the sake of saving 50 cents, to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will Cure your Cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a Million Bottles were sold the past year. It relieves Croup, and Whooping Cough at once. Mothers do not be without it. For Lame Back, Side, or Chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by R. J. Shaw.

Dyspepsia & Liver Complaint—Is it not worth the small price of 75 cents to free yourself of every symptom of these distressing complaints. Prospect Vineyards, at Passaic, New Jersey, where the well-known Port Grape Wine is produced that is so highly esteemed at Dresden and Berlin, and other European cities to which it is shipped, and that is so highly esteemed by physicians everywhere. Address, ALFRED SPEER, Passaic, N. J.

I limped about for years with a cane, and could not bend down without excruciating pain. Parker's Ginger tonic effected an astonishing cure and keeps me well. It is infallible. M. Guilfoyle, Binghampton, N. Y.

A dangerous counterfeit. There are dangerous counterfeits in circulation purporting to be "Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer." The strongest evidence of its great value is the fact that parties knowing its great efficacy try to imitate it. Each bottle of the genuine has a fac simile of a walnut leaf—blown in the glass; and a Green Leaf on the outside wrapper. The "Restorer" is as harmless as water, while it possesses all the properties necessary to restore life, vigor, growth and color to the hair. Purchase only from responsible parties. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. Johnson, Holloway & Co., Philadelphia, and Hall & Ruckel, New York, wholesale agents.

A dressing to beautify gray hair every family needs. Parker's Hair Balsam never fails to satisfy, for I have used it extensively. I regard Parker's Ginger Tonic a most excellent remedy for kidney, lung and stomach disorders. It invigorates without intoxicating. J. Francis, Regio Philos, Journal, Chicago.

Best ever made, Emory's Little Cathartic Pills, pleasant to take, sugar-coated; no griping; only 15 cents a box, of Druggists or mail. Standard Cure Co. Sold by H. P. Reynolds, Plainfield, N. J.

Malaria, Chills and Fever, and Bilious attacks positively cured with Emory's Standard Cure Pills—an infallible remedy; never fail to cure the most obstinate, long-standing cases where Quinine and all other remedies had failed. They are prepared expressly for malarious sections, in double boxes, two kinds of Pills, containing a strong cathartic and a chill breaker, sugar-coated; contain no Quinine or Mercury, causing no griping or purging; they are mild and efficient, certain in their action and harmless in all cases; they effectually cleanse the system, and give new life and tone to the body. As a household remedy they are unequaled. For Liver Complaint their equal is not known; one box will have a wonderful effect on the worst case. They are used and prescribed by physicians, and sold by Druggists everywhere, or sent by mail, 25 and 50 cent boxes. Emory's Little Cathartic Pills, best ever made, 15 cents. Sold by H. P. Reynolds, Plainfield, N. J.

HELPING HIS PA TO MOVE.

AND THEN GETTING THE OLD MAN INTO A CONFOUNDED SCRAPE.

"What in the name of the seven sleeping sisters have you got on your hands and face?" said the grocery man, as he took the bad boy by the ear and turned him around. "You would pass in a colored prayer meeting, and no one would think you were galvanized. What you got up in such an outlandish rig for?"

"Well, I'll tell you if you keep watch at the door. If you see a bald-headed colored man coming along the street with a club, you whistle, and I'll fall down cellar. The bald-headed colored man will be pa. You see, we moved yesterday. Pa told me to get a vacation from the livery stable, and we would have fun moving. But I don't want any more fun. Pa carried all the light things, and when it came to lifting he had a crick in his back. Gosh, I never was so tired as I was last night, and I hope we have got settled, only some of the goods haven't turned up yet. A drayman took one load over to the west side, and delivered them to a house that seemed to be expecting a load of household furniture. He thought it was all right if everybody that was moving got a load of goods. Well, after we got moved pa said we must make a garden, and he said we would go out and spade up the ground and sow peas, and radishes and beets. There was some neighbors lived in the next house to our new one that was all wimmen, and pa didn't like to have them think he had to work, so he said it would be a good joke to disguise ourselves as tramps, and the neighbors would think we had hired some tramps to dig in the garden. I told pa of a boss scheme to fool them. I suggested that we take some of this shoe blacking that is put on with a sponge, and black our faces, and the neighbors would think we had hired an old colored man and his boy to work in the garden. Pa said it was immense, and he told me to go and black up, and if it worked he would black hisself. So I went and put this burnt cork on my face, 'cause it would wash off, and pa looked at me and said it was a whack, and for me to fix him up too. So I got the bottle of shoe blacking and painted pa so he looked like a coal heaver. Actually, when ma saw him she ordered him off the premises, and when he laffed at her and acted sassy, she was going to throw boiling water on pa, but I told her the scheme and she let up on pa. Oh, you'd a dide to see us out in the garden. Pa looked like Uncle Tom and I looked like Topey, only I ain't that kind of a colored person. We worked till a boy throwed some tomato cans over the alley fence and hit me, and I piled over the fence after him and left pa. It was my chum, and when I had caught him we put up a job to get pa to chase us. We throwed some more cans, and pa come out and my chum started and I after him, and pa after both of us. He chased us two blocks and then we got behind a policeman, and my chum told the policeman it was a crazy colored man that wanted to kidnap us, and the policeman took pa by the neck and was going to club him, but pa said he would go home and behave. He was offal mad, and he went home and we looked through the alley fence and saw pa trying to wash off the blacking. You see, that blacking won't wash off. You have to wear it off. Pa would wash his face with soap suds, and then look in the glass, and he was blacker every time he washed, and when ma laffed at him he said the offalest words, something like 'sweet spirit hear my prayer,' then he washed himself again. I am going to leave my burnt cork on, 'cause if I washed it off pa would know there had been some smouging somewhere. I asked the shoe store man how long it would take the blacking to wear off, and he said it ought to wear off in a week. I guess pa won't go out doors much, unless it is in the night. I am going to get him to let me go off in the country fishing, till mine wears off, and when I get out of town I will wash up. Say, you don't think a little blacking hurts a man's complexion, do you, and you don't think a man ought to get mad because it won't wash off, do you?"

"Oh, probably it don't hurt the complexion," said the grocery man, as he sprinkled some fresh water on the wilted lettuce, so it would look fresh while the hired girl was buying some, "and yet it is mighty unpleasant, where a man has got an engagement to go to a card party, as I know your pa has to-night. As to getting mad about it, if I was your pa I would take a barrel stave and shatter your castle scandalous. What kind of a fate do you think awaits you when you die, anyway?"

"Well, I am mixed on the fate that awaits me when I die. If I should go off sudden, with all my sins on my head and this burnt cork on my face, I should probably be a neighbor to you, way down below; and they would give me a job as fireman, and I should feel bad for you every time I chucked in a nother chunk of brimstone, and thought of you trying to swim dog fashion into the lake of fire, and straining your eyes to find an iceberg that you could crawl up on to cool your parched hind legs. If I don't die slow, so I will have time to repent and be saved, I shall be toasted brown. That's what the minister says, and they wouldn't pay him two thousand dollars a year and give him a vacation to tell anything that was not so. I tell you, it is painful to think of that place that so many pretty fair average people here are going to when they die. But I am going to be good or bust a suspender. Hereafter you can point to me as a boy who has seen the folly of an ill spent life, and if there is such a thing as a fifteen year old boy, who has been a terror, getting to Heaven, I am the hairpin. I tell you when I listen to the minister tell about the angels flying around there and I pictures of them purtier than any girl in this town, with chubby arms with dimples in the elbows and shoulders, and long golden hair, and think of myself there cleaning off horses in a livery stable and smelling like an old harness, it makes me tired, and I wouldn't miss going there for ten dollars. Say, you would make a healthy angel, for a back street of the new Jerusalem, but you would give the whole crowd away unless you washed up, and sent that shirt to the Chinese laundry. Yes, sir, hereafter you will find me as good as I know how to be. Now I am going to wash up and go and help the minister move."

As the boy went out the grocery man sat for several minutes thinking of the change that had come over the bad boy, and wondered what had brought it about, and then he went to the door to watch him as he wended his way across the street with his head down, as though in deep thought, and the grocery man said to himself, "that boy is not as bad as some people think he is," and then he looked around and saw a sign hanging up in front of the store, written on a piece of box cover, with blue pencil, "Spoiled canned ham and tongue, good enough for church picnics," and he looked after the boy who was skipping down an alley and said, "The condemn little whelp. Wait till I catch him."—Peck's Sun.

TOO FRESH.

Jones was sitting on the front step the other night, waiting for his sweetheart to come, and Jones didn't wish to ring the bell for fear of alarming the old folks. Presently he heard the door open and the old man muttered something about somebody's being too fresh.

"Do you address yourself to me?" said Jones, springing up with a flashing eye.

"No," said the old gentleman, mildly, "I was speaking of the paint on the steps. It was put there this afternoon."

Jones clasped his hands to the spot, and realizing the force of the old man's remarks, reached his room in just five minutes.

YANKEE WIT.

Many years ago a Pittsburg iron firm purchased a lot of condemned bombshells for old iron. The shells were not loaded, but in order to melt them it was necessary that they should be broken up. This was attempted with sledge hammers, but the laborers made but little progress and it was finally given up as a bad job. One day a long, slim Yankee came along and said:

"I understand you have a job for a man here."

"Yes," was the reply; "we want that pile of bombs out there broken."

"How much will you pay?"

"We will give you a fip apiece (six and a quarter cents) if you will agree to break them all."

"I'll take the contract, answered the Yankee. The day was a cold one and the thermometer down to zero. The man immediately went to work, but disdained to take the sledge hammer which was offered him. The Yankee had every bomb out on the ground with the hole up. He procured a bucket and filled them all with water; then he came into the house, made out his bill, and said he would call around in the morning for the money. Every one was much mystified, but in the morning their astonishment was great. The water had frozen during the night, and in the morning a pile of scrap iron was found, as the freezing water had broken every bomb into at least a dozen pieces.

FASHION NOTES.

Scotch ginghams in greater variety than ever are largely imported.

Foule cloth will be the rival of cheviots and tweeds this spring.

Strapped shoes and slippers are worn for evening and house dresses only.

Corn-blue pelisse cloth is largely imported; its finish is soft but rough.

The combination costumes remains the marked feature in spring styles.

Olive shade combined well with the new shade of strawberry, terra cotta and shrimp pink.

Gold, silver and colored spotted nets are occasionally worn for veils, but they are not becoming.

The only colored wrap worn by women of taste for walking costume is the Cashmier or India shawl.

A new and very rich material for wedding or reception toilets is Ottoman velvet, plain or embossed, on a silk ground.

Ribbons lined with colored satin are much used for strings, and are found very useful and effective for the "ribbon roses" employed as trimming upon many bonnets, instead of flowers or feathers. The colors of the two sides of the ribbon must harmonize well, or the good effect is lost.

Very wide cape collars, after the style of those worn by children, but made of richer laces, are found so dressy and becoming that they are now worn by ladies with even simple, every-day costumes. With deep cuffs to match, collars, in fact, have become a very important feature of the toilet.

The press of late have taken up the controversy of what constitutes a gentleman. We have always been under the impression that a gentleman was one who wore percale shirt collars, white hat with a weed on it and wasn't afraid of a hotel clerk.

One of the finest pieces of righteous indignation on record was uttered lately by a gentleman engaged in the ingenious industry of counterfeiting. He informed the St. Louis Post that the profits of the business were not large, because it was so hard to get honest ment to dispose of the money.

In mordern Egypt a young man is not permitted to see his wife's face before marriage. This is rather rough on the young man, but it prevents the newspapers of Egypt from making jokes about the girl enticing him into an ice cream saloon and bankrupting him in the first round.

The Director declared the Board adjourned to Tuesday, May 8, 1883, at 10 o'clock A. M.

JOHN L. CROWELL, Clerk.

The average man takes very little interest, perhaps, in rifle shooting at Creedmoor and Walnut Hill, but it tickles him half to death when he makes a good shot with a stone at one of his neighbor's hens which has come over into his yard.

Mrs. Winthrope Smith was boasting to Mrs. Knickerbocker; "My ancestors, you know, really did come over in the Mayflower." Mrs. Knickerbocker (adjusting her eye-glasses)—"Really! I had no idea that the Mayflower carried steerage passengers." Mrs. Winthrope Smith was sorry she spoke.

FROM THE SOUTH.

A PERFECT COMBINATION WITH TWO SALIENT ADVANTAGES—WHY IT CONCERNS YOU.

"There is no mistake about it," remarked Dr. M. F. Flower, of Oakdale, Missouri, "BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTERS are one of the neatest combinations ever produced. They have two kinds of advantages over all others, which we may call the minor and the major. First, they are clean and pleasant to use, never soiling the hands nor the linen of the wearer. Second, they act quickly and powerfully. I have tried the Capcine Plaster on myself for pneumonia, and on my patients for various diseases, such as Neuralgia, Muscular Rheumatism, Lumbago, Kidney trouble, etc., and in all cases relief has followed in from three to forty-eight hours."

Dr. Flower merely voices the written or oral opinion of thousands in his profession. BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTERS are the perfect external application. The genuine have the word CAPCINE cut in the centre. Price 25 cents. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.—To John T. Cornell, executor, etc., of Gershom B. Smith, deceased. Take Notice: That by virtue of an order made on the day of the date hereof in the above stated court in a cause therein pending wherein the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States are complainants and you and others are defendants, you are required to appear and plead, answer or demur to the bill of the complainant on or before the

THIRTIETH DAY OF JUNE NEXT,

or such decree shall be made against you as the Chancellor shall deem equitable and just.

The said bill is filed to foreclose a mortgage made by Sidney Bayles and wife and William S. Bayles to the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, on property at Westfield, Union county, New Jersey, and you are made party defendant because Gershom B. Smith is alleged to have held a subsequent mortgage on said property at the time of his death and you as his executor may claim some interest therein.

POETRY.

LIKE A STOVE.

A man is like a stove a lot,
Sometimes he coaled; sometimes he's hot,
He's polished or, to be exact,
His iron top is often blacked.
He smokes his pipe of water-back-er;
Has draughts of be-air with a crack-er,
He plays his poker (this is true),
And uses chips and paper, too.
Sometimes he rakes the pot he raises;
Sometimes he don't and then he blazes,
"Such damper luck I never saw—
I can't get coal-ed when I draw."
Stoves are in kitchens. He's a man
When there's a servant girl to scan.
Stoves cook on iron. Man, so deep,
An iron cook will slyly keep
Until he's fired out, and then
He's cinder kitchen soon again.
Both stoves and men great heating do,
But man's the best "self-feeder" true.
Both need a match to strike de light
And warm all oven them aright.
Stoves oft get cracked on top like men
And both get rusted; Likewise, when
Their fires die out and cooked their hash is,
We always say, "Peace to their ashes."

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A SLIGHT MISTAKE.

The sun had gone down in a red river of threatening cloud; the storm which had been impending for some days had broken at last, in a wild whirlwind of snow and tempest; and Mrs. Abraham Ackley had just put the tea-kettle on for the evening meal, with Abigail, her daughter, stirring a saucepanful of mush on the stove, and Maria, her niece, hard at work, stitching the upper parts of cheap cloth shoes for a manufacturer in the neighborhood. For the Ackleys were a thrifty family. Nothing was lost, nothing wasted, not even that slippery commodity—time.

The Ackleys were a feminine household that night, for Abraham himself, the grizzled head of the family, had gone to the city, to put in a claim for a pension, which, according to his ideas ought to have been paid half a century back, to some old Revolutionary ancestor or other.

'I ain't to be done,' said Abraham, winking his watery blue eyes, 'not even by the United States Government itself!'

So it had happened that Abigail had foddered the cattle, fed the fowls, and locked the barn door, coming in, all powdered over with snow, her middle-aged nose blue with cold.

'Never mind, girls,' said Mrs. Ackley, with a subdued chuckle, 'when we inherit your Cousin Jones' property we shan't none of us have to work no more. We can be ladies, and set up in sage-green dresses, playin' with peacock-feather fans. Did you get the best chamber ready, Marier?'

'Marier' gave a grunt in the affirmative, as she proceeded to bite of the end of her thread.

'I didn't light the fire yet,' said she. 'Though it warn't no use burnin' up good hickory logs, until we knowed we was going to want 'em.'

Scarcely was the sentence well out of her mouth, when a tattoo sounded loudly on the warped panels of the unpainted front door.

'Land's sake alive!' said Abigail, dropping the wooden spoon into the mush-pot, while Maria straightened herself, up with a jerk, 'it's Cousin Jones already!'

'Quick!' said Mrs. Ackley, in a shrill-stage wisper. 'Put the mush away and fetch out the cold chicken and raspberry preserves; and the best cups, Abigail, and the three tined forks, and the table cloth with the border of daisies.'

And she turned to the door, with a flaring, home-dipped candle in her hand.

'Is this Mrs. Abe Ackley's?' demanded a shrill voice. 'I was told she lived half-way up Pine Crags.'

'Ain't this Mrs. Jones?' said Mrs. Ackley, in her softest accents.

'That's the ticket!' said the stranger. 'Do open the door and let me in. I ain't no burglar, nor yet a sneak-thief.'

'I'm delighted to see you,' said Mrs. Ackley. 'Do pray walk in, and let the girls take your things. Marier, Abigail, this is Mrs. Jones, as you've heard so much of. Your room will be warm directly. We've set great store by your comin', I do assure you.'

'You're very kind,' said Mrs. Jones, shaking the snow off her shabby shawl and pinched silk bonnet. 'I ain't no beggar; I calc'late to pay my own way.'

The three women smiled obsequiously. They had been given to understand that Cousin Jones from New York city was very eccentric—that she particularly disliked any allusion to her relationship, and that there was no accounting for her various peculiarities.

'Of course' said Mrs. Ackley' 'that must be as you please.'

'I don't choose to be beholden to any one,' stiffly added the new-found relative.

'Of course not,' said Maria, helping her off with her rubbers. 'Uncle Abraham will be sorry that he isn't he to welcome you.'

'I can stand it if he can,' said the old lady, warming her gaunt hands before the cheerful blaze. 'Eh, do you live as high as this every day?' as she saw the liberal preparations for supper.

'We are economical people,' said Mrs. Ackley, apologetically; 'we raise our own poultry, and Abigail picked the raspberries last summer on the mountain, and changed off eggs for the sugar, at Martin's grocery store at the crossroads; and the tea was a present from old Captain Greer, who is in the China trade, to pay Ackley for breakin' the road colt. So you see—' 'Yes, I see,' said Mrs. Jones, nodding her head jerkily, like a mandarin somewhat out of order.

'Managing people, you be! You won't never come to be boarded out like town poor, I reckon?'

'I hope not,' said Mrs. Ackley, devoutly.

'The idea!' said Miss Abigail.

'Well, things is ordered differently in this world,' observed Mrs. Jones. 'It's up-hill with some and down-hill with others. But I guess I can get along with you!'

'My son will be up to pay his respects to-morrow,' said Mrs. Ackley. 'He lives a little beyond here.'

'Ah,' said Mrs. Jones.

'He hasn't been real successful in the world,' added Mrs. Ackley. 'He married a schoolma'am, and they have a little family, and Ackley's had to set down his foot, as he would not help him any more.'

'Every one for himself, eh?' said the old woman, with a chuckle.

Mrs. Ackley, nodded. She had ventured upon this confidential family communication as a sort of hint to Cousin Jones, not to lend money to the impecunious Abraham, junior. If there was money floating around in the golden atmosphere that surrounded Mrs. Jones, why should it be given over into such velvet-like hands as those of Mrs. Abraham, junior.

'Perhaps,' suggested Maria, sweetly, 'Mrs. Jones would like some hot buttered toast!'

'Well, since you're so pressing, I am rather partial to it,' said Mrs. Jones.

'And,' added Abigail, jealous lest she should be outdone in these sweet deeds of hospitality, 'there's a very good meat pie in the pantry which I made myself, if—'

'Meat pie,' cried the old lady. 'Meat pie is a relish for anything going. I don't know when I've put my teeth into a good meat pie before. Bring it on, young woman—bring it on.'

The three Ackleys looked on with beaming eyes, while Mrs. Jones ate and drank like a half-famished lioness, and afterward they conducted her to the bed room where the fire blazed brightly on the painted, red-brick hearth, and the patchwork silk quilt—Maria's own work—was laid ostentatiously across the foot of bed.

And then they all came down stairs, closed in solid phalanx around the fire, and looked at one another with meaning in their speculative eyes.

'Queer, ain't she?' said Maria.

'Dressed exactly as if she came out of an old rag-bag,' commenced Abigail.

'Hold your tongue, girls!' said Mrs. Ackley. 'Geniuses are always eccentrick! And Cousin Jones is worth a cool forty thousand dollars!'

Early the next morning, long before daylight had irradiated the sullen darkness of the wintry horizon, and Mrs. Ackley, was doing her best, in curl papers and a dirty flannel wrapper, to make the kitchen fire burn, an old box-sled stopped at the door, and in came Abraham, junior, brown-faced, good-natured and smiling.

'Well, mother,' said he, 'how is the folks?'

'The're all well enough,' said Mrs. Ackley, who always entertained a secret fear lest Abe should want to borrow money of her.

'Father got home yet?' said Abe.

'No!'

Mrs. Ackley was blowing desperately at a crumbled bit of paper which absolutely declined to ignite the kindlings adjoining to it.

'That's you, mother, to a 'T!' said Abraham, good-humoredly. 'You're too economical even to burn enough waste papers! Goodness knows, they don't cost nothin'!'

'Humph!' said Mrs. Ackley. 'I know some people as ain't economical in nothing!'

'And that reminds me!' said Abe, skating easily away from the subject, 'I'm going down arter my boarder!'

'What boarder?' said Mrs. Ackley, sharply.

'Didn't you know?' said Abe. 'Me and Jane Eliza, we've bid for one of the town poor. It ain't much pay to-be-sure. The select men are real close this year, on account of the Town hall havin' cost such a sight o' money. But it's better than nothing'. And the old woman will be company for Jane Eliza and the children. It's old Hulda Jones, you know—Cappen Jones' widder, down in Frog Lane.'

'Oh!' said Mrs. Ackley.

'I expected her last night,' said Abe, drawing on his blue yarn mittens; 'but I guess she found the weather one too many for her rheumatiz; so now I'm going' arter her, with an arm-chair tied into the box-sled! And, by-the-way,' fumbling in his coat pocket, 'here's a letter I got last night. Guess it was meant for father, but I opened it by mistake.'

'Who's it from!' screeched Abigail, who had just come down-stairs, half frozen, from her fireless room, tying her apron strings as she came, while Maria was visible, twisting up her back hair in the distance.

'Your rich cousin, in New York,' said Abe. 'She ain't comin!' She's made up her mind to rent a furnished flat in New York, where she can be near her doctor and her favorite clergyman!'

'Nonsense,' said Maria. 'That's only a practical joke, as some one is tryin' to come on us. Cousin Jones is here now.'

'Asleep in the best chamber, where I'm going to light a fire at seven o'clock,' added Abigail.

'What!' roared Abraham.

'Girls!' shrilly exclaimed Mrs. Ackley, 'it's a dreadful mistake as we've all of us made! This old woman ain't our Cousin Jones at all. It's the town poor as Abe has took to board!—old Cappen Jones widow, from Frog Lane.'

And she struck an attitude in front of the stove like Medea before the sacrificial flames.

'And we gave her cold fowl and raspberrry-jam,' cried Maria, 'and the whole of the meat pie.'

'And my choicest linen sheets, and a fire in the best chamber!' groaned Mrs. Ackley. 'My goodness me! how could we be such fools!'

'Go and wake her up at once,' said Maria to Abigail. 'Tell her Abe Ackley is here, to take her where she rightfully belongs; and ask her how she dared to impose on decent people like us!'

'It ain't her fault!' sighed Mrs. Ackley. It's ours. Goodness, what idiots we've been!'

'Well, you haven't asked me to breakfast,' said Abraham, junior, waggishly; 'but I guess I'll stop for a bite and a sup, and take the old lady up to our home arterward. 'Taint a good plan to travel on an empty stomach such weather as this!'

And the bewildered Mrs. Jones was whisked away on the box-sled before she knew the rights and wrongs of the case, leaving the Ackley family disconsolate.

'I never was so mistook in my life before,' said Mrs. Ackley.

But Abe, junior, regarded the matter as a stupendous joke.

'Old Mrs. Jones got a first-class meal and night's lodgin' free gratis out of mother,' said he; 'and I don't remember when anybydy else has done as much.'

A NEW VIEW OF JEFFERSON DAVIS.

Correspondence of the Detroit Free Press.

Mr. Davis is 73 years of age, and his health is not of the best. It is evident that his life of vicissitude is drawing to a close, and as one realizes it he cannot but admire the physical and mental machinery which has stood the strain of so much labor. Tall, with almost snow-white hair and whiskers, blue eyes, face wrinkling with age, voice as soft and kind as a mother's—such was the picture of the man who for four years held the destinies of a continent in his iron grip. In the zenith of his power he may have appeared haughty and imperious to some, but not to the generality. A kinder face I have never met, and though there is something in the voice to warn one that its owner has held place and power, one is soon charmed with its kindness and touch of pathos. He asked me about my Southern trip—where I had been, whom I had met, and what opinion I had formed of the sentiment of the masses; and when I answered that the North and South seemed more closely united to-day than at any period in our history, he expressed deep gratification. "It is a grand and progressive country," he said, "and the better the people understand each other the better for our future as a country." He asked me regarding the sentiment of the North, and I believe I answered truly when I told him that rancor and bitterness had died out of the hearts of all but demagogues and malevolent politicians. "That is right," he replied, "and I trust that no untoward event will sever the growing cordial relations." By and by we drifted into the subject of war. It was Mr. Davis who gave Gen. McClellan his first upward steps, and it was Mr. Davis who appointed Gen. Meade to the Lake Survey, and was sharply criticised for his selection. He believed that McClellan's campaign against Richmond, had he been permitted to carry it out as planned, and received the hearty support of the War Department, must have resulted disastrously to the Confederates. "I knew McClellan, Meade, Humphrey, and nearly all the Federal Generals," said Mr. Davis, "and many of them were my proteges. Although they were fighting my armies, I could not resist a feeling of pride in seeing so many of the young men I had helped advance winning fame and proving all that had been predicted." I asked him to name the best Federal General, and he replied: "There were two—McClellan and Meade. McClellan was a grand engineer and a great General; Meade was a steady fighter, and his movements were more of an enigma to Lee than those of any other Federal General."

PIONEER WOMEN IN JOURNALISM.

The first daily newspaper printed in the world was established and edited by a woman—Elizabeth Mallett, in London, 1702—almost two hundred years ago. In her salutatory she said she had established a newspaper "to spare the public half the impertinences which the ordinary papers contain." Womanlike, her paper was reformatory.

The first newspaper published in America, of which we have any record, was in Massachusetts. It was called the Massachusetts Gazette News-Letter. After the death of the editor, the widow edited it in the most spirited manner for two or three years. It was the only paper that did not suspend publication when Boston was besieged by the British. The widow's name was Margaret Craper.

In 1732 Rhode Island issued its first newspaper. It was owned and edited by Anna Franklin. She and her two daughters did the printing, and their servants worked the printing press. History tells us that for her quickness and correctness she was appointed printer to the colony, supplying pamphlets, etc., to the colonial officers. She also printed an edition of the colonial laws, of 340 pages.

In 1776 Sarah Goddard printed a paper in Newport, R. I., ably conducting it, afterward associating with her John Carter. The firm was announced Sarah Goddard & Co., taking the partnership precedence, as was proper and right.

In 1772 Clementine Reid published a paper in Virginia favoring the colonial cause, and greatly offending the royalists; and two years after another paper was started in the interests of the crown by Mrs. H. Boyle, borrowing the name of Mrs. Reid's paper, which was the Virginia Gazette, but which was short-lived. Both of the papers were published in the town of Williamsburg.

In 1773 Elizabeth Timothy published and edited a paper in Charleston, S. C. After the Revolution Anne Timothy became its editor, and was appointed state printer, which position she held seventeen years. Mary Crouch published a paper in Charleston about the same time in special opposition to the stamp act. She afterward removed her paper to Salem, Mass., and continued its publication there for three years after.

WISE WORDS.

Have no friends you dare not bring home.

He who tries to prove too much proves nothing.

Men fear old age without being sure of reaching it.

Work, play, study, whatever it is, take hold at once and finish it.

A man without ambition is like dough without leaven in it to make it rise.

There cannot be greater treachery than first to raise a confidence and then deceive it.

The man whose soul is in his work finds his best reward in the work itself. The joy of achievement is vastly beyond the joy of reward.

Man's character is an element of his wealth, and you cannot make him rich in what he has except as you teach him to be rich in what he is.

True politeness scorns deception; it has a kind and honest heart shown in kind and honest speech and conduct. Hence if thou will be truly polite first, feel kindly; secondly, act kindly.

Respect goodness, find it where you may. Honor talent wherever you behold it unassociated with vice; but honor it most when accompanied with exertion, and especially when exerted in the cause of truth and justice.

It needs wise and patient effort to make the home the most attractive place of all—and it should never be less than that. The womanly arts which by the skillful touch lend beauty and grace to the plainest things, and from being homely make them to be home-like, are all needed to this end. Many a husband too prone to stray might be kept by his own fireside by no more art or subtler skill than this.

THE "DUDE."

A new word has suddenly sprung into popularity and everybody is using it to define one class of the genus masher. The word is "dude." "It means a masher, and yet it means more than a masher. For instance, a masher may be young or old; he may mash by virtue of his politeness, of his accomplishments, of his wealth, beauty, eyes, nose or fame; he may be a man of mature years, an old man, a young man, or a boy. In speaking of mashers one is never sure exactly what sort of a man is meant. A dude can't be old; he must be young, and to be properly termed a dude, he should be one of a certain class who affect the metropolitan theatres. The dude is from 19 to 29 years of age, wears trousers of extreme tightness, is hollow-chested, effeminate in his way, apes the English, and distinguishes himself among his fellow-men as a lover of actresses. The badge of his office is the paper cigarette, and his bell-crown English opera hat is his chiefest joy. They are seen in large numbers at the theatres. They form one of the interesting features of the evening entertainments. They are offensive, because they blow cigarette smoke in ladies' faces and monopolize the bar between the acts. As a rule they are rich men's sons, and very proud of the unlimited cash at their command. They call all actresses by their first names, and affect extreme familiarity with all things pertaining to the stage; but, in reality, they know very little personally of the men and women of the dramatic profession. Still, the dude always poses as the particular favorite of the reigning theatrical celebrity. They are too shallow-pated and weak to accomplish any harm, but they are sometimes offensive. No dude is a real dude who does not talk to a fellow dude in a loud voice during the play; also, no dude who respects himself ever takes a lady to the theatre. They run in pairs and compare notes between the acts."—New Brunswick Times.

The New York World has recently changed editorial management, and its racy columns show a marked improvement over the old regime.

The World gives as Democratic doctrine the following ten articles:—

1. Tax luxuries.
2. Tax inheritances.
3. Tax large incomes.
4. Tax monopolies.
5. Tax the privileged corporations.
6. A tariff for revenue.
7. Reform the civil service.
8. Punish corrupt office-holders.
9. Punish vote-buying.
10. Punish employers who coerce their employees in elections.

With which we in the main agree, but would increase ten to the patriotic number of thirteen by adding—

11. Stop useless and extravagant appropriations.
12. Abolish sinecure offices.
13. Restrict the Presidency to a single term.

DECORATION DAY.

The day set apart for the floral decoration of the graves of those who sacrificed their soldier lives for the cause of Union will, we are glad to know, be observed this year in Plainfield more appropriately than ever before.

It is a beautiful memorial service, and while tending to perpetuate grateful remembrance of those heroic men who fell in the patriotic struggle, it leads or should lead all survivors to estimate aright the worth of victory they secured.

Strew with flowers the earth mounded resting places of the gallant dead.

Let the voice of oratory recount their living deeds, and the strains of music, like fragrance, float upon the air.

Then may heart-felt gratitude arise to Almighty God that we are again a united people, that the cause of internal discord has been removed, the links of Union more strongly rivited, and that, in lieu of glistening bayonet and bursting bomb, from centre to circumference of our majestic Republic the only weapons of rivalry now wielded are those of peaceful enterprise and industry.

Let us fully honor on Decoration Day the memory of our Union's defenders, and zealously endeavor to render the cause they espoused an enduring bond of happiness and prosperity for all the people of all sections.

FELL FROM GRACE.

Again has a Republican office-holder violated the trust reposed in him by the people. Levi D. Jarrard, the County Collector of Middlesex, has disappeared from his home in New Brunswick, and his accounts are found to be short. $90,841.82 is the amount of the deficiency thus far found in his accounts, and it is intimated that it will run up to between forty and seventy thousand dollars. It is rumored that Levi is sojourning at present in Canada. The following named gentlemen are Jarrard's bondsmen:

On New Brunswick Post Office bond—Messrs. Joseph Fisher, Sr., H. M. Price, Daniel G. Stubblebine and Charles A. Strong.

On County Collector's bond—Messrs. Garret G. Conover, D. G. Stubblebine, Charles A. Strong, A. J. Disbrow, Davis Carel, John Vandeventer and John Runyon.

Ex-Governor Bedle, who was appointed by the Chancellor to examine into the solvency of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, reported to the Chancellor, at his Chambers in Newark, on Saturday last, that he had found the company solvent, and the Chancellor at once signed an order that upon complying with the terms imposed by himself for securing the debts and liabilities of the Receivership, the property should be turned over to the Board of Directors.

May 21, there was a long conference between Mr. Gowen and Mr. Harris of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Co., in reference to the Jersey Central lease. Mr. Harris for his company demands full protection for the Wilkesbarre and Lehigh region, and insists that it shall be put in writing as a supplement to the present lease; and he is fully sustained in his demands by the managers of the Navigation Co. In times past the rivalry between the coal regions has been such as to create a strong feeling, and while Mr. Gowen may have forgotten his contests with Mr. Parish and other leading operators in the Wilkesbarre region it is deemed best by the Navigation Co. that their shippers be protected in a business way. The matter excites interest on Wall street only as it affects the lease of the Jersey Central, but among the coal men there is much comment over the negotiations.

LOCAL ANNEX.

Memorial Day 1883.

Once more in Plainfield, on Decoration Day, will be heard the sound of martial music, and the soldierly tramp of those who often have followed the dear old flag to many a battlefield. Yes, on the 30th of May, the people of this city will have the pleasure of seeing a portion of those who remain of that Legion of Honor, that responded so nobly to their country's call twenty years ago. The sight ought to thrill every loyal heart, and inspire every one to more devoted love of our precious, blood-bought country. Memorial Day is no festive occasion. It is solemn, oh! how solemn, for by the side of every Comrade of the Grand Army walks a silent shadow, and as the soldierly foot-falls strike upon our ear, many, very many of us, will hear a hollow sound, the echo of the steps of some of our dear ones, dead, ay to us, more than dead, for we know not where they are laid. In the bright, sunny south land, upon every battle plain, Gettysburg, Antietam, Chancellorsville, Fredericksburg, Balls' Bluff, Malvern Hill, The Wilderness, and—oh, that every head might be bared at the mention—Libby, Andersonville and Salisbury, 11,700 men buried in the trenches of Salisbury, the heroes who starved rather than be false to their flag!

As I understand it, it is proposed by the Post of the Grand Army of this place, to decorate the grave of every sleeping Comrade in our various cemeteries, and it seems to me, no Memorial committee need appeal more than once to an intelligent community like this for funds where with to perform their hallowed work. Let us do our part men, women and children. Never mind if the offering is small, the drops make the ocean, and let us not be tardy, so that those having the matter in charge, may know at once what they can do, and so be enabled to do it creditably to the memory of the 400,000 men who died that our nation might live.

A LADY OF PLAINFIELD.

The Results of an Opera House.

We republish in full the following from the Orange Chronicle as evidence of the benefits of an Opera House to any city.

"At the close of the most profitable of the three successful seasons of amusements in Music Hall it seems an appropriate time to speak of benefits the hall has brought to us as a city. Before the new hall was built the need was felt of a place wherein to hold first-class lectures and concerts, and although doubts were expressed as to whether it would pay to erect a first-class opera house, the public spirited and open handed men of the Oranges furnished the necessary capital and the hall was built. Probably but a few expected that the hall would pay a good dividend on its stock, but the idea was to have a good place in which to hold entertainments, and the thing was shortly accomplished. Under the excellent management of the directors, and their efficient manager, Music Hall has proved more and more remunerative to its stockholders and the character of the entertainments given there has constantly improved. The present season, which practically closed with the appearance of Mrs. Langtry on Thursday evening, has brought us the highest class of entertainments, both musical and dramatic, not one of which, except possibly some of the illustrated lectures, could have been given elsewhere in the city. The good name of the place has in consequence spread abroad, and managers of the most celebrated entertainments are now making constant application to come here, while hundreds are refused for the reason in the main that they are not up to the standard. All good entertainments are beneficial, even if simply amusing, and but few of them are that alone, while the most are educational. The public desires to be amused, and it is generally willing to be taught at the same time. Amusements are as necessary to culture and development as anything in the world that we rate among luxuries. If we can have our amusements at home, without the trouble of making journeys to the metropolis for them, we have a great point gained, and this is gradually being brought about through the instrumentality of the public hall which was three years ago put up to supply an existing need, but which has not only fulfilled that but has created and fulfilled another even greater and broader."

WESTFIELD WISPS.

The Westfield Hotel is becoming very popular under the management of its new proprietor, Mr. Samuel Godschalk. Everything is neat and clean about the house, while the bar is stocked with good liquors and ales. Strangers will find Mr. G. a genial and obliging landlord, if they patronize the Westfield Hotel.

C. H. French the well-known dealer in agricultural impliments, is now busy delivering cultivators, mowers and reapers. He claims to sell only the best goods in the market. Many farmers we know, speak very highly of his machines. If you want anything in his line, order early; do not wait until ready to use, then have to buy an inferior machine.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE BOARD OF CHOSEN FREEHOLDERS.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER IN UNION COUNTY.

AN APPEAL TO THE PUBLIC!

HEADQUARTERS MEMORIAL COMMITTEE,
WINFIELD SCOTT POST, NO. 73, G.A.R.,
NO. 26 EAST FRONT STREET.

In accordance with a resolution of the above committee, we appeal to the public of Plainfield and vicinity for funds and flowers to aid us in properly observing Memorial Day, May 30th, the day set apart for decorating the graves of our fallen comrades.

Any contributions that the public may favor us with may be sent to the treasurer at the above address, or to W. R. Mattison, 76 Somerset street, S. C. Peck, Jr., 28 West Front street and M. C. Dobbins, segar dealer, 18 North avenue, who will acknowledge receipt of the same.

BY ORDER OF COM.

HOIST your flags on Decoration day.

Now that we have had the 'blossom storm,' let us hope we shall have settled weather for a time.

SOME Princeton collegians walked to Plainfield, Sunday last—and rode back on the cars.

AN adjourned meeting of the Union Club will be held to-morrow evening at eight o'clock.

A FASHION paper says striped stockings are no longer bon ton, and that bangs are going out of fashion.

AT John W. Morris' stables in New Brunswick you can get just the horse you want at your own price.

THERE is still a "hitch" in the transfer of the oil-cloth works to the new firm that is to continue their existence.

MR. B. S. Little, of Park avenue, sold his handsome bay team, last week, to a prominent Brooklyn gentleman for a valuable consideration.

STRAWBERRIES and cream will be served at the L. L. Fair in the parlors of the Crescent avenue church, next Thursday afternoon and evening.

THE fizz of the soda-fountain is heard in the land, and to the pharmacy of H. P. Reynolds the thirsty flock and quaff the cooling beverage flavored with pure juices of the fruit itself.

A SOCIABLE under the auspices of the P. C's of Good Will Lodge of Scotch Plains, will be given in the Truck House at that place, this evening. Music by Prof. Guttman of this city.

THE Crescents played their first match of the season, Saturday last, and succeeded in effectually defeating a 'picked nine.' A game with the Westfield nine is contemplated for Decoration day.

A GRAND shooting match at Campbell's Club House on Decoration Day, May 30th. Over 200 live pigeons have been secured for the occasion. Clay pigeons and glass balls will also be furnished.

MRS. Fine, dressmaker, has not removed from the Stillman homestead property, which is the proposed site for the Opera House building. She will give due notice to her numerous patrons when changing her residence.

DON'T fail to purchase one or more of the Cook Books for sale at the L. L. Fair next Thursday. They contain the personal recipes of many of the ladies of Plainfield, and besides securing one for yourself you should send a copy to every friend you have.

THE Plainfield Saengerbund with members of the Aurora and other singing societies, celebrated the national May festival on the mountains, last Sunday. The Sun did not make its appearance as early as was its duty, but the day was passed in an entirely gratifying manner by the large number present.

COMRADES of Winfield Scott Post No. 73, are ordered to assemble at their headquarters, on Sunday evening, May 27th, at 7:15 o'clock, wearing their regulation hats and gloves. They will then form and march to Trinity Reformed Church for Divine service, in accordance with orders from National headquarters.

As the season is "on" when stoves will be taken down and put away, it may be of interest to the public to know that Carney Bros., 21 Somerset street, have secured a building at 67 Somerset street, wherein they propose storing stoves for customers in a safe and careful manner until they are wanted for next winter's use. They also make a specialty of sharpening and repairing of lawn mowers.

THE law removing check and proprietary stamps does not take effect until July 1, 1883. A penalty of $50 is imposed upon every person who makes, signs or issues any check before the date without a stamp, or exposes for sale any proprietary article, of whatever nature, without the requisite stamp upon each and every article. This law must be strictly adhered to until this date, or parties must otherwise take the consequences.

THIS evening the Young People's Association of the Crescent avenue church will hold its monthly social, at which special features of pleasant entertainment are to be offered. The programme will include part-songs, trios for female voices, a madrigal and other vocal selections by the fourteen members of the church choir; and Miss Gavett will repeat, by request, Kotoski's "Waking of the Lion" and another piano solo.

THE well-known Taylor's Hotel, near the ferry, Jersey City, is now under the proprietorship of Mr. George B. DeRevere, former proprietor of the City Hotel and Park House, this city. Extensive improvements are being made in and about the building, which will have 200 rooms for guests when completed. The Taylor House is kept on the European plan, the same containing all the delicacies of the season at reasonable rates. Mr. DeRevere is very popular as a landlord and is making many new friends daily. Give him a call when in Jersey City. You will be sure of a kind reception.

MUCH complaint is made by business men of this city, at the prevalence of street venders, who are allowed to dispose of their wares by the payment of a small license. The merchant who pays rent for his store is not able to compete with these street peddlers in prices and are consequently injured thereby in business.

A "CITIZEN'S ASSOCIATION" has been formed in North Plainfield with the following officers: President, Jas. McGee; Vice Presidents, Charles Matthews and Charles W. McCutchen; Secretary, John H. Van Winkle; Treasurer, E. L. Bonny. Committees were also appointed on Legislation, Excise, School Matters, Public Affairs and Nuisances.

EVERY subscriber to the Music Hall signed the following contract: "to pay the sums set opposite to their names respectively, in instalments as called for by the constituted officers of said association, to be applied to the erection of a Music Hall to be located on the Stillman Homestead lot." Why, then, and of what use is all the talk about change of location?

DR PRITTS who recently leased a house on Second street of Dr. Gillette, was compelled by the city to pay the taxes due on the same, and in consequence claimed of the owner the deduction of such amount from the rent. Suit was brought by Dr. Gillette to recover of his tenant, and Justice Nodyne has just decided against the plaintiff. Under this ruling a Wall street broker of Park ave. was compelled this week to pay his landlord's taxes and a Councilman has been notified.

THE sudden death of Mr. Joseph H. Staats occurred at Elizabeth, Sunday morning last under peculiar circumstances. The Tuesday previous he ate a quantity of peanuts, which refused to digest despite the aid of skilled physicians, and after suffering untold agony he expired as above stated. Deceased was the son of Mr. Thomas A. Staats, a former resident of Plainfield, and was a most exemplary young man. He had been engaged for over a year as a clerk in the office of the Savannah, Florida and Western Railroad, in New York, where his services were held in high esteem. His remains were brought to this city on Wednesday for interment.

THE match race for Decoration Day (May 30), at Waverly, between Irish Lad and Peralto is exciting much comment. The match is for $500, and the winner also takes the gate money. The race is absolute and the best horse will win. There will also be a trot for the Waverly Hotel stakes (a silver cup) to road wagons, owners to drive; a race for $150, by Deucalion, Jr., and Belle, and a running race for special purse, half-mile dash, best two in three. The entries for the running race and the road-wagon race close at the Waverly Hotel on the 25th. All communications to be addressed to J. McGuinness, Waverly Hotel. Irish Lady is by Aberdeen and Peralto by Hambletonian Prince.

New Jersey's Pharmaceutists.

The following are the names of the newly-elected officers of the State Pharmaceutical Association: President, R. W. Vanderbilt, Newark; First Vice President, C. G. Am Ende, Hoboken; Second Vice President. W. R. Thorn, Medford; Treasurer, William Rust, New Brunswick; Recording Secretary, A. P. Brown, Camden; Corresponding Secretary, R. J. Shaw, Plainfield. The following fifteen gentlemen were nominated for presentation to Governor Ludlow from whom to select five to constitute the State Board of Pharmacy: "Messrs. R. W. Vandervoort, Charles Holzhauer, C. B. Smith and William M. Townley, Newark; A. P. Brown, Camden; Gustavus A. Mangold and Randall Rickey, Trenton; W. R. Laird, George H. White and M. Abernathy, Jersey City; H. P. Reynolds, Plainfield; F. B. Kilmer and William Rust, New Brunswick; Charles G. Am Ende, Hoboken, and Eugene Tissler, Orange.

Personalia.

Mr. O. T. Roberts of this city has accepted a position with the Northern Pacific R. R., at Mandan, Dakota, and will leave for that place, next Tuesday.

Mr. David Lyon, the talented organist of the First Baptist church, is arranging an exceedingly pleasing concert to be given in the Park avenue church early in June in which he will be assisted by the N. Y. Philharmonic Club.

Councilman Livingston, ex-councilman Knowland, of this city, and Mr. R. W. Woodward, of Elizabeth, last week returned from a fishing excursion to the wilds of Sullivan County, N. Y. and brought back with them 150 fine trout.

The serious illness of Heywood Cuthbert, to which we referred last week, resulted in his death during Friday morning. Funeral services were held Monday at 5 p. m., at the residence of the deceased's parents, and although many friends did not attend, the rooms were crowded. The death of no one among us has created such universal sorrow as the demise of this most promising young man.

Important Notice.

All persons having relatives or friends who were Union soldiers during the late war, and who are buried in any of the cemeteries of this city, are requested to place a small flag upon each grave the day before Decoration, in order that no grave may be neglected.

By order of Committee,
EDWARD J. OLSEEN, Chairman.

The Fair of the Season.

Even in this city so noted for the good results of its fairs and parlor sales, it yet seems possible from all indications that probably the most successful financially and otherwise is to be that held in the parlors of the Crescent avenue church during the afternoon and evening of next Friday for the benefit of the Children's Home. The ladies who labored all Winter to perfect this affair, have at last achieved such results as promise enviable success. Their motto has been, "Look up, not down, Look out, not in; Look forward, not backward, and Lend a hand."

Warning to Boys.

It having been stated on good authority that a number of boys of North Plainfield have recently been detected in robbing birds nests of eggs, we are requested by the officers of the Game Protective Society to state that a watch will hereafter be put on their movements, and if they are caught in the act of taking eggs from birds nests, or having them in their possession, they will be arrested and prosecuted at once. Some person yet unknown, has offered these boys a reward for collecting birds eggs for New York parties. It is particularly desired that these parties, names be known, when they will be punished as the law directs. Any information leading to the identification of such law breakers may be left at this office.

A Man Drowned.

Peter Logan, a man about forty-five or fifty years of age, living at New Market, went fishing at that place Sunday morning and about noon some young men discovered a hat and fishing pole and line near the bridge which goes over the water power of the mill, and as Logan had been seen fishing there, the conclusion was that the hat was his. Inquiry was made at his home, when it was ascertained he was not in. Search was made for him and finally his dead body was found in the pond. It is supposed he must have fallen asleep and fell into the water. The County Physician was notified of the occurrence Sunday afternoon and attended to the matter immediately. A burial certificate was granted.—New Brunswick Times.

Third Home Dramatic Entertainment.

At Van Deventer Hall, next Wednesday evening, there will be given another of the enjoyable performances by the "Home Dramatics" of this city, assisted by special talent from New York. Upon this occasion the programme will be an unusually pleasing and varied one in which minstrelsy and burlesque will be unexceptionally presented. The first part will consist of fine solo and quartette singing, with the customary sayings and negro-syncracies of the "end men;" while the second part will be a grand olio, for which artists of acknowledged talent in their special lines have been engaged. The announcement alone of the re-appearance of Wilgus the wonderful banjoist and Sanders the xylophonist and pianist, is sufficient to attract a large attendance, and when we remember that so many other attractions are offered in addition, it seems probable that many—unless they apply early—will be unable to secure either seats or tickets. Reserved seats at 50 cents each are now for sale at the drug stores of Messrs. R. J. Shaw and J. G. Miller.

Some Mortality Figures.

From the Report of the Board of Health of New Jersey for 1883. Death rate per thousand of towns having from 5,000 to 10,000 inhabitants:

Columbia Glee Concert.

At the Park avenue Baptist church, Thursday evening of last week, the Columbia College Glee Club gave one of the very few financially successful concerts that this city can claim. A most select and quite an extensive audience was present, which expressed its enjoyment of the programme and the manner of its rendition, with some enthusiasm. The Club did not include among its number any soloists of remarkable talent, but collectively the voices were pleasing and well trained. That Mr. H. Seaman is a warbler of more than ordinary ability is very apparent, and doubtless no college can claim one that excels. Besides the vocal music, two amateurs on the banjo gave a selection from "Easy lessons for beginners," and later in the evening "The Carnival of Williamsburgh" with variations. They were more successful, however, in drowning the efforts of the singers by loud talking in the auditorium where they occupied prominent seats. If the Club will repeat its concert in the Fall, the same audience will again accomplish the success of the affair, but the banjoists should not be loosed.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The Bible study on Saturday evening will be held in the parlor and all the young men are invited to attend.

On account of the death of Mr. J. Heywood Cuthbert, a member of the Board of Directors, who is universally mourned by the Association, the monthly reception which was to be held on the 29th inst. will be omitted.

On this (Thursday) evening the Boys' Branch will give an entertainment in the Lecture room. Tickets of admission 25 cents. This entertainment is to be given for the benefit of the Branch. The entertainment promises to be of interest.

Young men if you want to receive a cordial welcome and find a home come to the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association. They are open and free to you. You will be always welcome and can have the privileges free. Strangers especially are invited to the hospitalities of the Association. The Gen. Secretary will be glad to learn of any young man who may be sick and in the need of brotherly assistance.

The meeting for prayer and song will be held on next Monday evening at 8 o'clock. The Association earnestly desires all young men who have the welfare of their fellow men at heart to help in this meeting by attendance and active personal work. Will not the young men remember this meeting and on Monday night come prepared to help? This branch of the work can be made an efficient power for good if all help as much as is in their power.

MEMORIAL DAY CELEBRATION.

Extracts from General Order of the Commander-in-chief G. A. R.—The day in this city—Line of March—Formation of column.

GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC,
OMAHA, NEB., April 14, 1883.
[GENERAL ORDERS NUMBER TEN.]

1. In compliance with the rules and regulations of the Grand Army of the Republic, Wednesday, May 30, will be observed as Memorial Day. The National Encampment adopted a resolution at its session in Baltimore declaring that this holy day should be called Memorial, and not Decoration Day.

2. I earnestly request all ministers and priests of every denomination to deliver appropriate sermons or lectures, calling attention to the duties of the day, the sacrifices made and the lessons taught, on Sunday, May 27th. In cities and villages where it will be practicable I recommend union services.

3. I recommend that the Grand Army take especial steps to secure the presence and aid of the children and youth of the country in the ceremony of strewing flowers, and otherwise honoring the dead, and to that end I hope that all public and private schools and academies will be closed.

4. Let the hand of fraternity and charity be extended to the widows and orphans of our dead heroes. Seek them out; distinguish them from all others and teach them that on this day the Grand Army mourns with them the loss of the precious ones whom they gave to save the nation.

5. I recommend that the loyal women of the nation be invited to aid in this work. They will toil, with willing hands and grateful hearts. Though others may have forgotten the dead the women have never ceased to remember them and treasure in their pure hearts their heroic services.

6. "With malice toward none and charity for all," let us unite in this sacred duty. Let the choicest, fairest and most fragrant flowers be culled, and the soft white hands of the loyal women of the land entwine the wreaths and fashion the cross and crown, dropping here and there, like the dew, a tear for the dead. Let the choicest gardens be desolated that the memory of the Union soldiers may not wither. We will lift once more the curtain that hides the dark past, and see our fallen martyrs die for liberty. They gave their lives a cheerful sacrifice.

Comrades, a few short years fleeting swiftly by, and our children will be called upon to perform this duty. Let us so live that the lessons of Memorial Day will be imprinted upon their hearts, and they will willingly take up the work where our palsied hands have left it, and perpetuate for all time to come the touching ceremony we have inaugurated.

By command of
PAUL VANDERVOORT,
Commander-in-Chief.
F. E. BROWN, Adjutant General.

In compliance with above general orders from headquarters, G. A. R., Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, will assemble at their Post rooms, Wednesday, May 30th, 1883, at 12.15 p. m. Line will form on Front street right resting on Park Ave., to move at 1 p. m. Somerset street to Chatham, to cemetery, to Elm place, to Front street, to Plainfield avenue, to the two cemeteries, to 7th street, to Madison avenue, to 9th street, to cemetery and City Park. After services in Park to 9th street, to Park avenue, to Front street.

GENERAL ORDER NO. 2.
HEADQUARTERS WINFIELD SCOTT POST NO. 73,
DEPT. N. J., G. A. R.

Comrade Rufus K. Case is hereby appointed Marshall for Memorial Day, and he will be respected and obeyed accordingly. By order of
W. E. MATTISON, Comd'r.
Official: E. J. OLSEEN, Act. Adjt.

The graves of soldiers buried at Scotch Plains, and in the Catholic and Quaker cemeteries will be decorated and the grand army service given in the forenoon of said day by a detail, with the proper officers from the Post.

Invitations having been extended to the Mayor and the city officers, Fire Department and civic societies, and most of them having signified their intention to join in the parade, Plainfield will come to the front on this the nation's Memorial Day.

The Collector's Dinner.

Friday of last week after adjournment of the Union County Board of Freeholders, the members of that body and a number of other invited guests sat down to a fine dinner at the Sheridan House, Elizabeth. The tables fairly groaned under the weight of the good things set thereon by mine host Staats, who knows how to cater to the wants of the public. The menu on this occasion was all that the most fastidious epecurian could desire.

At the head of one of the long tables sat Judge Mc Cormick, who acted as Master of Ceremonies in a most efficient and humorous manner. His first toast was 'to our County Collector,' to which Mr. Sheridan replied with his accustomed modesty and flow of wit, returning thanks to the officers, Board and Press for the courtesies extended through the year.

To the toast, 'The County of Union,' Director Martine responded. He complimented Mr. Sheridan and spoke briefly of the success of the county. He first entered the Board eight or nine years ago. The county's bonded debt was then $600,000. These bonds paid 7 per cent. premium, and sold at a discount. Since then these bonds have been paid off to the amount of over one-quarter million dollars. They pay to-day from 5 to 6 per cent. and are selling at two per cent. premium. Our county buildings are, in regard to condition and appointments, as good as any in the State. Our bridges are as well constructed, being built of the best quarry stone, laid with cement. The yearly tax for appropriations has been gradually reduced from $260,000 to $115,000; this year the appropriations will be $130,000, the slight increase occasioned by the necessity of repairs to property destroyed by floods, &c. He closed by thanking the Board for their unity of action in county work and courtesies to himself as Director.

Judge McCormick said he had intended to propose, as the next toast, 'The City of Elizabeth,' but as there was a modest and handsome representative of the Government present, he would propose, as the next sentiment, 'The United States of America' and called Captain Gill to respond.

Captain Gill said the subject was broad enough for all he could have to say. He was glad of the opportunity of again meeting his warm friend, Sheridan, and participate in his hospitality in company with so many old friends. He came to Elizabeth fifteen years ago, and had formed lasting friendships. It was a pleasure for him to see so many familiar faces and a greater pleasure to see that no party lines were drawn; that Democrats and Republicans were mingled together under bonds of friendship. He was gratified to hear the good reports of the standing of Union county; it was creditable to the citizens, creditable to the Board and officers. He doubted if many counties could show so good a standing. As to his friend Sheridan no eulogy need be made. His balance sheets, showed not a farthing unaccounted for, spoke volumes as to his honesty and competency as an officer. Sheridan was a man of warm, generous impulses. He might not be a Chesterfield, but had all the honesty and vitality of character found in a good man. He was ever ready to respond to duty, and when wanted you will not find 'Sheridan twenty miles away.' So long as the county is represented by such men as Hubbard, Smith, Isenmann and other familiar faces he saw, its credit and progress will never be compromised. The Captain, in conclusion, proposed as a sentiment the 'Memory of the late Freehold McCloud,' and the toast was drank with the company standing.

To the toast 'City of Elizabeth' Comptroller Carlton was called on to respond.

Mr. Carlton said he did not know why the Judge should have any spite against him. He could not say why he called on him to speak. He was never up before the Judge, and had never said anything against him. And then why was he called upon after Capt. Gill; he did not know, unless it was to show what a great man the Captain is and what a very little man he (the Comptroller) is. He wished the City of Elizabeth was in as good standing as the County of Union. If it was, he would not have to dodge around corners to escape creditors. He hoped, though, that ere long the city would recover from its plight, and would be, hereafter, able to pay its county tax without anymore mandamuses.

To the toast 'City of Plainfield,' responses were made by Freeholders Hubbard and Vanderbeek.

Judge Heyer responded 'To the city of Rahway.'

Freeholder Isennmann responded to the toast 'To the Mayor of Cranford.'

Toasts were proposed to the 'ex-Mayors of Elizabeth,' and happy responses were made by Ex-Mayors Ryder and Bonnett.

'To the Bar of Union County,' Prosecutor Wilson responded. He congratulated the county on its success, and spoke of the decrease of crime which, he said, was due to the wise administration of justice by the judiciary. He closed by proposing a way for the settlement of Elizabeth's plight. He suggested as the county's bonds were selling at two per cent. premium and its financial standing so good, that it assume the city's debt.

The 'Health of Freeholder Oliver' was proposed. Mr. Oliver said he knew he was going to be called on for a speech. He was called on at the last dinner, but was unprepared to respond. He had determined to come ready this time, and had engaged a man to write him a speech for the sum of $2.50; the fellow had promised to prepare one that would knock the others out of time. The fellow kept disappointing him and on Wednesday night, when he called on him, the speech-writer said he would be obliged to disappoint him owing to a press of business, he having been engaged to write the speeches for all the others who were to be present and had failed to get down to Oliver's.

Other toasts were proposed and responded to as follows:

'The Press of Union County'—W. L. Force of the Plainfield CONSTITUTIONALIST.

'To the Surrogate'—by Surrogate Jas. J. Gerber.

'Township of Union'—Freeholder Doty

'Township of Summit'—Freeholder Bryant.

'Our County Clerk'—Assistant Clerk John L. Crowell.

'The Shrievalty'—Sheriff Thos. Forsyth.

'County Physician'—Dr. Thos. Terrill.

'The Ladies'—Mr. John Astfalt.

Other remarks were made by Messrs. A. S. Newbury, Jas. E. Martine, Freeholders White and Debbie and Mr. P. J. Ryan. Capt. Gill made the closing remarks which were humorous and elicited rounds of applause. Letters of regret were read from Congressman John Kean, Jr., ex-Freeholder Stover, Mr. Edward Ward, of N. Y. City and others who were unable to be present.

For "The Constitutionalist."

Only Thirty Years Ago.

MESSRS EDITORS—It was a splendid morning and the spring-fever had taken hold of me like a crab to a piece of dead mule. A great many people think spring fever is laziness. It may be in some, not in us! Now the real cause of this demoralising disease is stagnant blood that needs working off either by physic or otherwise. The first attack generally takes the form of "goin' fishin'" or, a quiet mope to some old camping ground hallowed by school-boy reminiscences. Having loaned all the fishing tackle I ever possessed, to a poor fellow that had been attacked with this disease, last spring, and from whom no account has ever been given, a jaunt in the country suggested itself. No sooner thought of than the project was put into practice. Taking the train at the foot of Liberty street, N. Y., it was not many minutes ere it went bowling along the suburbs of the pretty city of Plainfield—the garden city—of New Jersey. I could scarcely believe it the same quiet village of thirty years ago. In looking about for old land marks the first that meets the stranger is the old Friends Meeting House, and to us boys a hallowed spot. The old horse-sheds, with their well-knawed hitching poles could tell many a secret, of mischief brewed beneath their friendly shelter on rainy Saturdays, and when I compared the beautiful and tasty station at which I alighted to the old low-down and clumsy depot of years ago, where the largest peanuts and ruddiest pippins our eyes have ever beheld, and sold by the only (to us) rich man in the world—Mr. Jerome Pack—it seems almost a mistake, that I had alighted at the wrong station; but the old Meeting House was a clincher to any further argument. Thirty odd years ago I took my last look at the old school house, then kept by Davidson, and sought pastures new, which, by the way, have not been barren of good results. The spot that was then green fields and shady groves, is now the site of hundreds of cosy houses and elegant residences. The first call was a Constitutional visit to my old playmates, the Messrs. Force Bros., who at once proffered their hospitality and the freedom(?) of the city. Sauntering down Main street the first familiar sight was Cushing's corner. Well do I remember the mystery connected with that mansion—the art of printing. There the wonderful newspaper of the village was printed, and delivered to the subscribers on horseback by saddle-bags, instead of mail-bags. When the snow was too deep they waited for a thaw. It was within these mysterious portals that "Billy" took his first degree in the "art," and whose diploma, after years of patient toil, was an Ayres (?) almanac, tendered by the "old man" with solemn visage: "There William," he said, "you have been a good boy; here's a present for you—take it home and show it to your parents." After a wholesome dinner at mine host—"Jimmy's," we strolled down to Laing's Hotel: what a transformation was here! Instead of the old comfortable porch and the every day "how-de-do, "take-somethin'" sort of an air that used to pervade the atmosphere of that once bustling, old-time hostelry, there seemed to be an unknown stiffness about it—like an old woman togged off in girls' clothes—out of place, you know. On the spot where once stood the old white house and "High School for boys" (Marius's)? now towers the clothing house of Messrs. Schepflin, Baldwin, Tweedy & Co., and the old school has been twisted about from its italic position on the brow of the hill to a proper angle on the main street, and what, in our boyhood days seemed a large, splendid mansion, is now nothing but a good sized coal-bin. Stepping into the office of "Uncle John's," he provided us with a "team," that soon landed us beyond Cedar Brook and Short Hills. It seemed but yesterday that the spot now known as the City Park, was almost a wilderness, and a half-day's journey from the village, while Short Hills, now the site of some of the most beautiful villas, and the "greatest folly," was to be reached only by the most intrepid hunters. From here can be had an incomparable and magnificent panorama of valley and mountain scenery. Driving down the main avenue we took in the great and wonderful French's Pond; its vastness was, in those days, miles in circumference—now, only a pond. From here we drove out to the "Notch." It is the only spot where nature seems defiant and wants to be left alone. The grand old pines, the moss-covered rocks, the clear cold stream of "Stony Brook," the indescribable beauty of "Buttermilk Falls"—it was all there—the same hallowed rocks with their traditional bowls that were used by the Indian to pound his corn. What a lovely spot! Here can be found the purest air and water that this little globe ever produced for the comfort of man. From here to North Plainfield is but a short drive and a surprise at every turn; where once the game from the mountain slope was trapped and hunted now stands magnificent cottages surrounded by pretty lawns and cosy nooks, and down around the old Benny Stelle property, where the boys did their coasting in winter and frog-hunting in summer, it is now thickly studded with rare architecture in the shape of cottages and elegant mansions. It seems sacraligous to part with Randolph's pond. In that very spot there could be made the most beautiful lake imaginable. Who could conceive of anything more beautiful than the grounds above French's pond—the residences of Messrs. Myres, Hyde, Clarkson, Johnson, and others. The malarial bug-bear is destined, I'm afraid, to do more injury to the property and people of Plainfield than the disease itself. It is simply ridiculous to conjure up the ghost of Malaria where the streams are constantly running water and whose sources are traceable to pure mountain springs! After tea, or I might say dinner, for it there is anything that will get up the appetite, it is a ramble with pleasant associates among boyhood scenes, to cap the climax of a never-to-be-forgotten-day, the fire laddies turned out, for an alarm; and although I have witnessed many such scenes in New York, I have never seen the "line" stretched in a neater or quicker manner. Three minutes after the first tap of the bell a stream was on the fire—well done! The rivalry was good natured, however, and that is just as it should be every time.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

How to shorten life. The receipt is simple. You have only to take a violent cold and then neglect it. Abernethy, the great English surgeon, asked a lady who told him she only had a cough: "What would you have? The Plague?" Beware of "only coughs!" The worst cases can, however, be cured by Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs. In Whooping Cough and Croup it immediately allays irritation, and is sure to prevent a fatal termination of the disease. Sold by all druggists and dealers in medicine.

Dr. Roger's Vegetable Worm Syrup is one of the most pleasant, or palatable preparations for worms we have ever known. It is thoroughly efficacious, and never requires any other medicine to carry it off after using it. Children like it, as though it were honey.

Townsley's Toothache Anodyne cures instantly.

Shiloh's Consumption Cure. This is beyond question the most successful Cough Medicine we have ever sold, a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup and Bronchitis whilst it's wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since it's first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a test which no other medicine can stand. If you have a Cough we earnestly ask you to try it. Price 10 cents, 50 cents and $1.00. If your Lungs are sore, Chest or Back, Lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Price 25 cts. Sold by R. J. Shaw.

Answer this question. Why do so many we see around us, seem to prefer to suffer and be made miserable by Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness Loss of Appetite, Coming up of the Food, Yellow Skin, when for 75 cents, we will sell them Shiloh's Vitalizer, guaranteed to cure them. Sold by R. J. Shaw.

Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy. A marvelous cure for Catarrh, Diphtheria, Canker mouth and Head ache. With each bottle there is an ingenious nasal injector for the more successful treatment of these complaints without extra charge. Price, 50 cents. Sold by R. J. Shaw.

"Buchu-paiba." Quick, complete cure, all annoying Kidney, Bladder and Urinary Diseases. $1. Druggists.

CONCORD GRAPE VINES.—Fine, vigorous Vines, two, three and four years' old, for sale by the dozen or thousand at the lowest prices. These Vines are raised at the famous Mt. Prospect Vineyards, at Passaic, New Jersey, where the well-known Port Grape Wine is produced that is so highly esteemed in Dresden and Berlin, and other European cities to which it is shipped, and that is so highly endorsed by physicians everywhere. Address, ALFRED SPEER, Passaic, N. J.

"Mother Swan's Worm Syrup." Infallible, tasteless, harmless, cathartic; for feverishness, restlessness, worms, constipation. 25c.

I limped about for years with a cane, and could not bend down without excruciating pain. Parker's Ginger Tonic has worked an astonishing cure and I now walk without a cane. It is invaluable. M. [illegible], Binghamton, N. Y.

A dangerous counterfeit. There are dangerous counterfeits in circulation, purporting to be "Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer." The strongest evidence of its great value is the fact that parties knowing its great efficacy try to imitate it. Each bottle of the genuine has a fac-simile of a walnut leaf blown in the glass, and a Green Leaf on the outside wrapper. The "Restorer" is as harmless as water, while it possesses all the properties necessary to restore life, vigor, growth and color to the hair. Purchase only from responsible parties. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. Johnston, Holloway & Co., Philadelphia, and Hall & Ruckel, New York, wholesale agents.

"Rough on Rats," clears out rats, mice, roaches, flies, ants, bed bugs, skunks, chipmunks, gophers. 15c. Druggists.

A dressing to beautify gray hair every family needs. Parker's Hair Balsam never fails to satisfy. [illegible] Parker's Ginger Tonic a more excellent remedy for kidney, lung and stomach disorders. [illegible] J. Francis, [illegible], Chicago.

Best ever made, Emery's Little Cathartic Pills, pleasant to take, sugar-coated; no griping; only 15cents a box, of Druggists or mail. Standard Cure Co. Sold by H. P. Reynolds, Plainfield, N. J.

Malaria, Chills and Fever, and Bilious attacks positively cured with Emery's Standard Cure Pills—an infallible remedy; never fail to cure the most obstinate, long-standing cases where Quinine and all other remedies have failed. THE BAD BOY AND THE BAND.

THE OLD GENTLEMAN ENTERTAINS THE SERENADERS WITH A SPEECH AND REFRESHMENTS—TROUBLE AT THE CHURCH.

"What was it I heard about a band serenading your father, and his inviting them in to lunch?" said the grocery man to the bad boy.

"Don't let that get out, or pa will kill me dead. It was a joke. One of these Bohemian bands that goes about town playing tunes, for pennies, was over on the next street, and I told pa I guessed some of his friends who had heard we had a baby at the house had hired a band and was coming in a few minutes to serenade him, and he better prepare to make a speech. Pa is proud of being a father at his age, and he thought it was no more than right for the neighbors to serenade him, and he went to loading himself for a speech, in the library, and me and my chum went out and told the leader of the band there was a family up there that wanted some music, and they didn't care for expense, so they quit blowing where they was and came right along. None of them could understand English except the leader, and he only understood enough to go and take a drink when he is invited. My chum steered the band up to our house and got them to play 'Babies on our Block,' and 'Baby Mine,' and I stopped all the men who were going home and told them to wait a minute and they would see some fun, so when the band got through the second tune, and the Prussians were emptying the beer out of the horns, and pa stepped out on the porch, there was more nor a hundred people in front of the house. You'd a dide to see pa when he put his hand in the breast of his coat, and struck an attitude. He looked like a Congressman, or a tramp. The band was scared, 'cause they thought he was mad, and some of them were going to run, thinking he was going to throw pieces of brick house at them, but my chum and the leader kept them. Then pa sailed in. He commenced, 'Fellow citizens,' and then went away back to Adam and Eve, and worked up to the present day, giving a history of the notable people who had acquired children, and kept the crowd interested. I felt sorry for pa, 'cause I knew how he would feel when he came to find out he had been sold. The Bohemians in the band that couldn't understand English, they looked at each other, and wondered what it was all about, and finally pa wound up by saying that it was every citizen's duty to own children of his own, and then he invited the band and the crowd in to take some refreshments. Well, you ought to have seen that band come in the house. They fell over each other getting in, and the crowd went home, leaving pa and my chum and me and the band. Eat? Well, I should smile. They just reached for things, and talked Bohemian. Drink? Oh, no. I guess they didn't pour it down. Pa opened a dozen bottles of champagne, and they fairly bathed in it, as though they had a fire inside. Pa tried to talk with them about the baby, but they couldn't understand, and finally they got full and started out, and the leader asked pa for three dollars, and that broke him up. Pa told the leader he supposed the gentlemen who had got up the serenade had paid for the music, and the leader pointed to me and said I was the gentleman that got it up. Pa paid him, but he had a wicked look in his eye, and me and my chum lit out, and the Bohemians came down the street bilin' full, with their horns on their arms, and they were talking Bohemian for all that was out. They stopped in front of a vacant house and began to play, but you couldn't tell what tune it was, they were so full, and a policeman came along and drove them home. I guess I will sleep at the livery stable to-night, 'cause pa is offul unreasonable when anything costs him three dollars, beside the champagne."

"Well, you have made a pretty mess of it," said the grocery man. "It's a wonder your pa does not kill you. But what is it I hear about the trouble at the church? They lay that foolishness to you."

"It's a lie. They lay everything to me. It was some of them ducks that sing in the choir. I was as much surprised as anybody when it occurred. You see, our minister is laid up from the effect of the ride to the funeral, when he tried to run over a street car, and an old deacon, who had symptoms of being a minister in his youth, was invited to take the minister's place and talk a little. He is an absent-minded old party, who don't keep up with the events of the day, and who ever played it on him knew that he was too pious to even read the daily papers. There was a notice of a choir meeting to be read and I think the tenor smuggled in the other notice, between that and the one about the weekly prayer meeting. After the deacon read the choir notice he took up the other one and read, 'I am requested to announce that the Y. M. C. Association will give a friendly entertainment with soft gloves, on Tuesday evening, to which all are invited. Brother John Sullivan, the eminent Boston revivalist, will lead the exercises, assisted by Brother Slade, the Maori missionary from Australia. There will be no slugging, but a collection will be taken up at the door to defray expenses.' Well, I thought the people in church would sink through the floor. There was not a person in the church, except the poor old deacon, but what understood that some wicked wretch had deceived him, and I know by the way the tenor tickled the soprano, that he did it. I may be mean, but everything I do is innocent and I wouldn't be as mean as a choir singer for two dollars. I felt real sorry for the old deacon, but he never knew what he had done, and I think it would be real mean to tell him. He won't be at the slugging match. That remark about taking up a collection settled the deacon. I must go down to the stable now and help grease a hack, so you will have to excuse me. If pa comes here looking for me, tell him you heard I was going to drive a picnic party out to Waukesha, and may not be back in a week. By that time pa will get over that Bohemian serenade," and the boy filled his pistol pocket with dried apples and went out and hung a sign in front of the grocery, "Strawberries two shillin' a smell, and one smell is enuff."—Peck's Sun.

METHODS OF TREATING ORES.

THE MEXICAN COMPARED WITH THE AMERICAN—A SURPRISE TO GEN. DIAZ.

During the stay of ex-President Diaz and his companions in New York they repeatedly visited the reduction works of the Campbell Mining and Reducing Company, and watched with peculiar interest the rapid treatment of ore by machinery. In Mexico, the introduction of modern machinery for obtaining the precious metals has hardly begun. The ancient patios process is still used to extract the gold and silver. This is done by tying together about 10 mules, or horses, with ropes and causing them to tramp around the patios, or yard, paved with blocks of stone, upon which ground ore and quicksilver are strewn. This is kept up from 30 to 40 days according to the weather, when the material is tested, and if found to have amalgamated from 55 to 60 per cent., the mass is collected and placed in huge tanks, into which water is turned, and the earth is freed and washed off, always carrying with it, however, a considerable amount of quicksilver, which is lost. The rest of the process, before it reaches the point for amalgamation, is exceedingly slow, mules, ponies and ponderous stones playing the prominent parts. It was therefore a surprise and a revelation to the Mexican visitors to see machinery crushing, pulverizing and amalgamating of from 85 to 95 per cent. of the precious metal at the rate of two tons an hour, and at cost of less than $2 per ton.

For a number of hours, Senator Manuel Romero Rubio, ex-President of the Mexican Senate, and Senor Jose Martin Rascon followed the process, step by step, through the various stages. After a number of tons of ore had been run, the copper plates were removed, and shown to be covered with amalgam, from which silver bricks were made and given to each of the party. So thorough was their examination, and so earnest were they to secure the introduction of such works into Mexico, that negotiations were entered into, and before President Diaz and his party left the city, arrangements had been made with the Mexico-Campbell Reduction Company to the extent of transferring to the company several valuable mines, the payment for them being $300,000, in the stock of the company, the latter agreeing to furnish the plants to treat the ores. A Mexican Board of Direction was organized, comprising Senator Rubio, Senor Rascon and Dr. John C. Ottinger, who has just returned from Mexico, where he has closed contracts for working a number of river beds, and some 5,000,000 tons of ore now on various dumps.

The introduction of inexpensive machinery, which will pulverize and amalgamate at the same time, and handle sulphuret and base ores as well as free milling, and taking therefrom 90 to 95 per cent. of the metal at a cost less than $2 a ton, will not only revolutionize mining matters in Mexico, but in this country as well. Gen. Diaz and his party spent nearly the whole of Tuesday afternoon in the office of the company in Liverpool building, New York, and, on leaving, expressed their great pleasure in the concluding of the arrangements, which will tend so much to the development of the mineral wealth of Mexico.—Produce Exchange Bulletin.

THERE'S WHERE HE HAD HER.

"Two hundred dollars for making a plain dress?" he yelled, as he saw the bill—"I'll never pay it!"

"You have been very stingy with me for the last year," she replied.

"You are extravagant!"

"No more than you are!"

"I'll never pay this bill!"

"You must!"

"Never!"

"Then I'll pawn my diamonds and pay it myself!"

"Ha!"

"Yes, ha!"

He goes out chuckling. He knows her to be a woman of her word, and he is wondering how she will feel as the pawnbroker politely hands them back with the observation:

"We never advance money on the paste article!"

HEALTH HINTS.

Beef tea has been prescribed for wakefulness.

Health must be earned—it can seldom be bought.

To cure a ring-worm, paint it with iodine a few times.

A change of air is less valuable than a change of scene. The air is changed every time the direction of the wind is changed.

A writer in one of the medical journals says he has found the application of a strong solution of chromic acid, three or four times a day, by means of a camel's-hair pencil, to be the best and easiest method for removing warts.

Girls need health as much—nay more than boys. They can only obtain it as boys do, by running, tumbling, by all sorts of innocent vagrancy. At least once a day girls should have there halters taken off, the bars let down and be turned loose like young colts.

FATE IN WAR.

They tell of the genius of great generals, says M. Quad. There is no genius in war. In the place of it there is grim Fate. Fate permits a victory or enforces a defeat. It pursues one general with vindictive hate and smiles upon another to his own surprise. McDowell should have won the first battle of the war. His plans were perfect, his force sufficient and his troops disposed to the best advantage. Fate waved its hand and his hosts were swept away in a panic for which no man can urge a reasonable excuse.

Had Stonewall Jackson lived to see the sun of another day Hooker's whole army at Chancellorsville would have been bagged or scattered. Fate led Jackson to the hour of a great victory and then demanded his life.

For three days Fate hovered in the valley between the blue and the gray at Gettysburg—its gaunt figure rent with wounds and covered with blood—and then it turned and frowned upon Lee.

At Stone River, Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge, Peach Tree Creek, Franklin, in the Wilderness, on a dozen other fields, Fate decided the victory. The generals shook the dice-boxes, and Fate counted the throw. A wrong move by a brigade; the falling back of a single company; the misconstruction of an order; ten minutes delay, had and may again lose a battle. Genius cannot provide for these contingencies; Fate can bring them about.

Had the Confederates advanced upon Burnside at Fredericksburg at sundown, as was first ordered, a great Federal army would have been annihilated. Fate countermanded the order. Had the Confederate army advanced at Shiloh as was ordered, they must have swept the field and won a great victory.

LITERARY NOTES.

Albert Stickney's attack upon the jury system in last November's Century, has called out several replies which, with a brief rejoinder by Mr. Stickney, will be grouped in the June Century under the title "Both Sides of the Jury Question."

Theodore Thomas has written an introduction for a paper "On the Training of Children's Voices," which Wm. L. Tomlins has contributed to the forthcoming June Century. Mr. Thomas is said to agree fully with Mr. Tomlins, that the old system of musical exercise in the public schools is alike ruinous to the voice and opposed to a sound musical taste. He thinks Mr. Tomlins correctly describes what such training ought to be.

We are in receipt of the current number of "Travel," a monthly magazine for the use of travelers, published at 162 Broadway, New York, by the American Exchange in Europe (Limited), of which Senator John R. Hawley is President, and Henry F. Gillig General Manager.

It is an elegant and most effective publication. The cover and the elaborate maps are the best work of the kind, and the text is of equal excellence. It contains all sorts of interesting and valuable notes for travelers; information about manners and customs, and a large number of skeleton routes in Great Britain, France, Germany, Switzerland, the Spanish and Italian Peninsulas, the Orient, and around the World. It is edited by C. A. Barattoni, the experienced traveler and manager.

The Magazine of American History for May is an exceedingly entertaining and valuable number. The opening article "Wall Street in History," is the first of a series of three articles, by the new editor, Mrs. Martha J. Lamb, with fourteen illustrations embracing quaint maps, rare portraits, and spirited original drawings by Alfred Fredericks. A charming essay on "John Howard Payne, the Actor," by Lawrence Hutton, is also illustrated with an excellent portrait. The Rev. Dr. George E. Ellis contributes an article, entitled "Landed Gentlemen in the United States." "President Buchanan Vindicated," is from the able pen of Honorable Horatio King. There is also a delightful description of "Baron de St. Castin," contributed by Noah Brooks. One of the special attractions of the number is an "Unpublished Letter of Edward Gibbon. In the department of Original Documents appears the gem of the famous Franklin collection, "The Petition to the King by the Continental Congress of 1774," illustrated with a facsimile of the signatures, which now first appears to the reading world. For sale by booksellers generally.

Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine for May is an unusually interesting one; prominent among the many admirable articles are a continuation of "What is Presbyterianism?" the present paper being by Rev. E. F. Hatfield, D. D.; also continuation of De Leon's "The American Pilgrim in Palestine"; the first of a series of papers by Lieutenant Schwatka, "Among the natives of the North," and a characteristic article by the editor, "Home." There are contributions of articles, serial and short stories, sketches, essays, poems, etc., by Alfreton Hervey, Adelaide Stout, O. M. Birrell, Edwin Arnold, Robert Buchanan, Ida E. Hervey, Rev. Mr. Hammond, J. W. Thirwall, and other favorite authors. In the Home Pulpit, is a sermon by Dr. Talmage, "The Eye," and there are interesting Obituary Notices, Record of important Events, the Collection Basket, Personal Notes, and Editorial Comments, etc., etc. This Magazine's popularity is constantly increasing, and it should be taken by every family in the country. The subscription is $3 a year; single copy, 25 cents, postpaid. Address, Mrs. Frank Leslie, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

FROM THE SOUTH.
A PERFECT COMBINATION WITH TWO SALIENT ADVANTAGES—WHY IT CONCERNS YOU.

"There is no mistake about it," remarked Dr. M. F. Flower, of Gallatin, Missouri, "BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTERS are one of the neatest combinations ever produced. They have two kinds of advantages over all others, which we may call the minor and the major. First, they are clean and pleasant to use, never soiling the hands nor the linen of the wearer. Second, they act quickly and powerfully. I have tried the Capcine Plaster on myself for pneumonia, and on my patients for various diseases, such as Neuralgia, Muscular Rheumatism, Lumbago, Kidney troubles, etc., and in all cases relief has followed in from three to forty-eight hours."

Dr. Flower merely voices the written or oral opinion of thousands in his profession. BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTERS are the perfect external application. The genuine have the word CAPCINE cut in the centre. Price 25 cents.

LEGAL NOTICES.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.—To John T. Cornell, executor, etc., of Gersham R. Smith, deceased. Take Notice: That by virtue of an order made on the day of the date hereof in the above stated court in a cause therein pending wherein the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States are complainants and you and others are defendants, you are required to appear and plead, answer or demur to the bill of the complainant on or before the

THIRTIETH DAY OF JUNE NEXT,

or such decree shall be made against you as the Chancellor shall deem equitable and just.

The said bill is filed to foreclose a mortgage made by Sidney Bayles and wife and William B. Bayles to the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, on property at Westfield, Union county, New Jersey, and you are made party defendant because Gersham R. Smith is alleged to have held a subsequent mortgage on said property at the time of his death and you as his executor may claim some interest therein.

SPEER'S
PORT GRAPE WINE
Used in the principal Churches for Communion purposes.
Excellent for Ladies and Weakly Persons and the Aged.

Excellent for Females and Weakly Persons.

Speer's Port Grape Wine
FOUR YEARS OLD.

THIS CELEBRATED NATIVE WINE is made from the juice of the Oporto Grape, raised in this country. Its invaluable

Tonic and Strengthening Properties

are unsurpassed by any other Native Wine. Being the pure juice of the Grape, produced under Mr. Speer's own personal supervision, its purity and genuineness are guaranteed. The youngest child may partake of its generous qualities, and the weakest invalid use it to advantage. It is particularly beneficial to the aged and debilitated, and suited to the various ailments that affect the weaker sex. It is in every respect A WINE TO BE RELIED ON.

SPEER'S
P. J. Sherry.

The P. J. SHERRY is a wine of Superior Character, and partakes of the rich qualities of the grape, from which it is made. For Purity, Richness, Flavor and Medicinal Properties, it will be found unexcelled.

SPEER'S
P. J. Brandy.

This BRANDY stands unrivaled in this country being far superior for medicinal purposes.

IT IS A PURE distillation from the grape, and contains valuable medicinal properties.

It has a delicate flavor, similar to that of the grapes, from which it is distilled, and is in great favor among first-class families.

See that the signature of ALFRED SPEER, Passaic, N. J., is over the neck of each bottle. Sold by all Druggists. 1y3-ly

POETRY.

A LOVE THOUGHT.

Love, if death prove but a dream,
And we seem
Waking out of it, to grow,
Dearer to each other far
Than we are
In this human life below,
Will our spirits dimly yearn
As they burn
In infinity on high,
For each old familiar grace
Of this place,
Where we lingered but to die?
Will our souls remember well
What befell
On this moonlit night in June—
Nature swooning into bliss
And a kiss
That put heart beats into tune?

TOM'S WIFE.

'A city girl! No wife for a struggling young man,' sighed rich, eccentric Aunt Sarah, sorrowfully.

'Brought up with the expectation of being an heiress, too. Her extravagant habits will ruin the boy!' said Mrs. Pry, severely.

'And a beauty!' sneered Miss Crankett, with withering contempt.

She could have forgiven her any crime save that of youth or good looks.

So the gossips down in Tom Lysander's native village put their heads together and nodded grimly and forebodingly when they heard he had married Lila Ware.

The daughter of his employer, he had loved her long and almost hopelessly. One day through the city spread the news like wild-fire that Ware & Co., had failed. He went straightway to the house, where he had ever been a welcome guest. He found the laughing girl whom he had known, graver and perhaps a little haughtier than of old; a woman whom the first breath of misfortune had not blasted to despondency or languor, but rather had strengthened and invigorated.

She listened, silently, while he told her the story which had laid so long in his heart unsaid. And, when he had spoken, she gave him frankly the love which till then womanly pride had veiled.

He bought her a home which, though bright and cosy, held none of the luxury of that which she had known; but she made it home in fact as well as in word—the dearest spot in the world to Tom Lysander.

One evening Lila Lysander came up to where her husband sat wearily thinking.

Through the open windows came the breeze, laden with promises of the summer. Below, boys were crying blue violets on the city streets.

'Tom, dear, what is it?'

He started at sound of the tender voice and put his arm around her as she stood beside him.

'Can you bear bad news, pet?'

'I can share it Tom!'

He laughed at the brave, womanly answer.

"The gun of bad luck was double-barreled, to day, dear. Our salaries were reduced one-third on account of a partial failure of the firm, and—I had a letter from Aunt Sarah!'

'Oh, Tom! What does she say?'

'That she is making arrangements with her lawyer to discontinue the allowance I have had ever since I was a boy; also, to eradicate my name from her will. There!'

'And all this on my account?' wistfully.

'Ah' there's where the joy comes in, my darling! I have you—the rest is nothing.'

'Is she not cruel, Tom!'

'Far from it. She is peculiar, whimsical, easily prejudiced. She used to love me dearly. And if her blessed old eyes caught but one glimpse of my bonnie bride—. Come for a walk dear.'

* * * * *

'Work! for you, Mrs. Lysander? You surely don't mean it! Why, my dear child, you don't know the meaning of the word.'

Lilian Lysander, standing before her father's old lawyer, a slim, childish figure, looked up at him with resolute eyes.

'But I do mean it, Mr. Mitchell. Some position which will permit me to be home in the evening before Tom returns. He is working nights, now, to make up for the decrease in his salary. It is terrible to think he should toil so hard, while I am comparatively idle.

'Come to think of it, I do know a place that would suit you. She's client of my office mate, Hillhouse, boarding at the Revere—rich, bless you, rich! She wants a young girl to stay with her part of the day, while she's in the city—she's in the city—companion, guide, that sort of thing, you know. No one would ever take you to be married, Miss Lila. There! I'm dropping into the old name myself. Craig—your second name, Lilian Craig. Capital! A harmless deception: Sit right down here while I go and see Hillhouse. Dear! dear!'

He bustled eagerly off and bustled smilingly back.

'Hillhouse says its all right. He is privileged to engage you. A companion—a few hours a day—ten dollars a week to the right person. That wasn't much to you once, Miss Lila. Not much, was it?'

* * * * *

There were two ten-dollar bills on the top pantry shelf. But Tom didn't know it.

'I'll wait till it growes a little,' Mrs. Lila said, gleefully, to herself, 'and then I'll give him a surprise party.'

'One day, in her luxurious room at the Revere, Mrs. Percival lay ill with a feverish headache. Her companion went softly around the room, dropping the curtains and stopping the clocks, lest the ticking of these latter should disturb the invalid. When she came back to the couch she found dim old eyes fastened on her in kindly scrutiny.

'Miss Craig, how long have you been with me?'

'Two weeks.'

'Do you know I'v grown very fond of you in those two weeks, little girl?'

A thin hand was laid, caressingly, on Lila's.

'What a heavy gold ring you wear—like a wedding-ring! I wish it was. I wish—'

She grew dreamily silent.

The afternoon slipped away. The shadows gathered. The room was darkened, the clock stopped, and Lila did not perceive how late it was growing.

'Does your head ache now?'

'No, but my heart does. Lilian,' she sat suddenly erect and cast the rich wraps aside from her stately old figure, 'I am rich and you are poor. We are both lonely. You have crept into my heart—sadly against my will, I confess, for I had grown very bitter and cynical of late. If you come to me you shall be as my daughter—'

'Oh, no, no! Forgive me! I cannot! What—what sound is that? A bell! Hark!'

'That!' surprisedly. 'That is only the Angelus from the French Catholic church.'

'The Angelus!' She sprang to her feet in alarm. 'Then it is six o'clock. I have outstayed my time. I must go!'

She lit the gas and hurriedly found her wraps.

'Why, my Cinderella! What a panic! Leave me your glass slipper—Come in!'

The door was flung wide and a man brushed into the room.

'My darling how you have frightened me!' he said, crossing to where Lila stood. 'I got home early to-night, and forced Ellen to tell me where you—Aunt Sarah!'

He wheeled around and clasped the old lady in his arms in impetuous, boyish fashion.

'Well, this is a surprise! How did you and Lila—'

'You know Miss Craig?'

'Miss Craig!' mistifiedly.

Lila came swiftly forward.

'I did not know she was your aunt Tom. I have never heard you speak of Mrs. Percival by any name save Aunt Sarah!'

'Miss Craig, you cannot be—'

'I am Tom's wife!' simply.

'You—Tom's wife?'

'I am,' with quiet pride.

'But he married a horrid city girl, who was extravagant and knew nothing about work—and—and—'

Lila laughed at the vague hearsays.

'I am the horrid city girl. I was extravagant when extravagance meant only liberality. And love has taught me the sweetness of work.'

A sudden recollection of his aunt's injustice to his wife came to Tom Lysander.

'Come, dear, we must be going. Aunt, pardon this intrusion. Good night!'

But Mrs. Percival sprang up.

'No!' she cried, impulsively; 'you will shake hands and forgive an old woman, my children! Bless my soul, Tom's wife!'

And she bent and kissed her.

HIS LAST COURT.

Old Judge Greyson, a justice of the peace, was never known to smile. He came to Arkansas years ago, before the "carpet-baggers" began their reckless sway, and year after year, by the will of the voters, he held his place as magistrate. The lawyers who practiced in his court never joked with him, because every one soon learned that the old man never engaged in levity. Every morning, no matter how bad the weather might be, the old man took his place behind the bar which with his own hands, he had made, and every evening, just at a certain time, he closed his books and went home. No one ever engaged him in private conversation because he would talk to no one. No one ever went to his home, a little cottage among the trees in the city's outskirts, because he had never shown a disposition to make welcome the visits of those who even lived in the immediate vicinity. His office was not given him through the influence of "electioneering," because he never asked any man for his vote. He was first elected, because, having once been summoned in a case of arbitration, he exhibited the executive side of such a legal mind that the people nominated and elected him. He soon gained the name of "hard justice," and every lawyer in Kansas referred to his dicisions. His rulings were never reversed by the higher courts. He showed no sentiment in decision. He stood upon the platform of a law which he made a study, and no man disputed him.

Several days ago a woman charged with misdemeanor was arranged before him. "The old man seems more than ever unsteady," remarked a lawyer as the magistrate took his seat. "I don't see how a man so old can stand the vexations of a court much longer."

"I am not well to-day," said the Judge, turning to the lawyers, "and any cases that you may have you will please dispatch them to the best, and let me add, quickest of your ability."

Every one saw that the old man was unusually feeble, and no one thought of a scheme to prolong a discussion, for all the lawyers had learned to reverence him.

"Is this the woman?" asked the Judge. "Who is defending you?"

"I have no defense, your honor," the woman replied. "In fact, I do not think that I need any, for I am here to confess my guilt. No man can defend me," and she looked at the magistrate with a curious gaze. "I have been arrested on a charge of disturbing the peace, and I am willing to submit my case. I am dying of consumption, Judge, and I know that any ruling by law can have but little effect on me;" and she coughed a little, hacking cough, and drew around her an old black shawl that she wore. The expression on the face of the magistrate remained unchanged, but his eyelids dropped and he did not raise them when the woman continued:

"As I say, no man can defend me. I am too near that awful approach, to pass which we know is everlasting death to soul and body. Years ago I was a child of brightest promise. I lived with my parents in Kentucky. Wayward and light hearted, I was admired by all the gay society know in the neighborhood. A man came and professed his love for me. I don't say this, Judge, to excite your sympathy. I have many and many a time stood before courts, but I never spoke of my past life."

She coughed again and caught a flow of blood on a handkerchief which she pressed to her lips. "I speak of it now because I know that this is the last court on earth before which I will be arranged. I was fifteen years old when I fell in love with the man. My father said he was bad, but I loved him. He came again and again, but when my father said that he should come no more I ran away and married him. My father said I should never come home again. I had always been his pride, and had loved him so dearly, but he said that I must never come again to his home—my house, the home of my youth and happiness. How I longed to see him. How I yearned to put my head on his breast. My husband became addicted to drink. He abused me. I wrote to my father, asking him to let me come home, but the answer that came was 'I do not know you.' My husband died—yes, cursed God and died! Homeless and wretched, and with my little boy, I went out into the world. My child died, and I bowed down and wept over a pauper's grave. I wrote to my father again, but he answered: 'I know not those who disobey my commands.' I turned away from that letter hardened. I spurned my teachings. Now, I am here."

Several lawyers rushed forward. A crimson tide flowed from her lips. They leaned her lifeless head back against the chair. The old magistrate had not raised his eyes. "Great God," said a lawyer, "he is dead!"

The woman was his daughter.

UNCLE REMUS AT THE TELEPHONE.

AN INVENTION THAT THE OLD NEGRO COULD NOT UNDERSTAND.

Just then there was a call at the telephone. The little gong rattled away like a house on fire. As the lady went to answer it, Uncle Remus rose from his chair and crept on his tip-toes to the door that opened into the sitting-room. He heard Miss Sally talking.

'Well, what's wanted? Oh—Is that you? Well, I couldn't imagine—No—Fast asleep too long ago to talk about—Why, of course —No!—Why should I be frightened—I declare! you ought to be ashamed—Remus is here—Two hours! I think you are horrid mean!—By-bye.

'Miss Sally,' he said presently, 'was you talkin' ter Mars John?'

'Certainly. Who did you suppose it was?'

'Wharbouts wuz Mars John?'

'At his office.'

'Way down yan on Yallerhamer street?'

'Yes.'

At this piece of information Uncle Remus emitted a groan that was full of doubt and pity, and went into the dining room. His Miss Sally laughed, and then an idea seemed to strike her. She called him back and went again to the telephone.

'Is that you, Central? Please connect eleven-forty with fourteen-sixty.' There was a fluttering sound in the instrument and then the lady said:—'Yes, it's me!—Here's Remus—Yes, but he wants to talk to you.'

'Here, Remus, take this and put it to your ear. Here, simpleton! It won't hurt you."

Uncle Remus took the ear-piece and handled it as though it had been a loaded pistol. He tried to look in at both ends, and then he placed it to his ear and grinned sheepishly. He heard a thin, sepulchral, but familiar voice calling out, "Hello, Remus!" and his sheepish grin gave place to an expression of uneasy astonishment.

'Hello, Remus. Hello-ello-ello-ello-o-!'

'Is dat you, Mars John?' 'Of course it is, you bandy-legged old villain. I have no time to be standing here. What do you want?'

'How in de name er God you git in dar, Mars John?'

'In where?'

'In dish yer—in dish yer apperatus.'

'Oh, you be fiddlestick!' What do you want?'

'Mars John, kin you see me—er is she all dark in dar?'

'Are you crazy? Where is your Miss Sally?'

'She is yer, hollon en laughin.' Mars John, how you gwine git out'n dar?'

'Dry up. Good-night!'

'Yes tis, Miss Sallie,' said Uncle Remus, after listening a moment. 'Dey's a mighty zooin' gwine on in dar, en I dunner whe'er Mars John trying ter scramble out, er whe'er he des tryin' ter make hisself comfertuble in dar.'—Atlanta Constitution.

A SET UP JOB.

'If it hadn't been for my Sunday-school class, I'd have broken his back!' muttered Jack Melbourne, to a fellow passenger on the train from Warwick, N. Y. 'It would have prejudiced my moral influence on the infant mind, or I'd have given the internal regions a hypodermic injection of him!'

'What did he do?' asked the friend.

'Do! Dum him!' snorted Mr. Melbourne. 'Look here! That man knew I had been trying to get a servant girl for four months, and finally I hooked one. Took her out on the train with me, and we sat right behind the dog-goned cuspidore! Up he tunes to a friend of his about the smallpox at Warwick.

'I hear there were four deaths yesterday,' said he.

'Did you leave your mother well?' I asked the girl, hoping to distract his attention.

'Somebody told me six,' said his friend.

'This is all my property,' I observed to the girl, pointing out the meadows to her. 'Last year I raised a million acres of chewing gum on that prairie.'

'Somebody tells me that Jack Melbourne lost three servant girls by the disease,' the sneak thief went on.

'And next year I'm going to plant herring and see if I can't raise shad,' I told her in desperation.

'Faith, I think you'd better plant a few dispensaries and raise hospitals,' said she, and at the next station she left the train. Couldn't hold her with a dog collar and an ox chain. She was scared out by that smallpox lie, and she left on foot, dum bust him! His family owes me a dollar for being a Christian!'

'Have you got a servant girl yet?' asked his friend.

'Oh, I've got one,' grunted Mr. Melbourne. 'I've got one, but I had to pack her in a shawl strap and walk out home with her! Bust him. 'If I ever backslide and lose my grip on grace, he'll feel like a doctor's bill in a bankruptcy proceeding, now, you hear me!'

And then Mr. Melbourne changed the subject to the preceeding Sunday's sermon, and wanted to know if his friend really thought that Nebuchadnezzar ate grass, or whether the grass might not have been a figure of speech for doughnuts.

EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

THE CENTURY.

It is a wonderful century in which we live, developing as it already has far greater advancement in scientific and mechanical knowledge and its practical application to the wants and uses of civilized life than was ever known during all former periods of time.

To think of the marvelous results wrought within the past fifty years by those mighty, yet for long ages dormant agencies, steam and electricity, is like perusing a work of fiction.

Nevertheless they are living facts, to be seen and felt on every hand and in every imaginable form, and bold as the assertion may appear, their achievements have only commenced. Whoever is alive fifty years hence will look back to the present period, grandly progressive as it seems to us, as an era of scientific infancy, and doubtless then witness many structures surpassing even the now justly famed and newly completed connecting link between the cities of New York and Brooklyn.

The triumphs of engineering skill certainly proclaim this as an age of wonders. Tunneling beneath the bed of rivers, and safely suspending over their swelling waters majestic steel woven bridges; scaling the sides of high and rugged mountains, arching yawning chasms, penetrating the dark morass and barren desert, to prepare pathways for rushing locomotives and freighted trains, show what has been done and what the future promises.

If true religion, pure morality, honesty, justice and freedom only keep pace with material progress, glorious indeed will be the close of the nineteenth century.

So may it be.

MONOPOLY.

Every intelligent observer must see and admit that there exists in the United States, at the present time, a spirit of money aggrandizement which is at enmity with sound business interests, repugnant to honest industry, and subversive of justice and freedom.

That fell spirit of monopoly, countenanced, if not directly encouraged by vicious legislation, has grown and strengthened until it now threatens to lay waste the only sure source of national prosperity, the individual rights and privileges of the people.

The N. Y. World truthfully remarks—

"The growth of monopolies is rapid. It creeps along and covers all the paths in life, as weeds spring up and cover a garden unless extreme care and vigilance are exercised in their eradication.

Republicans laugh and sneer at the idea of the danger of monopoly and centralization. But it is no dream—no ghost. It confronts us as a reality at every turn. It comes home to us in our every-day life.

The oil which flickers in the lamp of the poor sewing-girl as she bends with aching eyes over her machine represents one of the most grasping and unscrupulous monopolies of the age. Its cost is enhanced to the needy consumer that the wealth of the millionaire monopolists may be increased.

The sewing-machine, the treadmill of too many half-fed and half-clad women, represents monopoly. The big factories, strong in combined capital and protected by patents, turn out thousands of these almost sentient machines which do the work of weary fingers. The sewing-girl buys one out of the thousands, labors night and day to pay for it by installments, and if sickness falls upon her, or work is not to be secured, forfeits all she has paid, while the monopoly swallows up the machine.

The match with which the lamp fed by monopoly oil is lighted represents monopoly. The cost of matches is not much, but it might be less but for the concentrated capital which grasps and controls the manufacture and practically shuts out competition.

The coal which every family consumes, and of which the poor get so scant a share, represents multiplied monopoly in its worst form. There is the monopoly of the mines; the monopoly of the large coal companies; the monopoly of the railroads which transport the coal; the monopoly of the retailers' combination. All these help to enhance the price of this prime necessary of life to the consumer.

Ice, the product of nature, formed on the waters that are free to all, becomes a monopoly by the power of capital and combination, and is made a luxury beyond the reach of the poor man.

If the meat we eat is not a monopoly, it is only because of the failure of the attempt of the autocrat of monopolists to seize upon the exclusive transportation of dressed beef to the New York market and to kill the live-cattle competition.

Besides this actuality of monopoly which pushes itself in these and multiplied other shapes into our daily life, there are the monopolies of the railroads, the ferries and the horse-cars to meet us at every turn."

To battle against the enemies of the people is our determined purpose.

Among those enemies the worst is MONOPOLY.

In 1882 of the vessels passing through the Suez canal 2,565 were British, with a tonnage of 5,795,584. Those bearing the American flag were so few as to be unworthy of special classification. It is a criminal shame to be thus driven from the ocean highway by the stupidity or negligence of our own national legislators.

The three men, Burke, Noonan, and Dunn, who have been on trial in the Oyer and Terminer of Union for two weeks, for the murder of Patrick McKeon at Elizabethport last Fall, were acquitted Thursday afternoon of last week. Mr. H. N. Oliver of Rahway was the foreman of the jury, and they were just ten days trying and concluding the case. The manner in which Mr. R. V. Lindabury defended his clients, and also the able efforts made by Mr. Kalisch for the defense, are in a great measure the cause of their acquittal. Judge Van Syckel's charge was an impartial one, and is much complimented. The case was given to the jury at 10:50, and at half-past one the verdict of "not guilty" was rendered.

THE GREAT SUSPENSION BRIDGE.

The great suspension bridge across the East River, uniting the cities of New York and Brooklyn, was formally opened on Thursday of last week with impressive and memorable services. During the day immense crowds of visitors flocked to both cities, business was suspended for the latter half of the day, processions took place, and at 3 o'clock services consisting of prayer, music and addresses, were held on the bridge. The President and Cabinet, Governor of New York and his staff, Governors of several States and prominent officials were present and walked over the bridge. The day was one of the finest in point of weather that could be desired, the displays of bunting and other decorations were brilliant and profuse, the streets were packed with people, and the day was one long to be remembered for the universal holiday appearance that it assumed.

EUCALYPTUS.

We have frequently read of the asserted value of the eucalyptus tree as a sure preventer of malaria. The following extract appears to offer practical evidence that the claim is well founded:

"About 100,000 eucalyptus trees have been planted on a large tract of land in the Roman Campagna by the Trappists, to whom the tract was granted by the Italian government. The vast marshes in the vicinity of Rome have exhaled deadly vapors for many centuries, and no device hitherto employed has diminished their malarial influence. But the planting of eucalyptus trees has already made Tre Fontane, the abbey of the Trappists, habitable throughout the whole year, although the monks have heretofore been compelled to desert it during the sickly season. The result has excited the wonder of the Italian government, and intelligent people everywhere are discussing the importance of introducing the eucalyptus in every malarial region where it will grow. The tree is useful for building ships and bridges, and also for railway ties, and as its growth is rapid the considerations in favor of its introduction are many."

We presume that in many sections of this country where malarial fevers abound the tree would flourish, and therefore, its introduction could not prove other than a public blessing. The experiment is certainly worth trying.

"All men are created equal, and endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, among which are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." Such was the language of the great Declaration of American Independence promulgated on the Fourth of July, 1776. The demon of monopoly, now striving for mastery in this country, stands in direct opposition to the glorious decree of justice and freedom on whose behalf Washington drew the sword and won the victory.

The true intent of free representative government, such as the Constitution of the United States established, is plain and practical. To provide for the general public welfare, and secure to each citizen, irrespective of class or condition, personal protection and an unabridged opportunity to reap and enjoy the rewards of labor, constitute its prominent features, to preserve which, from every species of harm, was the original and remains to be the present mission of the Democratic party.

He will not sever his connection with the company, but will pursue an action similar to that recently carried out by Mr. Vanderbilt. He will name his successor in the Presidency of the road, and will be elected first Director on the Board of Management. This will give him the chief direction of the management of the company's affairs, and at the same time he will be relieved of all the routine and detail work that he now has to perform as President.

A horrible accident happened on the new Brooklyn Bridge on Wednesday afternoon last. The crowd on the structure became so dense on the New York side, that when designing persons raised a cry of danger, the crowd pushed against each other so furious that at last a young woman fell. This caused others to trip and fall over her, until there was a mass of struggling humanity being trampled upon by those seeking to escape from the bridge. When order was restored, it was found that twelve persons were killed and some seventy-five seriously wounded.

Under the new rule adopted by the last State Convention, this year's Democratic candidate for Governor will be nominated by a body of only about 600 delegates—one for every 200 votes cast for Gov. Ludlow. Though this will not afford so full representation, it will be a fair one, and delegates will have better opportunity to be heard and their votes accurately ascertained. On the whole, we think the people will be the gainers by this change, and professional manipulators of Conventions will find it more difficult to defeat the people's will.

BURLINGTON, N. J., May 28.—Jacob Firsing, a watchman who was in charge of the residence and grounds of Mrs. Edward Grubb, the lady being absent in Florida, shot and killed Charles Clayton, a young man belonging in Florence. Firsing, who is under arrest, says the stranger was in the yard at midnight, and thinking he was there for no good purpose, he ordered him to leave, and discharged a shot in the air to frighten him. The man did not leave, and Firsin fired a second shot, which lodged in Clayton's brain, causing instant death.

The Trenton State Gazette, the leading Republican organ of the State, is out in a double-leaded editorial for Frederic A. Potts for Governor of this State. This looks as if the Republican leaders have settled on Mr. Potts for their victim again. Mr. Potts has plenty of the "needful" and would be bled worse than he was before when he ran against Gov. Ludlow, if he could be induced to again accept the nomination. We rather guess Mr. Potts will not hanker after it. He has been there once and that is enough for him.

P. S.—Since the above was written, we learn that Mr. Potts has issued a card peremptorially declining the nomination.

FACTS ABOUT THE BRIDGE.

Dates and Circumstances of the Principal Events in its Construction.

The N. Y. Bridge Company was incorporated by a law introduced by Senator Henry C. Murphy on Jan 25, 1867.

The cities of New York and Brooklyn were authorized to subscribe to the capital stock.

The capital stock was fixed at $5,000,000. New York subscribed $1,500,000, Brooklyn $3,000,000, and the remainder was taken by individuals, including Tweed, Sweeny, and Connolly. It was then supposed that the bridge could be built for $6,500,000, and in five years. Henry C. Murphy was the first and only President of the bridge up to his death last December, except for a short time in 1874, when Jeremiah P. Robinson was President. For six or seven years before his death Mr. Murphy received a salary of $5,000.

On June 5, 1874, an act was passed vesting the control of the erection and completion of the bridge in the two cities, to be represented by ten trustees each, New York to bear one-third and Brooklyn two thirds of the cost. The capital stock was then absorbed by purchase by the two cities.

John A. Roebling of Trenton, N. J., engineer of Covington and Cincinnati Suspension bridge, and the International Suspension bridge below Niagara Falls, who was chosen engineer, began the initial surveys in 1869. His foot was crushed between the ferryboat fender of the Fulton Ferry and the stringpiece of the bridge dock while he was superintending soundings on the Brooklyn side, and he died of lockjaw in 1869. He was the first to plan a suspension bridge essentially like the present one over the East River at the point where the structure now stands. His first estimate, nearly twenty years ago, was $2,000,000. Surveys for foundation and a substitution of a granite viaduct for trestle work, increased the estimate to $5,000,000 before anything was done. He died before actual work was begun. He left plans for securing foundations for the towers by sinking caissons, and for excavating in compressed air.

Col. W. A. Roebling, son of John A. Roebling, and the present chief engineer, succeeded his father. He was born May 26, 1837, in Saxonburgh, Butler county, Pa. He is just 46 years old.

Col. Roebling was the first person to enter the first caisson on May 10, 1870. In the following summer he contracted caisson disease.

For every two feet that the caisson was lowered, one pound of air pressure, equal to two feet of tide water, had to be added. Under this high pressure men could not whistle. Men could dive in the water in the caisson and remain much longer than in the open atmosphere. In addition to the atmospheric pressure the highest pressure attained in the caissons were twenty-three pounds to the square inch.

The caisson disease which afflicted the men engaged in the submarine work is due to increased atmospheric pressure. Extreme pain in the extremities, with more or less complete paralysis, epigastric pain and vomiting form some of its symptoms, with congestion of the brain and the spinal cord, resulting in serious or sanguineous effusion and congestion of most of the abdominal viscera in fatal cases. When attacked the men felt as though they had been struck with a bullet. It subdued men of the strongest nerves with pain which was likened to tearing of flesh from the bones. All who died were heavy men and more of these were taken sick than of spare men.

Work upon the bridge was begun Jan. 3, 1870, by tearing out the spare slips of the Fulton Ferry.

The Brooklyn tower rests upon a caisson 22 feet high with a roof of 15 feet thick, made of timbers a foot square bolted and joined. It is 168 by 102 feet. The New York tower rests on a caisson four feet longer, with a roof 22 feet thick.

The Brooklyn tower foundation is 45 feet below high water mark. The New York tower foundation is 78 feet below high water mark.

The New York caisson weighs about 7,000 tons, and contains 8,000 tons of concrete filling and 5,253 cubic yards of timber and iron.

The New York tower contains 46,945 cubic yards of masonry. The Brooklyn tower contains 38,214 cubic yards of masonry.

The height of the arches in the towers above the roadway is 117 feet. The opening in the arches are 33 feet 9 inches.

The anchorages are 129x119 feet at the base, 117x104 at the top, 85 feet high in front, and 80 feet in the rear.

The grade of the roadway is 3¼ feet in 100.

There are 208 suspenders from each cable on the main span, and 86 from each land span.

Where the cables dip below the roadway there are 25 post bands on each cable on the land span.

The strength of the single suspender is equal to 140,000 pounds; the greatest weight on a single suspender is 20,000 pounds.

Each cable contains 5,296 parallel galvanized steel, oil-coated wires, closely wrapped to a solid cylinder 15¾ inches in diameter.

The cable wire weighs a pound for every twelve feet.

Each cable will sustain 12,200 tons; the greatest weight on each cable is 3,000 tons.

The first wire was run out for the cables on May 29, 1877. Cable making began June 11, 1877. The last cable wire was sent over Oct. 5, 1878, at 4½ p. m. Time of running last wire 10 minutes 45 seconds. The United States flag was raised on the Brooklyn tower in honor of the event.

The first wire rope was stretched over the river Aug. 14, 1876 The greatest length of cable wire run in one day was 88 3-5 miles.

E. F. Farrington, the master mechanic, crossed the bridge in a boatswain's chair on a wire rope extending between the anchorages on Aug. 15, 1876, in twenty-two minutes, being the first to cross in the air over the river.

The Brooklyn caisson caught fire several times and had to be flooded twice. On Dec. 2, 1870, the flame of a candle caught the oakum calking and caused a fire that involved three months of repairs. Col. Roebling remained in the caisson all night, and was partly paralyzed on coming out.

The New York caisson rests on a ledge of rock that underlies the whole island.

The firmness of the tower foundations is demonstrated by the fact that the towers have settled only an inch and a half.

The main span of the bridge is 1,595 feet 6 inches long. Each land span is 930 feet. Total length of the bridge, 5,989 feet. There are 5,280 feet in a mile.

The length of the New York approach is 1,562 feet 6 inches; the length of the Brooklyn approach is 971 feet.

The bridge is 85 feet wide, and the centre of the river span, when the temperature is 90 degrees, is 135 feet above high water mark.

The height of the floor at the towers above high water is 119 feet 3 inches.

The total height of the towers above high water is 278 feet each. The size at high water line is 140x59 feet, and at the roof course is 136x53 feet.

The height of the tower above the roadway is 159 feet.

The length of each single wire in the cables is 3,578 feet 6 inches; the total length of the wire in the cables, exclusive of wrappings, is 14,361 miles.

The granite approaches to the bridge form one of the finest masonry viaducts in the world.

The archways under the approaches are to be fitted up at a cost of $400,000 as warehouses, which will be fire and burglar proof.

The New York terminus is 38 and 27-100 feet above high water mark, and the Brooklyn terminus is 61 and 32-100 feet above high water mark.

The bridge is 15 feet higher in the centre than at the towers, and is 46 feet higher than at the anchorages.

The cable strain on the saddles on the towers is vertical, and there is no tendency toward pulling the towers over.

The suspended superstructure weighs 6,620 tons, the cables weigh 3,460 tons the suspenders weigh 1,180 tons, the timber flooring weighs 2,760 tons, the steel rails weigh 660 tons.

The total permanent weight of the bridge is 14,680 tons.

The weight of the greatest load the bridge is likely to have to bear is 3,100 tons.

To prevent disturbance by wind there are 432 overfloor stays on the bridge.

Before the structure passed into the hands of the two cities $5,386,646 06 had been paid.

The cost of the bridge to date has been about $14,750,000.

The electric lights on the East River Bridge are to be furnished by the United States Illuminating Company from a plant consisting of seventy Weston double-carbon arc lamps and four Western dynamo-electric machines. There are two circuits, each containing 35 lamps. Each circuit is supplied by two of the dynamos run by an independent Corliss engine. Each circuit runs clear around the bridge and supplies alternate lamps only. The length of each is about three miles. The full working capacity of the present electrical plant is eighty lights of 2,000 candle power. This number can, however, be increased to 110 without additional engine power. The current is perfectly continuous and of low tension. In case of accident to the bridge engines, the circuits can be, at short notice, switched on to the Elm street station of the United States Company. The wire is covered with a heavy coating of kerite and sheathed with kerite tape.

For the Epicurian.

The taste for frogs' legs is now spreading rapidly in this country, after a long period of comparative stagnation. One of the largest dealers in the country, J. M. Beck, of Boston, has sent a hundred expert frog-catchers at work in the New England States, and estimates that the demand this Summer will be double that of last year. An experiment in breeding bullfrogs in England is about to be made and a considerable supply of spawn will be sent over for that purpose.

FOUR Babies at a Birth.—Ohio is again ahead. Last week Mrs. Marcella Boyce, who resides in Long Bottom, just across the river, from Wheeling, West Virginia, gave birth to four babies, two boys and two girls. One of the boys died, but the remaining three are large and healthy. Mrs. Boyce is getting along nicely, and her husband is drunk for the first time in his life. Mr. and Mrs. Boyce were married about three years ago. Two years ago the lady presented her husband with twins, and last season with triplets.

THE members of "Unity" Lodge, No. 102, K. of P., together with invited friends, enjoyed themselves in the merry dance at No. 28 West Front street last Thursday evening, after having gone through a very interesting programme at their rooms in Stelle's building.

HART MOORE, the veteran hotel keeper, has now charge of the Rippowan House, South Amboy, where he will at all times be glad to see his old friends. This house is an old and favorite one, and its menu is unsurpassed by any in the section of South Amboy. Give Hart a call.

THE devotees of fashion must now see their paper and envelopes of the fashionable tints. There are crushed strawberry, mazarine, terra cotta, shrimp, etc. Terra cotta is the color of old brick, shrimp is about the shade of rotten blackberry, and mazarine is the old blue tint which everybody used forty years ago.

THE lovers of fine music are looking forward expectantly to the Grand Concert to be given in the Park avenue Baptist Church, next Tuesday evening, by Mr. David Lyon—the accomplished organist of the First Baptist Church—assisted by Mrs. W. S. Canon, contralto, and the New York Philharmonic Club.

MESSRS. FORD & STILES are to be congratulated on the handsome appearance of their flower wagon in the parade of the G. A. R. Post on Wednesday last. The wagon was artistically decorated with flags and emblems, and with the handsome team of horses attached to it, driven by Mr. Frank Day, attracted universal attention.

COUNTY Collector Alfred Berry, of Somerset County, publishes this week his annual report of the county finances in the Somerset papers—a matter in which every taxpayer feels an interest. The total receipts for the year 1882 are set down at $171,223.38; total amount disbursed, $163,329.74. This leaves a balance in hand amounting to $7,893.64.

THE twenty-seventh annual reunion of the Editorial Association of New Jersey will take place during the week commencing Monday, June 25, 1883, and ending on Saturday, June 30th. The party will on Monday assemble on board of one of the steamers of the Newport, Fall River and Boston line, which sails at 5 o'clock, and arrives at Newport early on the next morning. There they will be entertained at the Ocean House.

THE Directors of the Music Hall Association have sent each stockholder a circular requesting answers to the following questions: "In the selection of the Architect do you favor Mr. Roberts?" "Do you favor competition?" "What is your preference as to seating capacity?" Of course the Directors have full power to decide in relation to such points, and, consequently, the submitting of these matters (to a certain extent) to the stock-holders, seems "highly commendable."

THAT worthiest of Plainfield's charitable institutions, the Children's Home Association, needs about five hundred dollars more to complete its new improvements and add much needed comforts and conveniences. To aid in securing at least a portion of the required sum, an "Old Folk's Concert" has been arranged in which will take part about thirty of the choicest vocalists among our home talent. The affair will occur at the Park avenue Baptist church, Thursday evening of next week, and we feel certain that the cause for which it is given, as well as the enjoyable features of the event, will insure an extensive patronage.

WARREN Hose Co. No. 2, will give a grand picnic in Wooden's Grove, Thursday evening, June 14th. Prepare for a good time.

NOBLY our citizens responded to the call made by the G. A. R. for flowers wherewith to decorate the graves of the Nation's dead.

MISS TILLIE PIMM, near Flemington, has a bedquilt of her own make, which contains 5,760 blocks, each 1½ inches square.

THE members and friends of Warren Engine Co. No. 2, are enjoying themselves in Wooden's Grove, North Plainfield, this (Thursday) evening, their annual picnic being the cause.

PRAISE is due to each Committee and every individual member of it, who so faithfully labored to make the first public effort of the G. A. R. of this city the success it was on Memorial Day.

THE Milltown Band rendered excellent music during the Memorial Day exercises in this city. During the evening the fire laddies secured their services and serenaded a favored few of our citizens.

THE children of the public schools of Plainfield and North Plainfield, contributed some twenty bushels of cut flowers to the Committee of the G. A. R. for decoration purposes on Memorial Day.

"ORPHAN BOY," a horse owned by Mr. Wm. Moore, of this city, won a well contested race at Waverly last Saturday. "Orphan Boy" was formerly known as "Buckskin," and promises to show great speed this season.

AS we intimated last week, there is a certain person in this city who engages boys to rob bird's nests of their eggs for the purpose of securing a collection of such eggs. While the law may not reach him in this nefarious business, the parties robbing the nest may yet be made to suffer according to the provisions of law, and he, the instigator, be shown up in print if the practice is not at once abandoned.

SINCE Postmaster Levi D. Jarrard, of New Brunswick, left his home so suddenly, in consequence of bad book-keeping in the Collector's office, of which he was at the head, there are many aspirants for the office of P. M., to take Jarrard's place. Among them the name of John F. Babcock, of the New Brunswick Fredonian, has been sent in to the authorities at Washington. Well, if New Brunswick has got to have a Republican Postmaster, we know of no one in that line of politics more capable or fitting for the position than friend "Bab." Hope he may get it.

THE following recipe for washing fruit trees and a preventive of borers, has been given the Morristown Banner by a gentleman of that vicinity who has used it with great success for four years: The present is the best time for using it as the eggs are deposited at about this time. Take four quarts of lime, 2 pounds of concentrated lye, 3 pounds of sulphur, 1 pound of good tobacco, two quarts of soot, thoroughly dissolve each separately, and then mix together with about 60 gallons of water. This makes enough for thoroughly washing 500 trees of about six inches diameter, and gives a fine, smooth fresh bark of the trees.

BE certain, girls and acquire the last fashionable kink before starting away this summer on a vacation. The correct thing, according to fashion, in eyebrows this season is to curve them into a surprised expression. This will be hard on girls who frown habitually, but you have got to come to it, that's all about it. A little practice before the hall mirror in the hat-rack will fix you all right. It is predicted that no other look at your command will go so far to convince conductors, hotel keepers and dudes of your superiority and completely unnerve them for the day. To the dude, especially, will this look come with crushing force. Try it on the first young man you meet in trousers and short waisted coat, and ten to one he will think his suspenders have met with an accident.

Death to the Sparrows.

At Evansville, Ind., they are paying one cent bounty on sparrow heads, and the probability is that the same or other measures will have to be adopted in this State in order to abate the nuisance.

A Decided Improvement.

The bar and reading room of Laing's Hotel have recently been re-fitted and renovated in a thorough and neat manner. The proprietor, Mr. Joseph Miller, has spared no pains to make this house attractive, and his efforts are rewarded by increased custom and friends.

Base Ball.

The Westfield Base Ball Club visited this city during the morning of Decoration Day, and was most thoroughly and completely defeated by the Crescents. Our home nine outplayed the visitors at every point, and in the easiest manner rolled up the following score:

Crescents..	1	6	3	5	2	0	4	5	4—30.
Westfield..	2	1	1	0	0	0	0	0	0— 4.

Arbor Day.

At the meeting of the County Superintendents of public schools, held in Trenton last week, State Superintendent Apgar made a proposition that a day be fixed upon as Arbor day, and on that day school children, having been divided into bands of from 5 to 20, plant a tree for each band in some suitable place, and that each band act as guardians to the trees planted by it. If the suggestions is acted upon we believe the children will heartily enter into the arrangement.

Grove Street Bridge.

The action of the outgoing board of chosen freeholders of Somerset county, at their last meeting in refusing to concur in a resolution passed by the Union county board, which provided that present work on Grove street bridge should cease, and recommending that the structure be removed and a new one built the entire width of the street, is severely commented on by citizens of North Plainfield and this city. The same board also ordered that the bridge be constructed according to the present plans. This action has led to the presentation of a petition to residents of North Plainfield, praying the new board of freeholders to order the bridge constructed the full width of the street. Work has not been resumed on the structure since the above meeting, and it is to be hoped that the Somerset county board will listen to the prayers of the petitioners.

A Novel Procession.

The city of Reading, Pa., was the scene of a novel parade on Saturday, May 19th. It was a procession of a mile in length, composed of progressive, well-to-do farmers of Bucks county, with their farm teams and wagons, each wagon carrying a New Champion Binder, Reaper or Mower for the harvest so near at hand. There were 71 machines in the procession, with the Mayor and many prominent citizens at the head, followed by Ringgold's Band of 26 men.

Berks county is one of the oldest farming communities in the United States, and all kinds of reapers, mowers and binders have been tried and found wanting, until the Champion's were introduced and pronounced after thorough trial deserving of the post of honor.—Reading Times.

C. H. French, Westfield, N. J., is the agent for Champion machines in Union and adjoining counties. They have been sold in this section for the past thirteen years and give almost universal satisfaction for light draught and durability.

The Church Fair.

The Fair given in Saengerbund Hall, three night's last week, in aid of the German church, of this city, was well attended each evening, and, we learn, was successful financially. The ladies who had the Fair in charge acquitted themselves handsomely in the management of the same.

Sermon to Ex-Soldiers.

Trinity Reformed Church was crowded to excess Sunday evening last, to listen to a sermon to veterans of the late war, delivered by the pastor, Rev. A. V. V. Raymond. In the front seats were over 80 members of the G. A. R. in full uniform, who listened attentively to the interesting and affecting sermon.

Muhlenberg Hospital Election.

At the annual meeting of the board of governors of Muhlenberg Hospital held Monday evening, May 28th, 1883, the following officers and committees were duly elected to serve for the ensuing year:

President—John M. Whiton; 1st Vice President—Frederick Chamberlain; 2d Vice President—J. Evarts Tracy; Secretary—Wm. R. Cock; Treasurer—Chas. Schipper.

Managing Committee—Fred'k Chamberlain, Chas. Schipper, W. R. Cock, Chas. H. Smith, W. R. Potts.

Finance Committee—Rev. E. M. Rodman, M. W. Tyler, Chas. Tweedy, E. N. Erickson, Samuel Huntington.

Sunday School Convention.

The First District Convention of the New Jersey State Sunday School Association, for the Second District, comprising the counties of Somerset, Hunterdon, Mercer and Warren, will be held in the Reformed Church, Lebanon, on Tuesday, June 5th. The programme will include Words of Welcome by Rev. C. S. Conkling, and addresses by Rev. J. M. Meeker, Rev. R. G. Reed, Rev. George W. Tomson, Rev. J. Lyman Hulburt, and others. In order to secure a large attendance without overburdening the community, the committee have decided to make this a basket convention. Delegates and friends will take their own lunch, and arrangements will be made for the comfort and convenience of all who attend.

Burned to the Ground.

At 5:30 o'clock on Saturday afternoon, the old-fashioned dwelling house, on Westfield avenue, above the West Elizabeth depot, occupied by Mr. George Townley, caught fire from a spark thrown from a passing locomotive on the Central Railroad. The house being but a few feet from the track, all of Mr. Townley's effects were saved, but the house, which is property of an estate and is insured, was totally destroyed. The Fire Department turned out, but the distance being great, the flames had gained considerable headway when they reached the scene. The scarcity of water was the cause of much annoyance to the firemen, who, after draining a well, were compelled to take water from a small pond near by.—Elizabeth Herald.

The Home Dramatics.

The third entertainment of this local organization was given at Van Deventer Hall, Wednesday evening, before an audience that entirely made up for its size by its enthusiasm. The complete success of the management in arranging a varied programme of excellent quality, and the praiseworthy talent displayed by all the artists who took part, certainly deserved a more extensive patronage; but until this city becomes possessed of a Hall with a suitable stage and auditorium, small audiences must be expected. In their new line of negro minstrelsy, the "Home Dramatics" did exceedingly well, and assisted by specialists imported for the occasion a programme was rendered that Plainfield has seldom seen excelled. May they have better luck next time.

A Fine View.

Hundreds of persons visited Johnston Drive and Washington Rock, back of North Plainfield, on Thursday evening last, to obtain a view from these elevated points, of the fireworks set off on the Brooklyn bridge. Although some 24 miles away, the view from Johnston Drive was splendid. The two massive piers resembled two tall columns of fire, the colors of which were alternately red, blue, green, etc., while from the centre of the span could be seen a continuous discharge of rockets, bombs, etc., which as they burst in the air, brought forth exclamations of "Ah!" "Oh!" from the crowds assembled about the site for the finest view—Vail's Spring. Later, after the fireworks had ceased, the entire length of the vast bridge could be traced from pier to pier, by its string of electric lights. Among other very distinct objects to be seen also, were the electric lights of Madison and Union Squares. The Drive was thronged until after the close of the fireworks exhibition by strings of carriages and pedestrians, a large number of whom were ladies. Johnston Drive is yet destined to be a favorite and valuable site for elegant residences, affording, as it does, its fine view of surrounding country for miles around, while the fine macadamized road bed makes the access to the mountain top an easy one.

Personalia.

John Taylor Johnston, Esq., and family have returned to their summer residence in this city.

Mr. George R. Nichol of Scotch Plains, visited this city, Wednesday, for the first time in two years.

Mrs. L. M. Bullard, of Wellsboro, Tioga county, Pennsylvania, is visiting her mother, Mrs. M. Borst, of Somerset street.

The many friends of "Jimmy" Thorn, are pleased to see him once more at his old post as clerk in Berry & Thorn's hardware store.

Mr. O. T. Roberts, so long and well known a resident of this city, left for Mandan, Dakota, Tuesday, having accepted a lucrative position in the employ of the Northern Pacific R. R., at that place.

A correspondent of the Brooklyn Union claims for Mr. Lemuel W. Serrell, of this city, the honor of first suggesting a suspension bridge over the East River at the site of the present structure.

Councilman Livingston, ex-Councilman Knowland and Mr. W. H. Brower started on Thursday for a two day's fishing excursion at Greenwood Lake. Of course we shall expect some very tall fish stories when they return home.

We received a call on Monday from Mr. D. B. Rogers, a former resident of Plainfield, and now an extensive orange grower of Florida. A specimen of the fruit grown in one of his orchards, lies on our table, in the shape of a mammoth lemon, measuring 15x18 inches in circumference.

The sympathy of a large circle of acquaintances and friends is extended Mr. Alex. Warnock in the loss by death of his wife, which sad event occurred at noon on Tuesday. Mrs. Warnock has been a great sufferer from illness for a long time, and leaves a large family of children, some of whom are very young.

Wm. W. French, a former resident of Westfield, and now Clerk at the Grand Union Hotel, City of Trinidad, Col., sends us a programme containing the names of those who attended the Grand Editorial Dinner given at the Grand Union recently. The list embraces the names of all the prominent Kansas editors.

The Observance of Memorial Day.

Memorial Day, the annual occurrence of which fell this year on Wednesday last, opened bright and fair, but by noon had changed to as uncomfortable a day, with its chilly winds and showers, as could be imagined. The city was decorated with flags hung at half mast, and the post office was closed from morning until evening, and all business in a general way was suspended; but it was not until afternoon that public demonstration and official ceremony united in such an observance of the day has never before been known in Plainfield.

The members of the Winfield Scott Post of the Grand Army of the Republic, recently formed in this city, are to receive the full credit of the success of the affair. Their efforts perfected the arrangements, and accomplished the commendable effect of the complete display and appropriate rites of the occasion.

During the morning a detail from the Post decorated with flowers the graves in such grounds as were not included in the line of march, and at Scotch Plains, also, took part in ceremonies befitting the occasion. At 1 o'clock the procession formed on Front street at the head of Park avenue, and after some delay occasioned by an alarm of fire which called the members of the department from the ranks, the line started under command of Marshall Rufus K. Case, and his assistants W. W. Coriell and J. W. Coddington.

The procession moved along the route as published in our last issue, and in the following order:

Police.
Marshal and aids.
Mayor and Clergymen in carriages.
Common Council in carriages.
Fire Board in carriages.
Band.
Winfield Scott Post No. 73, Grand Army Republic
Wagon with Flowers.
Girls representing the 38 States of the Union.
Plainfield Saenger Bund.
Chief Engineer of Fire Department and Assistants.
Fire Department Organizations.
St. Mary's T. A. B. Society.
Citizens in carriages.

At the different cemeteries visited the G. A. R., ritual was carried out and the little maidens in the procession strewed flowers on the mounds of the graves of the lost heroes. In the City Park a cenotaph was constructed as the empty tomb of those whose burying place was unknown, and the following services were held:

1. Formation of Post.
2. Reading orders from National headquarters by adjutant.
3. Commander's address to Post.
4. Salute to the dead.
5. Address of welcome to friends.
6. Music by band.
7. Decoration of cenotaph, singing by children in semi chorus, and other brief exercises.
8. Prayer by Rev. Mr. Raymond.
9. Singing by children—"God bless our native land."
10. Address by Mayor W. B. Maxson.
11. Song by Saengerbund.
12. Original poem written by Comrade L. V. F. Randolph and read by a comrade.
13. Singing by children—America.
14. Benediction by Rev. Dr. Ketcham.

Mayor Maxson's address was in full as follows:

MAYOR MAXSON'S ADDRESS.

FRIENDS AND FELLOW CITIZENS.—The occasion that calls us together on this day consecrated to a duty born of patriotism and grateful reverence has no similitude in history. It was war. Not between the people of these United States and a foreign power; but a fierce, bloody and deadly conflict between colossal armies of brave Americans, and the question that summoned two millions of soldiers to the field was, Shall these United States of America remain united? Shall this consolidated republic cemented by the blood of the fathers at Lexington, Concord and Bunker Hill, and at Trenton, Brandywine and Saratoga be torn asunder and destroyed, or shall it continue to be the brightest star in the constellation of worldly governments? To the cry of an imperilled union a million of our fellow-citizens sprang to arms. Then from shop and farm, from counting house and office, from the luxuriant homes of the wealthy and the humble homes of the poor came forth the loved, the gifted and the brave to battle, and if need be to die, that in the blessing of an indivisible Union we might live. Do some of you remember how, then, wife and child and sister through blinding tears bade husband, father and brother good-bye, perhaps forever? How from peaceful homes the sons, fair boys, with a father's blessing and a mother's prayer, went forth to war's endurance, suffering and death to vindicate the violated law and the insulted flag of their country. The awful carnage at Gettysburg, the bloody but victorious field of Antietam, the thirty-four thousand lost in the wilderness, the deadly prisons of Andersonville and Libby attested their love for the old flag and loyalty to their country.

The dying patriot on the battle field or in the hospital thought of wife and mother and of child in a far off home, for him no more, and his expiring eyes for the last time rested on the stars and stripes, with a patriot's pride felt, if he could not speak.

"Flag of the free heart's hope and home
By angel hands to valor given,
Thy hues have lit the welkin dome,
And all thy stars were born in Heaven."

The intrepid sailors on six hundred ships of war, braving disease and death in tempest and pestilence, sailing over torpedo death traps and amid shot and shell at New Orleans and Vicksburg, and on the heaving sea in search of privateers, though prostrate with fever still invincible, fought on, thundering from their cannons mouths the just decrees of our people, thinking only of victory or death, bearing in mid air the beautiful emblem of their country over the decks of their gallant craft, and rather than lower it determined to

"Spread all her canvass to the breeze,
Set every thread-bare sail,
And give her to the God of storms,
The lightning and the gale."

Three hundred thousand of the world's heroes lost to our country, a half orphaned and widowed land, and a redeemed republic, resplendent with glory remained. How grand the prize! How great the sacrifice! Where are those heroes now? Go ask of the bloody graves in the nation's sepulchres at Arlington and Gettysburg. The lettered monuments and stones reveal the final bivouac of this dead army, and the names of thousands inscribed on glory's page. They are read with admiration, blended with reverence and grief.

There are acres of mounds covering the remains of hundreds more of these heroic dead. Ask of the towering shaft that shall mark the sacred spot, when Times devastating hand shall have leveled these graves, What hero boy, What soldier brave sleeps here? And the silent answer forever comes "Unknown! Unknown!"

"Where'er we meet the friends once fondly cherished,
And hands all warm with old affection take,
Breathe ye with love the names of those who perished
And sleep in graves unknown for freedom's sake."

"The wooded slope of Chattanooga shadows
The level fields where they repose alone;
In serried rows in Arlington's green meadows
Their headstones speak the one sad word, Unknown."

"In silver tones we hear the bugle blowing
The notes of peace on freedom's natal days,
They hear no more in sweet snare numbers flowing
The strains that raise the patriot heroes praise."

"The west winds blow by Chickamauga river,
The south winds play the Rapidan beside;
But they are dead, and we shall see them never,
Till Heaven's armies follow him who died."

"The blue Potomac hears no battle marches,
On Mission Ridge the fruiting fields increase;
James is closed, and o'er her trembling arches
Stands the White angel of the nation's peace."

"Peace! Let no single love's sweet tear with pity's,
For those who bought the heritage we own,
Who gave their all, and in death's silent cities
Have but the nameless epitaph, Unknown."

This cenotaph, reared by the hands of their surviving comrades, symbolizes those nameless graves. How fitting that those now living of that grand army who stood shoulder to shoulder with them in the long and wearisome marches; who stood side by side with them in battle, amid shrieking shell and leaden hail, and vied with them in the deadly charge, should keep the fire of affection burning on Memory's altar. How touching the tribute to the nobility of the soldier's heart is the change from sabre and rifle and gun, wielded by warrior hands, to sweet flowers strewn on comrades' graves.

Soldiers of the Grand Army! In this sad duty you are still fighting the battles of your country. You are still the tried sentinels around the camp fires of American liberty. In the observance of this funeral day you are linking the unknown soldiers fame to the shaft of immortality.

The incense of the flowers you spread to-day rise to the grateful senses of spirit battalions, warriors now no more, but at rest in eternal peace. Commemorative meetings and exercises attesting the triumphs of genius, the anniversaries of victory in war, the great events affecting the political status of mankind are celebrated with pride and joyful procession with booming cannon, waving banners, the rocket's red glare and loud huzzahs. These are the congratulations of glad hearts over the triumphs and successes of warriors, statesmen and scholars. Here no triumphal processions or floating flag is seen, no martial strains or songs of joy are heard over the grandest victory of the republic. Only (with hearts not less grateful) to the tune of funeral dirge, with solemn tread, we come to the graves to honor the dead defenders of a nation's faith, who died before their victory was won.

To them be all honor. No chiseled stone tells where they lie, except the word, "Unknown."

"The lightning may flash, the loud cannon rattle,
They hear not, they heed not,
They're free from all pain,
They sleep their last sleep,
They have fought their last battle,
No sound can awake them to glory again."

The following is an English translation of the song of the Saengerbund:

Heart, what troubles thee? What troubles thee?
Peace descends a gentle shower into every troubled breast,
Merciful in heaven's power sending joy and grief and rest.
Peace the starry host is guiding Thro' a ceaseless harmony.
Hope and Faith and Love are e'er abiding.
Say, O heart, what troubles thee?

Say, why weepest thou? Why weepest thou?
As the fullness of the spring-tide falls a prey to autumn's breath,
So in dust thy lov'd are gather'd by relentless, cruel death.
Still, as one by one they sever, Hope this comfort gives thee now:
Meeting yonder, yea, to live for ever!
Say, O heart, who weepest thou?

Comrade L. V. F. Randolph who was granted a leave of absence with the understanding that he would contribute an original poem for the occasion, contributed the following, which was effectively read by comrade E. C. Morse:

HYMN FOR DECORATION DAY, 1883.

Praise God, my comrades, for the peace
You toiled and fought so hard to win!
You firmly stood through dread increase
Of danger, death and battle din.
You waited but the brave command—
Nor looks nor blanched when changed the foe,
Yours were the deeds that saved the land—
The deeds of twenty years ago.

Nor yours alone—beneath this sod,
Which now you love to decorate,
Sleep well the brave, who feared but God;
Who calmly, bravely met their fate.
With yours their hearts with patriot fire
Were in the darkest days aglow,
Its sacred flame ne'er mounted higher
Than just a score of years ago.

For thirty millions' rights they fought—
Now fifty millions bless the dead;
And countless freemen's lives are fraught
With joys for which our heroes bled.
With happier hearts we visit now
Their graves, than when we left them low
Stifling the tears—God knoweth how—
Which started twenty years ago.

This May Day, bright with peace, is far
More joyous than the time of yore,—
For bloom of peace from waste of war,
GIVER OF ALL, we THEE adore!
God keep us free from strife at home!
God save us from the foreign foe!
But give us, if the strife must come,
The souls of twenty years ago!

The Central Railroad.

The New York Sun says that at a meeting of the directors of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, held on Saturday last, Receiver Little announced that there had been deposited with him collateral sufficient to secure him as against the floating debt of the company. He said that the collaterals were satisfactory to him and to the Chancellor, and that, as all of the conditions of the Chancellor's order dissolving the receivorship had been complied with, he would, under a final and explicit order from the Court, turn the property of the company over to the company through the directors who were present.

It is understood that Mr. Little will retain the office of President of the company, and will be the active, working manager of the property under the lease to the Philadelphia and Reading. The injunction against the lease obtained by Mr. Joseph W. Burnham, one of the holders of the income bonds, was discussed, and full powers were given to the officers of the company to defend the suit which has since been adjusted.

The report of ex-Gov. Joseph D. Bedle, the special master appointed by the Chancellor to investigate the affairs of the company in the matter of the petition for a dissolution of the receivorship, puts the floating debt at $2,062,000, consisting in part of the following obligations: To Adams Express Company, $250,000; National City Bank, New York, $300,000; American Exchange Bank, New York, $200,000; State Bank of Elizabeth, $100,000; National Park Bank, New York, $150,000; Trenton Banking Company, $100,000; Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank, $50,000 and C. Smith & Sons, $400,000. The current expense accounts, pay rolls, &c., amount to about $700,000. The exact amount cannot, of course, be determined. The same is true of contingent liabilities on account of accidents, contracts, &c., and interests on income bonds.

The company has unencumbered assets of the nominal value of $4,907,208. Of the assets $2,353,000 are Lehigh and Wilkesbarre second series income bonds, which at present have no market value. The other assets are estimated to be worth about $1,500,000. The results of the operations of the year 1882 are given as follows: Gross earnings, $11,312,296; operating expenses, $6,321,225; net earnings, $5,091,071; interest, rentals, and taxes, $4,823,794, leaving a surplus of $267,276. In January and February of the present year the road was operated at a loss of $26,042.

FIRE MATTERS.

The members of Newark's favorite Fire Company, "Minnehaha, No. 1," are jubilant over the fact that at last the city authorities have renovated and re-painted and papered the inside rooms of their engine house in a fine manner. The "Minnies" are gallant fire laddies, and number among their friends many Plainfield firemen.

Some empty boxes and rubbish in the rear of Rockfellow's grocery at the corner of Park and North avenues, caught fire from a locomotive spark, Wednesday afternoon, and the engines were promptly on hand to check the conflagration. The fire was put out, however, without the steamer's assistance and the damage that might have followed if the event had occurred during the night, was thus prevented.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

"A Druggist's Story. Mr. Isaac C. Chapman, Druggist, Newburg, N. Y., writes us: "I have for the past ten years sold several gross of Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs. I can say of it what I cannot of any other medicine. I have never heard a customer speak of it but to praise its virtues in the highest manner. I have recommended it in a great many cases of Whooping Cough with the happiest effects. I have used it in my own family for many years; in fact, always have a bottle in the medicine closet ready for use."

Phalon's Night Blooming Cereus. You remember this delightful perfume of a dozen years ago? It is just as fragrant as ever. All Phalon's perfumes and preparations, including the Vitalia and Hair Invigorator, are made by the Manhattan Med. Co., New York.

A vigorous growth of hair is promoted and the youthful color restored by applying Parker's Hair Balsam.

Oh, what a cough!—Will you heed the warning. The signal perhaps of the sure approach of that more terrible disease Consumption. Ask yourself if you can afford for the sake of saving 50 cents, to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will Cure your Cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a Million Bottles were sold the past year. It relieves Croup, and Whooping Cough at once. Mothers do not be without it. For Lame Back, Side, or Chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by R. J. Shaw.

Dyspepsia & Liver Complaint—Is it not worth the small price of 75 cents to free yourself of every symptom of these distressing complaints. If you think so call at our store and get a bottle of Shiloh's Vitalizer. Every bottle has a printed guarantee on it, use accordingly and if does you no good it will cost you nothing. Sold by R. J. Shaw.

We have a speedy and positive Cure, for Catarrh, Diphtheria, Canker mouth and Head Ache, in Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy. A nasal injector free with each bottle. Use it if you desire health and sweet breath. Price 50 cents. Sold by R. J. Shaw.

A Lawyer's Testimony. During eight years my attacks of dyspepsia were so terrible that I often had to stop business. Parker's Ginger Tonic built me up from chronic skeleton to the perfect health I now enjoy. J. Atkinson, Lawyer, N. Y. city.

Don't die in the house. "Rough on Rats." Clears out rats, mice, roaches, bed-bugs, flies, ants, moles, chipmunks, gophers. 15c.

CONCORD GRAPE VINES.—Fine, vigorous Vines, two, three and four years' old, for sale by the dozen or thousand at the lowest prices. These Vines are raised on the famous Mt. Prospect Vineyards, at Passaic, New Jersey, where the well-known Port Grape Wine is produced that is so highly esteemed at Dresden and Berlin, and other European cities to which it is shipped, and that is so highly esteemed by physicians everywhere. Address, ALFRED SPEER, Passaic, N. J.

Decline of Man. Nervous Weakness, Dyspepsia, Impotence, cured by "Wells' Health Renewer." $1.

A dangerous counterfeit. There are dangerous counterfeits in circulation purporting to be "Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer." The strongest evidence of its great value is the fact that parties knowing its great efficacy try to imitate it. Each bottle of the genuine has a fac simile of a walnut leaf—blown in the glass; and a Green Leaf on the outside wrapper. The "Restorer" is as harmless as water, while it possesses all the properties necessary to restore life, vigor, growth and color to the hair. Purchase only from responsible parties. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. Johnson, Holloway & Co., Philadelphia, and Hall & Ruckel, New York, wholesale agents.

Wells' "Rough on Corns." Ask for Wells' "Rough on Corns." 15c. Quick, complete, permanent cure. Corns, warts, bunions.

A Good Investment. My wife told I was a fool when I brought home a bottle of Parker's Ginger Tonic. But when it broke up my cough and cured her neuralgia and baby's dysentery she thought it a good investment.—N. Y. Tailor.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

IN A SLEEPING CAR.

"My dear," said Mr. Spoopendyke, ramming his arm up to his ear in the family traveling bag, "say, my dear, where is my night-shirt? Don't you know what you did with my nocturnal garment when you packed this measly grip-sack?"

"Isn't it there?" asked Mrs. Spoopendyke, holding the curtains together with one hand while she tried to do up her back hair with the other.

"I suppose it is," growled Mr. Spoopendyke, tumbling the things all over the lower berth. "It must be there, it isn't here! Did you bring any sleeping raiment for me, or have I got to roost on the edge of this berth with my head under my arm, like a dodgasted cooing dove, all night? What's this thing, anyway? Any mate to this?" and Mr. Spoopendyke unloaded a short sleeved garment with frills around the watch pockets. "I suppose this had to come even if I stayed home! couldn't you have rented this out and brought me something to sleep in?" and Mr. Spoopendyke fired the obnoxious article into the upper berth and continued his explorations.

"I'm sure I put a night-shirt in for you," murmured Mrs. Spoopendyke, clenching her hair in her teeth and making a dive for the valise. "It must be in there somewhere."

"How many of these does it take to make a pair?" demanded Mr. Spoopendyke, drawing out four or five stockings of different colors and designs. "Maybe that's it," and he grabbed another mystery and examined it intently. "Did I have any night-shirts made of wire? Got tired of starching the measly things, and now you put in springs to hold it out, dont you?"

"Let it alone! That's mine!" squealed Mrs. Spoopendyke. "I'll find your night-shirt for you, if you'll let things be! and she fumbled around in the bag in fruitless search for the missing garment. "Don't hurry me, dear, and I'll find it, if you'll give me time."

"I s'pose you want to give your notes for it, don't ye?" squealed Mr. Spoopendyke, tipping the satchel upside down and rummaging around among the lares and penates his wife had spent a day in packing. "Want thirty, sixty and ninety days and a couple of extensions on that night-shirt, don't ye? Get me pen, ink and paper!" he roared, seating himself on the side of the berth and glaring at his wife. "Develop the measly stationery and let us conclude this dodgasted mercantile transaction. Thirty days after date I promise to pay to one Spoopendyke a pair of sleeves and a collar! Sixty days after date I promise to pay the same Spoopendyke one back and one stomach! Ninety days after date I promise to pay the identical Spoopendyke one good and lawful undivided night-shirt tall of the realm! Who's your indorser? Bring into my presence the millionaire who secures these negotiable instruments!" and, foaming at the mouth, Mr. Spoopendyke went for the bag again and turned it inside out. "This is cash!" he yelled. "Get me my cash night-shirt before the rest of these passengers begin to think a soda fountain has burst in this sleeping section!"

"I don't know—" sighed Mrs. Spoopendyke.

"Oh, ye don't!" howled Mr. Spoopendyke. "Ye don't know! If we could only put sleeves and a button-hole into what you don't know, it would make night-shirts for the teeming millions of this measly vale of tears. Where'd ye put it? What was the geographical location of that night-shirt in its relation to that bag when ye let go of the dodgasted thing?"

"As near as I can remember, it was on the top," ruminated Mrs. Spoopendyke, trying to recollect if she might not have left it on the bed in the hurry of getting away. "I'm pretty sure I put it on the top of the satchel."

"Then let me grapple the top pervaded by the late lamented night-shirt!" snorted Mr. Spoopendyke. "Place within my jurisdiction the measly top we long have sought and mourned because we found it not. Dazzle my vision with a smoked-glass glimpse of that radiant top. Is this it?" and Mr. Spoopendyke grabbed a corset waist and dangled it before his wife's eyes.

"That isn't yours," exclaimed Mrs Spoopendyke, snatching it out of his hand. "If you hadn,t upset everything here, I'd have found it long ago. I think—"

"There it is!" howled Mr. Spoopendyke. "You think! And when you commence to think, you only want an impediment in your speech and a wart on your nose to be an Academy of Sciences."

"Say dear," pleaded Mrs. Spoopendyke, "couldn't you wear one of mine just for this once?"

"Certainly!" yelled Mr. Spoopendyke. "Give me that enameled one with flounces on the chest and hemstitched arm-holes. I think, my dear," he continued, as he stepped into the garment as though it were a pair of trousers, "I think it is going to be a little short in the legs."

"Those are the sleeves," moaned Mrs Spoopendyke. "I don't believe you can get your arms in them, but I could tie them around your neck and the skirts would keep you warm enough until morning."

"That's the idea," yelled Mr. Spoopendyke. "Where's my night-shirt?"

"Here it is," smiled Mrs. Spoopendyke, who had unearthed it from under his overcoat. "I put it out for you, and when you came, you threw your overcoat on top of it."

"Why didn't you say so at first," growled Mr. Spoopendyke. "What d'ye want to disturb the whole car for? Another time you pack up to go traveling, you put things where you find 'em, or hereafter you will do most of your traveling between the front door and the back windows to see if I'm coming home," and Mr. Spoopendyke growled himself to sleep.

"I don't care," murmured Mrs. S. putting her shoes carefully under the pillow so they wouldn't stick out and show the other women in the car what size she wore. "I don't care. He might have asked for his library, or a step-ladder, and then I would have been in trouble. I think I was fortunate that it was only his night-shirt," and with this consoling reflection the good woman crawled into bed and lay awake half the night to find out if any one in her vicinity was in the habit of snoring.

Plain fabrics for the waist and drapery with the figured goods for the lower skirt, is the rule for imported Spring and Summer suits.

There is a new fancy for putting braid on a material different in color from that of the dress, and then applying the braided piece to the dress.

Black tulle and lace dresses elaborately made, and without any white about the neck and arms, bring out the delicate tints of a fair complexion and light hair.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE BOARD OF CHOSEN FREEHOLDERS.

The total amount now due without interest is [illegible], this is from Rahway and Summit.

The amount due from Summit is [illegible] on old accounts, this is a reduction of [illegible] since last May.

[illegible] The tax levy for 1882 was:

For State Tax	[illegible]
For School Tax	[illegible]
For County Tax	[illegible]
Total levy	[illegible]

[illegible]

It is evident that the first monies collected have not been paid to the state and county in accordance with the law, and it is often claimed that the law is harsh and unjust, [illegible]

Very respectfully,
C. W. L. MARTINE, Director.

On motion received and ordered spread upon the minutes.

Which was carried.

The Director declared the Board adjourned to Thursday, June 7th, 1883, at 2 o'clock p. m.

JOHN L. CROWELL, Clerk.

FASHION NOTES.

Vests are much worn.

Sleeves remain of the close coat shape.

Lower or foundation skirts remain very narrow.

A new woolen stuff for dresses is called beigette.

Inch-wide velvet ribbon is the favorite for trimming.

Cashmeres and silks are again trimmed with velvet ribbons.

Dresses of last year can be easily altered into the new styles.

Most of the important costumes show combinations of two materials.

Soutache braid will be much used in palms and in parallel materials.

Velvet ribbon will be used in great quantities on box-pleated skirts.

The new goods show plain grounds, blocks, checks, small broken plaids, etc.

Some new dresses are made entirely of woolen stuff or of light twilled camel's hair.

Velvet is very popular for the small accessories of a costume, such as collars, cuffs, etc.

Buttons are small and inconspicuous, and are no longer used for show, but simply for service.

Handsome French dresses are trimmed with braid of palm leaves ten or twelve inches long.

Ottoman velvet, very thickly ribbed, is the newest fabric for combining with cloth and cashmere.

Overskirts are voluminous in breadth, but there is a tendency to shorten draperies, both in front and back.

Palm leaves have come into vogue again, and promise to supersede wheels and frogs both in passementerie and in soutache braiding.

HERE AT LAST.
AFTER LONG AND WEARY WAITING RELIEF IS BROUGHT TO THOSE WHO NEED IT.
"Well, Pat," said an Orange county Physician to a complaining Irish patient some years ago, "for that pain in your chest you had better go home and put on a mustard plaster. I can't think this minute of anything better. And by the way," added the doctor turning to a friend, "I wish somebody would invent a real good plaster—something actually helpful for such cases as Pat's. Maybe they will sometime, when its too late for me to see it."
When BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER was placed on the market about ten years ago the doctor's hope became a fact. [illegible] Price 25 cents. In the middle of the genuine is cut the word CAPCINE.

LEGAL NOTICES.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.—To John T. Cornell, executor, etc., of Gershom B. Smith, deceased. Take Notice: That by virtue of an order made on the day of the date hereof in the above stated court in a cause therein pending wherein the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States are complainants and you and others are defendants, you are required to appear and plead, answer or demur to the bill of the complainant on or before the

THIRTIETH DAY OF JUNE NEXT,

or such decree shall be made against you as the Chancellor shall deem equitable and just.

The said bill is filed to foreclose a mortgage made by Sidney Baylor and wife and William S. Baylor to the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, on property at Westfield, Union county, New Jersey, and you are made party defendant because Gershom B. Smith is alleged to have held a subsequent mortgage on said property at the time of his death and you as his executor may claim some interest therein.

SHERIFF'S SALE.—In Chancery of New Jersey—Between Augustus K. Gale, Complainant, and George Gilby et al, defendants. Fi fa for sale of mortgaged premises.

By virtue of the above stated writ of fieri facias to me directed, I shall expose for sale by public vendue, at the Court House, in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., on WEDNESDAY, THE THIRTEENTH DAY OF JUNE, A. D., 1883.

At two o'clock in the afternoon of said day, all that tract or parcel of land and premises hereinafter particularly described situate, lying and being in the township of Westfield, in the county of Union and State of New Jersey:

Beginning at a point in the northerly line of North avenue, distant two hundred and sixty feet from the south-westerly line of Clark street; thence southerly two hundred feet to line of Central Rail Road of New Jersey; thence along said railroad line westerly fifty feet; thence northerly parallel to the first mentioned line two hundred feet to North avenue and thence easterly along said avenue fifty feet to the place of beginning.

Being designated as lot No. four (4) in Block "B" on Map of Lands of Charles Clark, deceased in Westfield, Union County, New Jersey.

Surveyed August 17, 1869, by J. M. C. Marsh, Surveyor, and filed in the office of the clerk of Union County aforesaid, February 24th, 1870 and the premises described in a certain deed given by William N. Randolph and wife to Charles W. Boote, dated April 26th, 1871, and recorded in [illegible] Union County Clerk's office in Book [illegible] of deeds for said county on pages [illegible] etc., and by the said Charles Boote conveyed to the said George Gilby.

LEGAL NOTICES.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY—To Sidney Baylor, Amanda, his wife, and William S. Baylor. Take Notice: That by virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey made on the day of the date hereof in a cause therein pending wherein the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States are complainants and you and others are defendants, you are required to appear and plead, answer or demur to the bill of the said complainants on or before the

SIXTEENTH DAY OF JULY NEXT:

or in default thereof such decree shall be made against you as the Chancellor shall deem equitable and just. The said bill is filed to foreclose a mortgage made by you to the said complainants on lands at Westfield, Union county, New Jersey, and you are made parties defendant because you may still claim some interest in said lands.

AMERICAN DUTY.

There is a vast gulf between a Monarchy and a Republic.

One rules the people and the other is ruled by the people.

Monarchy, for its own selfish preservation, must create and uphold special and unjust privileges.

Republics, if loyal to their purpose, cannot waver from the rigid observance of equal and exact justice to every individual citizen, irrespective of worldly condition.

Monarchy terms and treats the people as subjects.

Republics glory in popular sovereignty and own no King but the Great Jehovah.

The gulf between the two, we repeat, is vast.

Monarchy is of the cloud darkened past. The tendency of this enlightened age is for the invigorating sunshine of Republican Government.

Hence the rumbling of discontent throughout Europe, the plots and counter-plots of the down-trodden masses.

Explosions will come and continue until the infamous system of tyrannizing over the many for the voluptuous emolument of the few is blown into atoms.

That is its ultimate fate.

The hand-writing is on the wall.

As citizens of the great Republic of the West we have responsible duties to discharge.

Example is powerful.

Let us through patriotic devotion and watchful care make the Republic of Washington stronger as the years fleet by.

Let us discard as rank treason everything that impairs in the least degree freedom and equity, pure representative action, and the right of all the people to attain and enjoy honor, happiness and prosperity.

Let us, in a word, show with increasing clearness that man is capable of self government and that Heaven designs he should no longer be a vassal.

Then will the peaceful influence of this country permeate the world of mankind, and liberated millions, as they trample under foot the last vestiges of cruel despotism, will blend with prayer and praise the name of Republican America.

HARVARD vs BUTLER.

The refusal of Harvard to bestow the customary degree of LL. D on the Governor of Massachusetts, because the present incumbent of that honorable position is Benjamin F. Butler, inflicts, as every act of mere personal enmity surely does, disgrace only upon its author or authors.

The insult hurled at Governor Butler, while creating for him widely extended public sympathy, will justly recoil and bruise Harvard. It is proper to say that eleven of the twenty-five Overseers of the College voted in favor of the time sanctioned usage of honoring the Chief Magistrate of the Commonwealth.

If the intended slight was born of aristocracy and political hate, the Governor being a Democrat, then infamy darkens the deed.

If designed to brand the Governor as a person incompetent to wear the title of Doctor of Laws, the majority of the Board of Overseers have certainly proclaimed themselves ignoramuses, for whatever other objections may be urged against Benjamin F. Butler, no truthful and intelligent man will deny to him the possession of intellectual abilities of the highest order.

Harvard sports the black eye.

The safeguard of freedom abides in maintaining the equal rights of all the people, whether high or low, rich or poor.

Constitutionally, public money cannot be converted into private gratuities with any more show of right than private property can be taken without just compensation for public use.

The laboring man, toiling hard to earn a dollar or two per day, is entitled to as much legal protection and as free an opportunity to prosper in his sphere of life as the grasping monopolist who counts his daily income by the thousands.

To raise the amount of revenue required to meet the interest on the national debt, and for the actual wants of government, will necessitate the levying of duties amply sufficient to protect every legitimate American industry. All talk to the contrary is groundless.

Masonic Matters.

On Tuesday last the Council of Deliberation, of the State of New York, Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite Masons, met in Masonic Temple, New York city, and transacted considerable business of particular interest pertaining to this rite.

On Tuesday evening, June 5th, the Lodge of Perfection of New York city, A. A. S. R., exemplified the 5th Degree, known as that of Perfect Master. Before the Council of Deliberation, there was a large attendance, and the officers ably filled their respective stations and were highly complimented.

The Imperial Council, Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine for the U. S. of America, met in annual session on Wednesday last in Masonic Temple, New York city. After reading the reports of its officers and committees—showing its sound financial and numerical strength, also its wholesome growth within the past year—they again unanimously re-elected Walter M. Fleming, M. D., as M. Ill. Grand Potentate.

Saturday evening, June 16th, the Council Princes of Jerusalem 16°, of New York city, A. A. S. R., will hold its regular session for the last time previous to the Summer vacation and will exemplify the Historical Degree. Prince of Jerusalem in full form under the direction of:

Chas. W. Torrey, M. D. as Zerubabel.
S. D. Affleck, " High Priest.
Ex-Judge Samuel Jones " King Darius.
Joseph M. Levey, " King Cyrus.

Several solos will be introduced during the rendition of the work, by Prof. Bergstein and other members of the quartette.

On Wednesday last, the Masonic Grand Lodge, of N. Y. State elected the following named officers for the ensuing year: R. W., J. Edward Simmons, Grand Master; R. W. William A. Brodie, Deputy Grand Master; R. W. John W. Vrooman, Senior Grand Warden; R. W. John Ten Eyck, Junior Grand Warden; R. W. John Boyd, Grand Treasurer; R. W. E. L. M. Ehlers, Grand Secretary.

MR. SAMUEL HELLER, the tailor, has left Madison and taken a situation in Plainfield, New Jersey. Mr. Heller is a young man who is bound to make his mark. He has hosts of friends here who wish him every success.—Madison Herald.

The Society of Friends.

In speaking of the recent Yearly meeting of the Society of Friends recently held in New York city, the Commercial truly says: "Amidst the noisy wrangle of religious polemics and constantly recurring battles between religious sects and disaffected members thereof it is a pleasure to contemplate the calm and unruffled deliberations of a people who of all other religious denominations in this county have pursued the even tenor of their way. No note of disaffection has ever emanated from Quaker walls. Where their meeting places stand there peace abides, and love and industry and cleanliness go hand in hand. Were the entire world under the religious and social control of the Society of Friends there would be no strife. War would vanish from the face of the earth like the roll of the tempest from the mighty sea, and industry and thrift would join with virtue in purifying the face of nature. It is seldom that the Quakers obtrude their affairs upon the public gaze, or make display of their principal occasions or celebrations. No better people are to be found in this country than the Quakers, and their deliberations are at all times interesting to the people at large all over the civilized world."

FOUR out of the eight assessors of Elizabeth have resigned their positions. Consequently no quorum of the Board of Assessors can be procured, on whom to serve a mandamus.
